NORTHERNER

Okay everybody—READ THIS!!

First off—understand that the book is divided into two main sections: the bounded and boundless.

The bounded division deals with the traditions of school, the expected and the more structured. Most classes we take and activities that happen almost every year. This means things such as Senior Slop Day, football games, the can drive, the councils and chemistry.

The boundless section is what is the not so traditional part of school. Travel, parties, the alternative education program. Sports not quite so ordinary—hiking, skiing, camping, flying. And performances.

Separating these two sections are the people of NC. Right smack in the middle of the bounded and boundless. The faculty start this section since they really are bound by the school; the seniors come last 'cause they are the closest to breaking away from the school and its restrictions.

Tarzan—NO! It's the Super Panther getting school spirit off the ground.

"The curse of the purse!" And so exclaims Barb Eusey to friends Missy Colley and Donna Batten.

Let's face it. We're all different. But what do you expect? NC students come from all over and so backgrounds naturally are diverse. Boundaries have ways of separating us at every turn: male or female? black or white? church or temple? There are intellectuals and athletes. There are those who stay from 8:30 til 4:00 and those who cut out at 10:30. There are Republicans, Democrats, Socialists, and Communists. There are t-shirts and jeans along with long dresses and occasional tuxes. The differences go on and on.

"Go on—talk to him! He's on the phone!"

Dude - like I've told Danny, I've known you for a long time AND I hope we stay friends for a long, long time! We did a REALLY GOOD JOB on THE BAWQU

JEANS!

TUXES?

Wonder what Ginny Henry is so happy about? Could be that Friday's finally arrived.

"No, a little more to the left." Two sophomores exchange schedules during orientation.

From the look on his face, the last bet Junior Scott Forbes placed was a bit hard to swallow.

Chalk up another one for algebra as Pete Meginnis stays a little after class to discuss problems with Mr. Fischer.

BOUNDARIES ARE

But once school really begins, it's amazing how things start happening to help us forget those differences. Schedules get really messed up ("They're crazy! They gave me Latin 5, and I take French!") Fans get together to cheer at games. (North Central High School (grr-eat!) Homework is given; more homework is given; and MORE homework is given. And then the pop quizzes start. More and more gets going after a while, and we all grow together a bit more. All those differences just don't seem to matter anymore; those differences, those BOUNDARIES, become, well, BOUNDLESS.

"Baby Face" looking wide eyed now—but in a few short years she'll be leading her sister through the student center.

Blowing his heart out, Steve Harre plays with his head up knowing he's part of a winning team.

"It's got to come off," says Kyle Lanham cutting up with Sandy Over and Steve Wolf.

BOUNDLESS

Potato chips and apples: quite a diet for Leslie Shaw, Michelle Hoffman, and Terri Elliot!

AFS student Sissi Neumeister arrives in Indianapolis to meet her new "family."

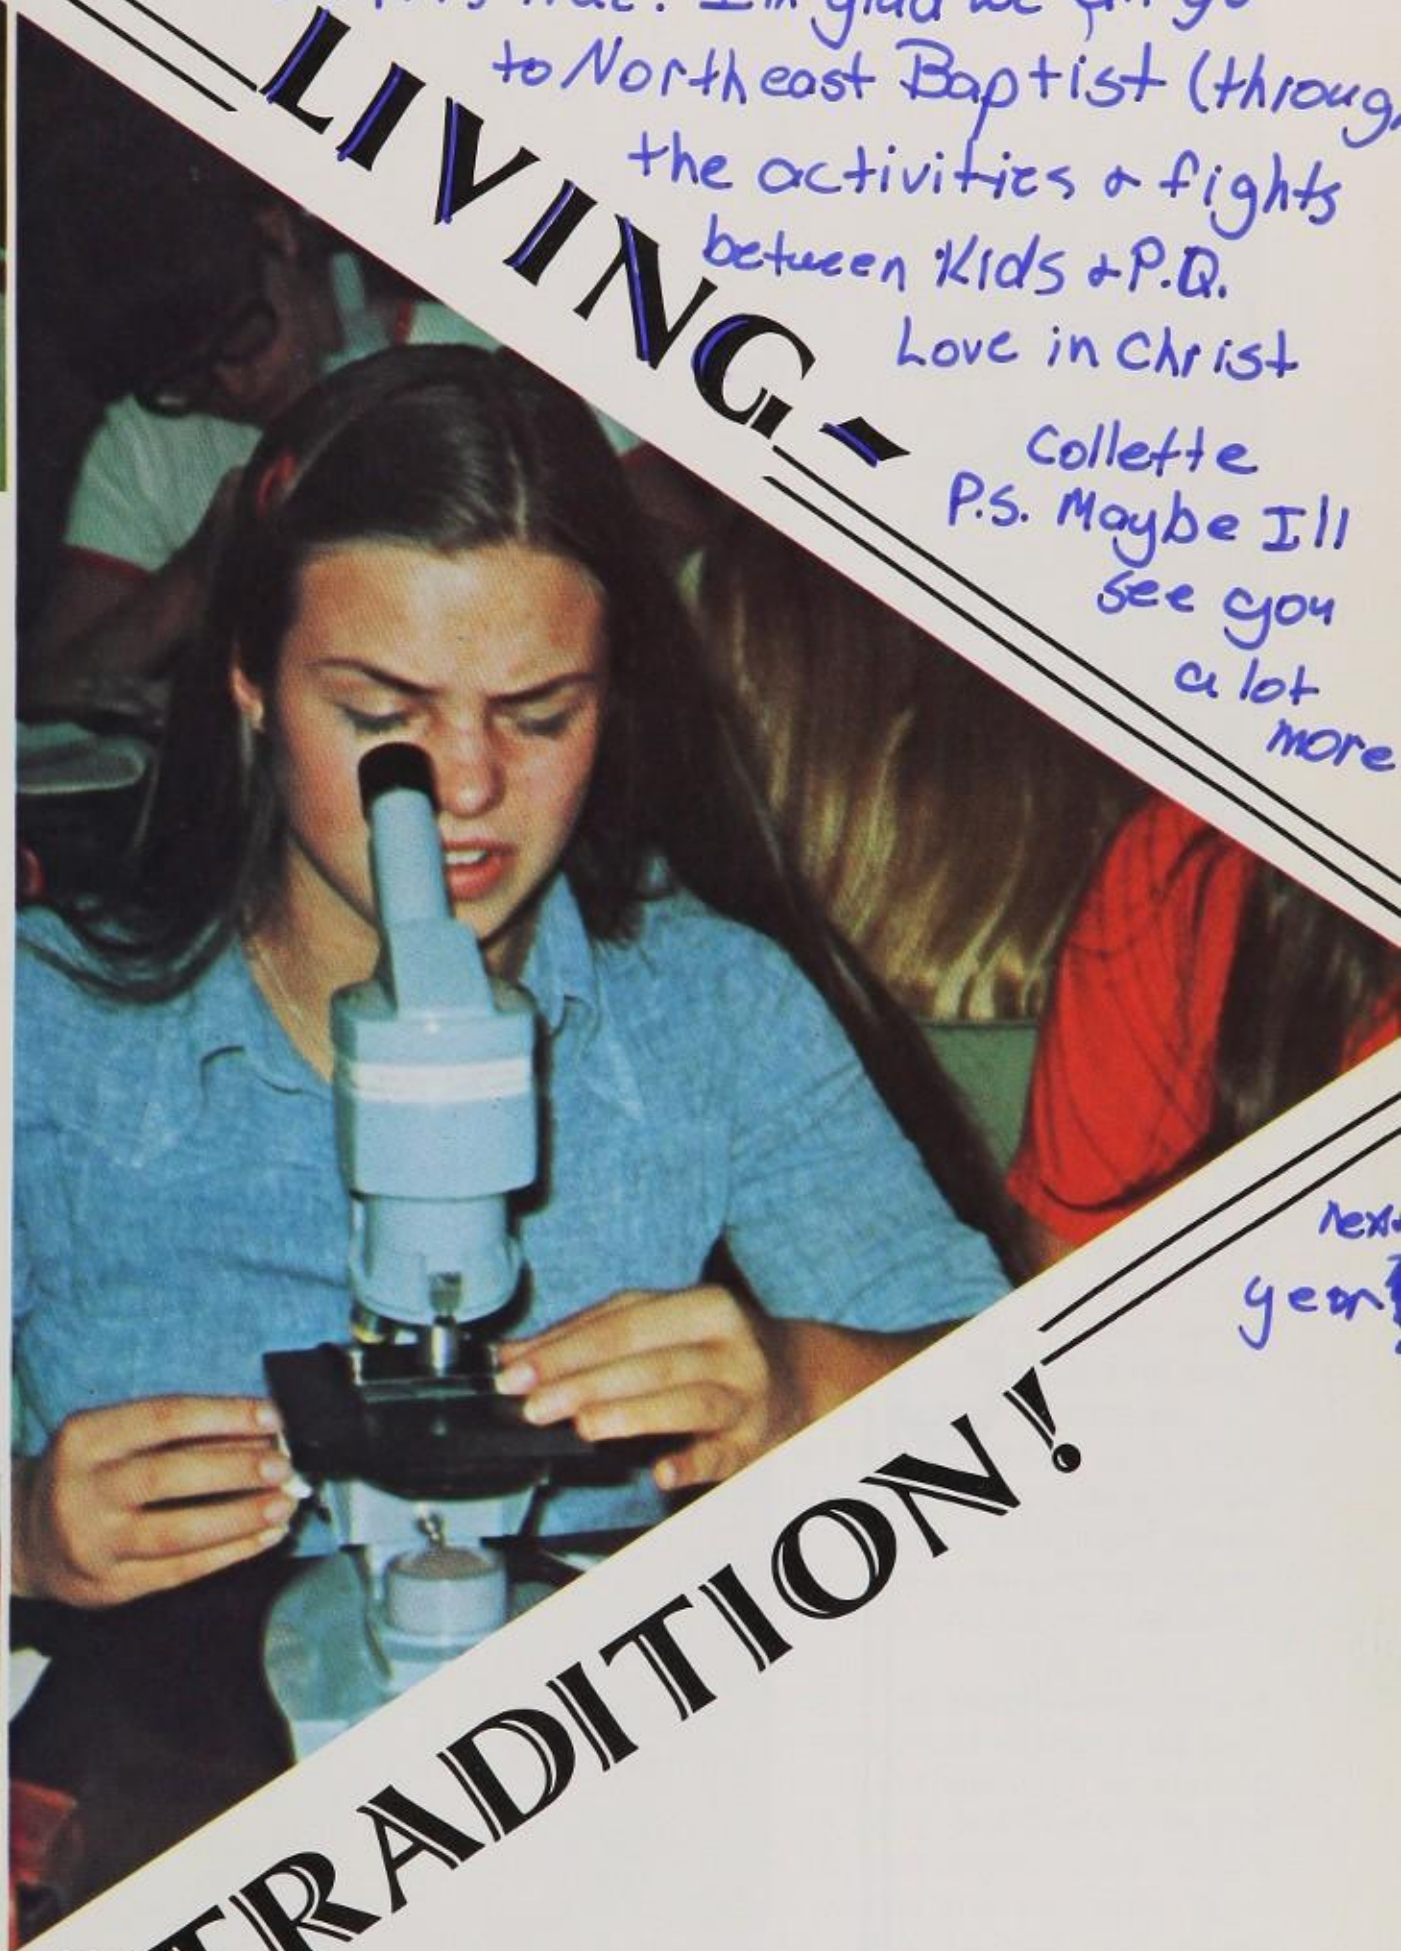

John Feighner of Brown University gives an application to Senior Ann Satchwill.

Student differences are pulled together into the boundaries of school.

As the learning starts, the strangers of the classrooms begin to warm to each other. The burdens of homework and the panic of tests bring students closer. Acquaintances are formed.

The cafeteria, student center, and parking lots are all meeting grounds. Homerooms vote for student council reps. Honor societies grow as new brains come to NC. NFL debates are deliberated. ROTC columns take form. School life begins to pick up.

Squinting does help Amy Truesdell focus in on her subject for botany.

The banquet really went off well. You were a real good Miss Hope So! I didn't see you much at all in school (though I wanted to) You are a really nice Kid that's sounds dumb but it is true! I'm glad we all go to Northeast Baptist (through the activities & fights between kids & P.Q. Love in Christ

CONGREGATE

"You'd better write that down." Hal Justice gets a party address from Dave Dyar.

Everybody uses the phones, and Marti Mark does too. (Good luck hearing the other guy!)

It's a good thing Stacy Maurer doesn't have a top locker.

Groups always form in the student center. Cathy Nemec keeps everybody smiling.

The student center fills with weird people on Senior Slop Day.

Kyle Henderson and Peg Stamper—with these two, always the right combination.

The student center is where everything comes together.

The student center during passing periods is stuffed full of kids. Some go trucking right through just like it was a hall; but other people go there to see their friends and gossip and relax. After the bell rings, the whole place looks evacuated; and if it doesn't, the teachers make sure it soon does. There are a couple of kids who straggle through, but they have passes.

Lunch fills the place up again. Conglomerates of kids form here and there and hundreds of things get talked about. There are newspapers, tickets, cans, T-shirts, and Career Center TV shows.

The halls get people where they're going—they could anyway if the people didn't get slammed or shoved down the wrong one. There is the time factor too; kids only have five minutes to get pushed and scrunched down the right hall to the right class and still be on time.

The student center is the place where everything comes together, and the halls will get ya there.

EACH & EVERY ONE

Kids "crowd" into the student center each and every day. What a racket!

With a population of over 3700 students milling around North Central at various times of the day, there is a strong probability that at one time or another, you will become "one of the crowd."

A crowd isn't just a bunch of people. There are friends, acquaintances, and enemies; boyfriends, girlfriends and "hopefuls"; tall, short, happy and sad. A crowd is a kaleidoscope. Its members wear all colors imaginable: grass green, jean blue, sun yellow, and (get this) fire engine red. A crowd might be a bunch (no dummy, not a bunch of bananas), but it is made of individuals—that means YOU!

Crowds gather at the games! The people unite to support their team with cheers, shouts and screams. Everyone gets caught up in the excitement of it all and the separates melt to form a single whole.

What a riot! In a crowd individual reactions are expressed as a whole.

There are so many faces and expressions to see in a crowd.

In a crowd there are many focuses of attention. April Thurston's is the camera.

The teachers' band attracted quite a crowd at the Homecoming Pep session.

"Pigging out" royally, Dave Manning and John Cotfield sure stuff it in.

Cathy and Laura Maxwell share "corny" jokes at the Rockville Covered Bridge Festival in Billie Creek Village.

EAT IT!

"What does that taste like?" asks Paula Patton and Karen Spiegel.

No, he's not dunking for apples; Jont Rogers is just hamming it up.

Food, glorious Food! Morning, mid-day and evening the hunger pangs hit. The rush-for the kitchen, cafeterias, or dining room is on. Diets permitting, we eat our hearts out!

Where do we get this basic substance? At school, the snack bar, the chow house, the Pizza Pub, Burger Chef, and even, on special occasions Meridian Hills or La Tour. It ranges from cafeteria food to cokes and hamburgers to Filet Mignon and a pig with an apple in his mouth.

Food can be a basic source of income. Clubs and the band can make a "mine" out of gold bars. Bubble gum sales are "blowing" out of proportion. Everyone is a "sucker" for Charms Pops.

Alimento, nourriture, essen, or just plain old American food—we eat it, we love it, and we can't live without it!

Barely able to contain herself, Angie Hudson can't wait to eat.

"HAPPY HOMECOMING" is the message "behind" this half-time performance.

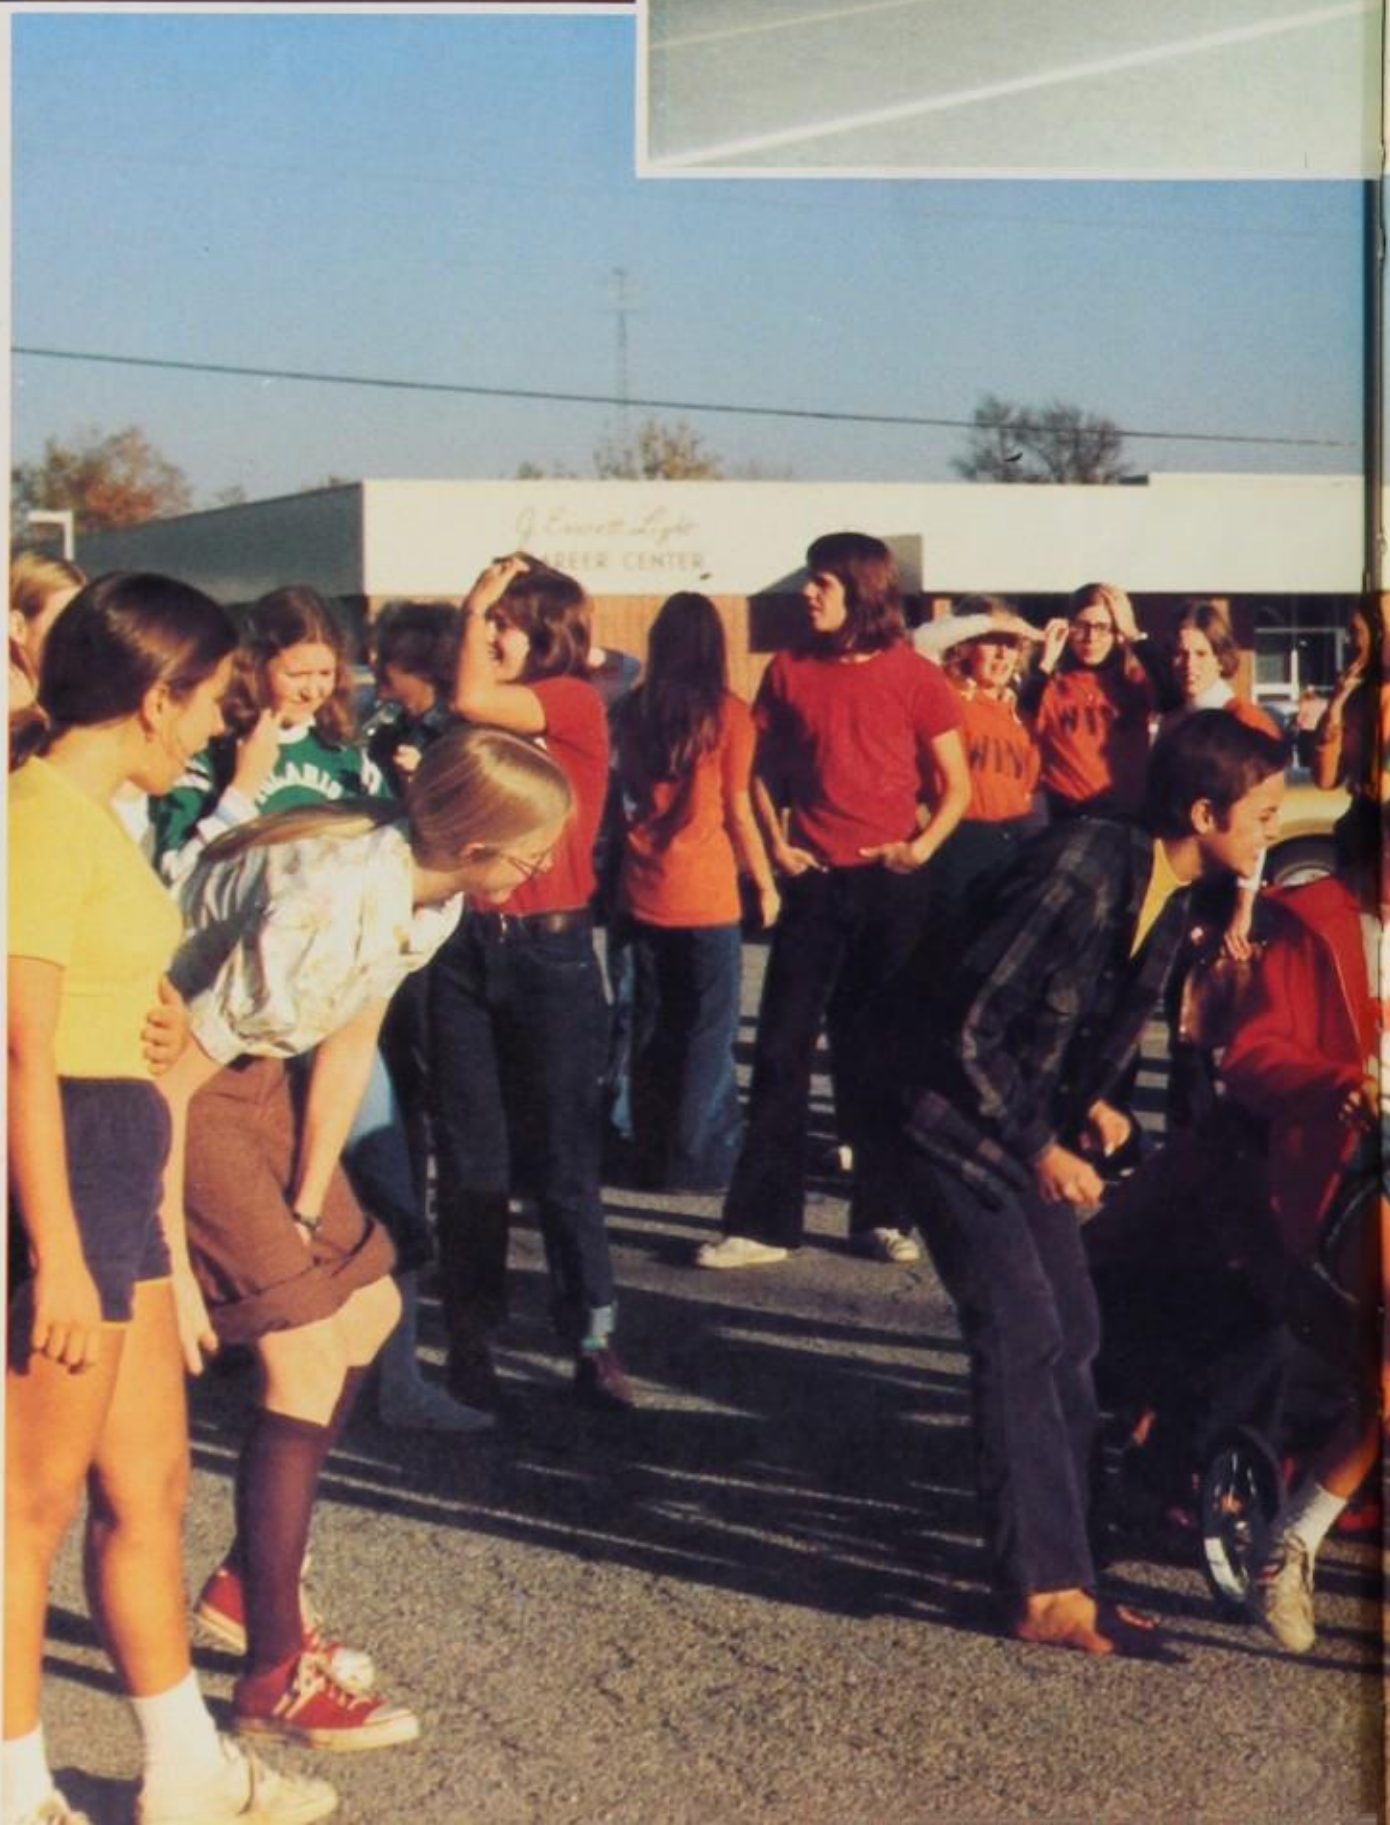

Fireworks filled the sky as the Panthers "plucked" their way to victory.

"The Cardinals are sitting ducks!" predicted the seniors. Not only did the Panthers "pluck" the Southport Cardinals, but the seniors won the award for best float.

The annual trike race was just great. Cox's Hot Stuff won this year. The day of the game was filled with excitement. Mrs. Glore and Mr. Edwards played Sonny and Cher (in that order), and a female (or was it male?) dance line really turned the audience on during the pep session. In the afternoon the Panther Parade aroused student enthusiasm even more. Following the half-time crowning of Joan Kennedy as Homecoming queen, an airplane buzzed the field. The climax of the weekend was, of course, when the Panthers won the game. Yea!

Saturday night's dance featured Tarnished Silver, great refreshments, and really super decorations. It was truly a weekend to remember!

Last minute instructions and "good luck" are given at the trike race starting line.

COME HOMING

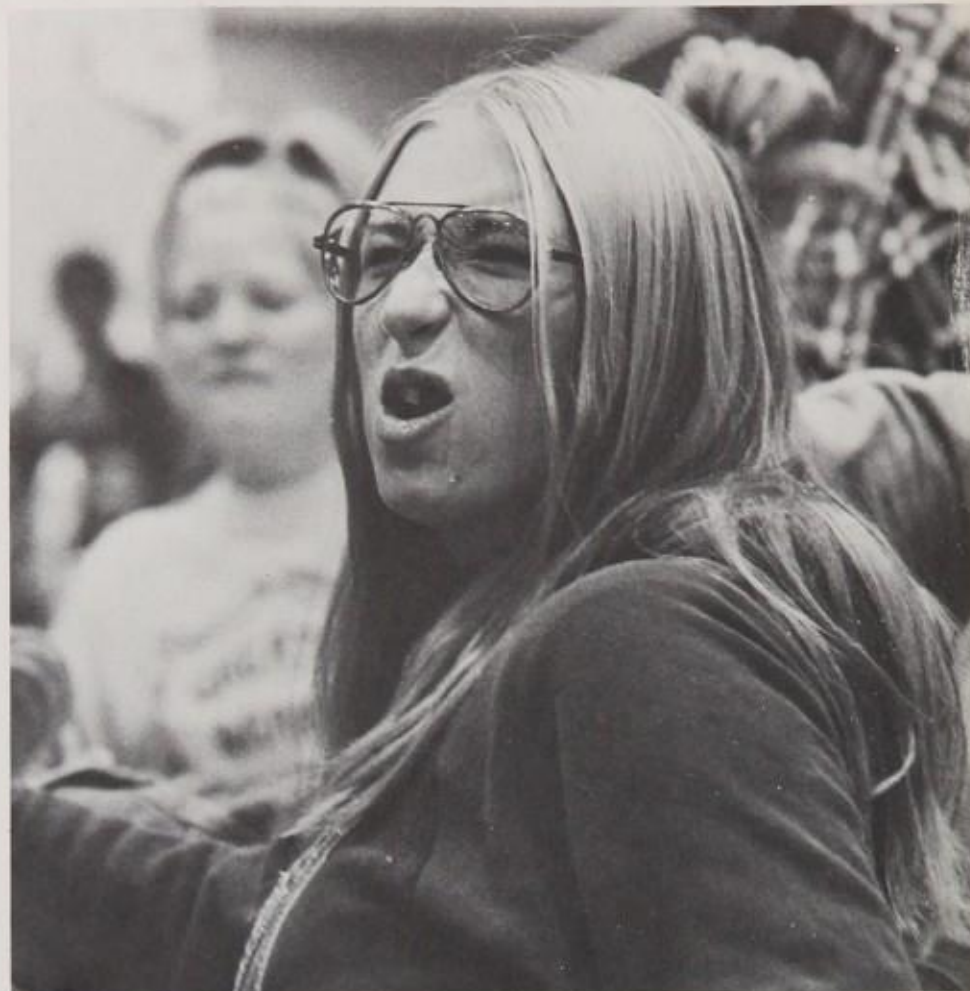

What style! Bob Bundy and Mary Beth Oblinger live it up at the dance.

The victorious senior float—"The Cardinals are sitting ducks!"

LET'S HEAR IT, SPIRIT

"Eeeeew!" Cynthia Haggard was on the Southport side of the faculty skit.

Our cheerleaders really "flipped out". Ruth Husk, Susie Gibson, Cindy Whitlow, Judy Paton, Nancy Partenheimer, and Bev Bumb led the cheers for our teams.

Fire up for the game! Andrea Dosey and Cathy McDermott light up half-time.

Tennis shoes, pigtails, and some of the zaniest hats you ever saw. Sound familiar? Well, think again—it's school SPIRIT week, of course!

The whole school sparks up morale through pep sessions and tennis shoe days. For the sake of school spirit even the faculty contributes their humorous touch to the first pep session of the year—Homecoming.

Of course, school spirit is a lot easier to arouse if the team is winning, but now and then we must force ourselves to grin and bear it. After all, as a wise man once said, "SOMEBODY has to lose!"

Whenever the Fighting Panthers are dragging behind in a game, what keeps the players going, and fires the souls of the spectators? Cheerleaders! What is that mysterious thing that keeps the whole student body together? SPIRIT!

Whipping around the corner in the bunny suit is Claire Hinkle.

All right! Let's go! This crowd is really behind the team.

TRAFFIC

The school buses get the students to school, well sometimes. Better late than never.

Towing is a big pain to kids, especially when they see their cars being towed by as they sit in math class.

Parking lots are no longer just the black-tops with yellow and white lines they were once meant to be. The N.C. lots take on a variety of other duties, among these of being a driving range for prospective golfers, a field for band practices, and an obstacle course for students fighting ice and snow in winter.

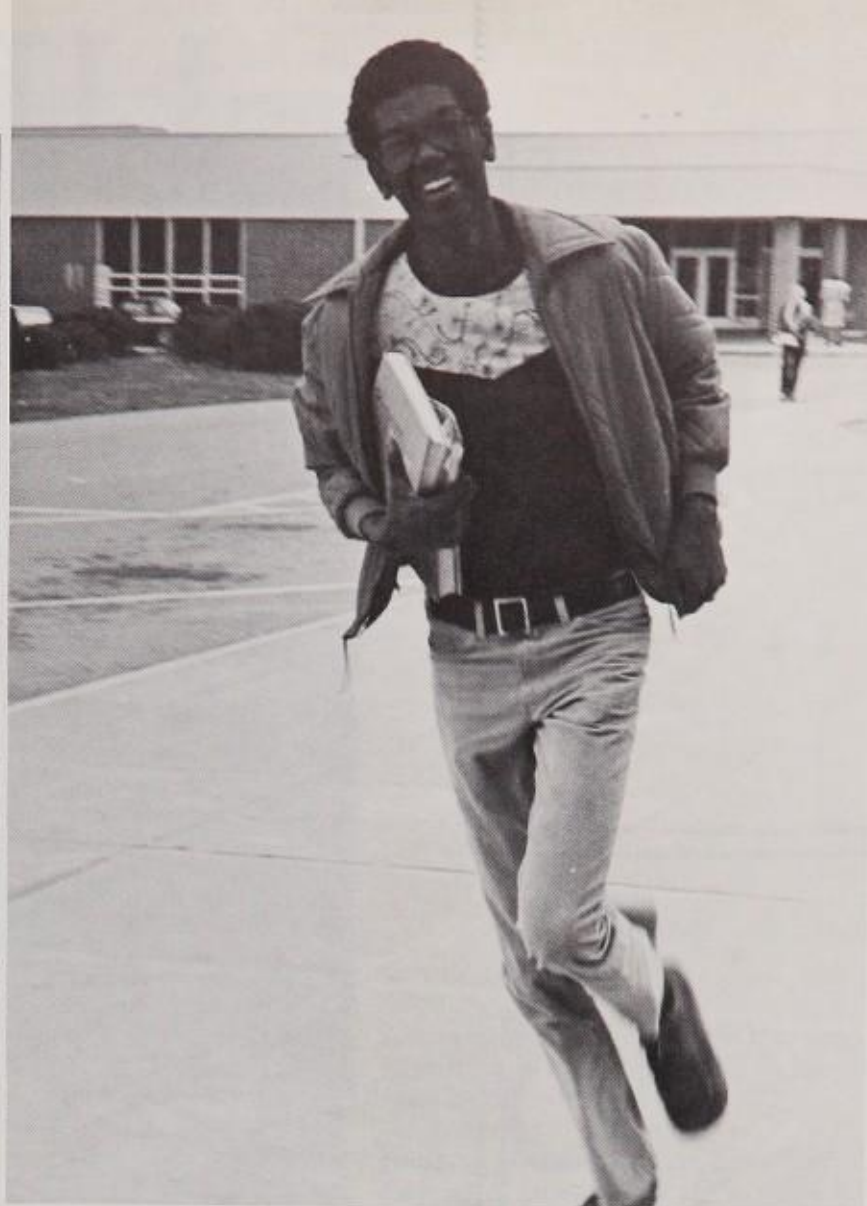

However, some of the lots serve N.C. above and beyond the call of duty. During the summer, for instance, two drivers' ed students became more interested in watching a plane than in driving. They then proceeded to make their own driving course—by going through some guidewires and knocking out all of the lights in the stadium!

With all this action taking place, it's a wonder the lots don't Crack Up.

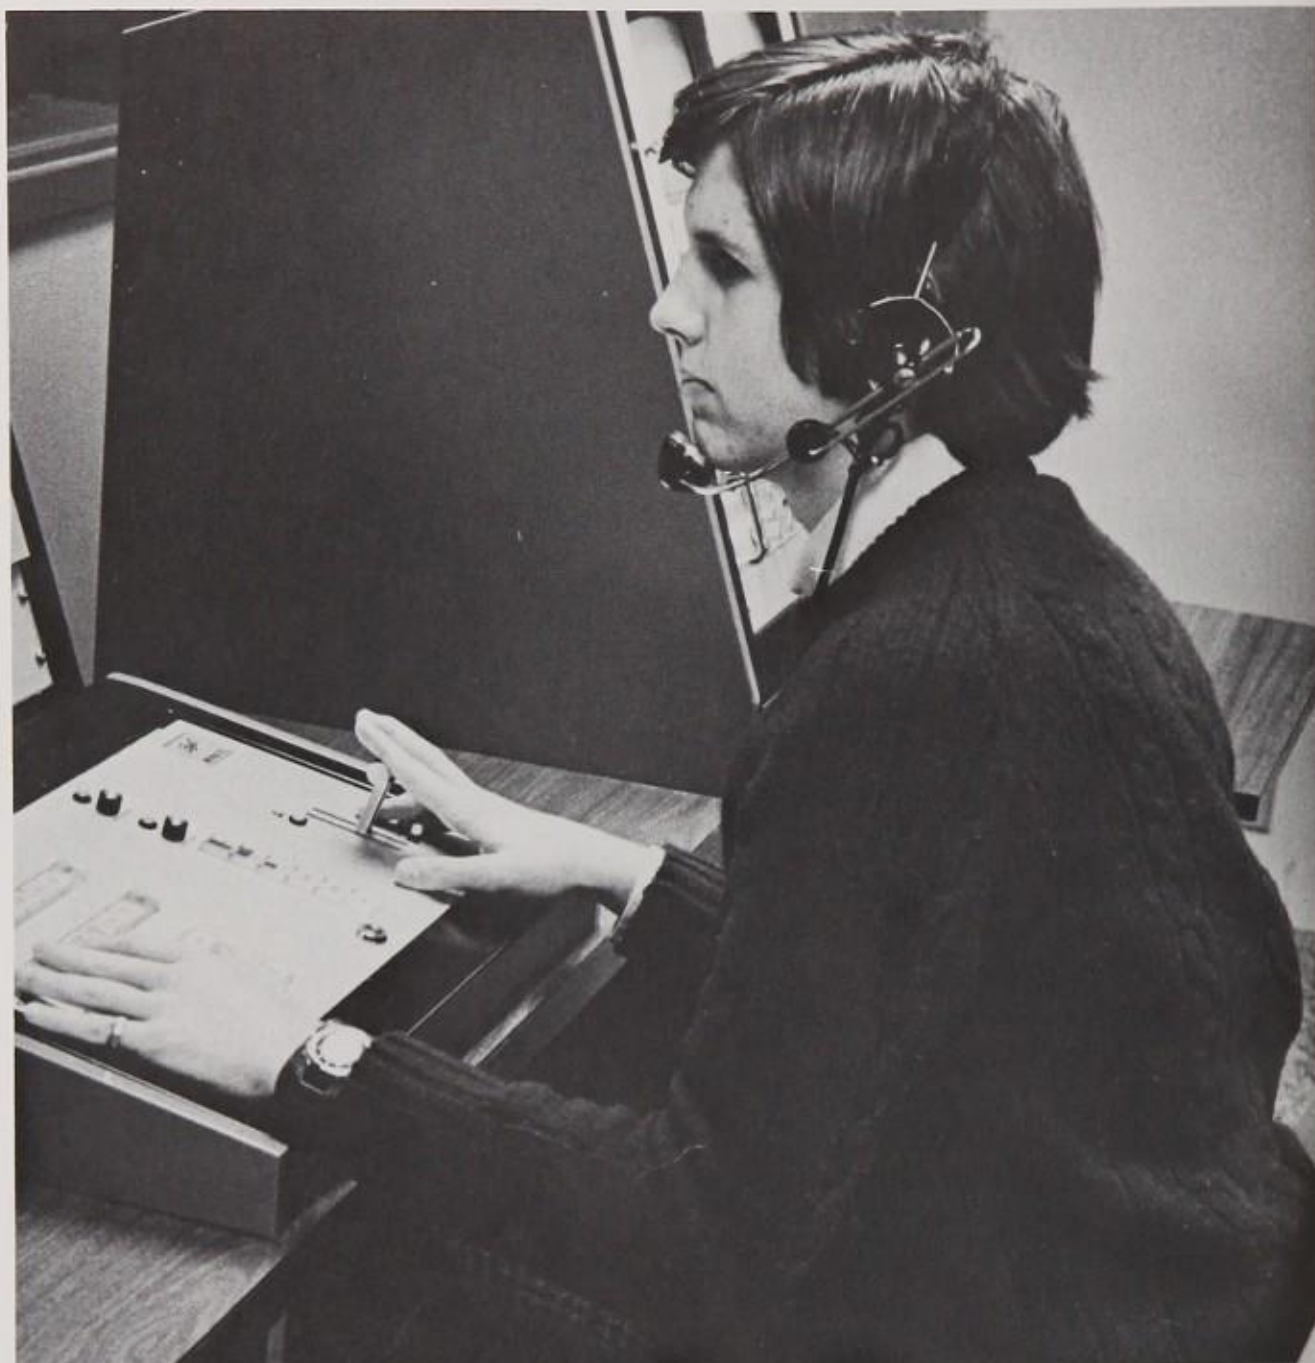

Even in the cold, studying outside can give new outlooks to homework as Debbie Reynolds, Joan Eudaly and Jeff Wood try it.

Most students end up running to classes to get to them on time. This includes Donnel Bowman.

CAMPUS

TV broadcasting is taught at the Career Center and learned by Steve Clark.

Amidst swirling water, Eric Sundquist pulls for the finish.

"Wow, this place is huge!" is heard a lot during the first week of school. Well, NC is a big school and has its disadvantages, but along with its size comes many opportunities that smaller schools wouldn't have.

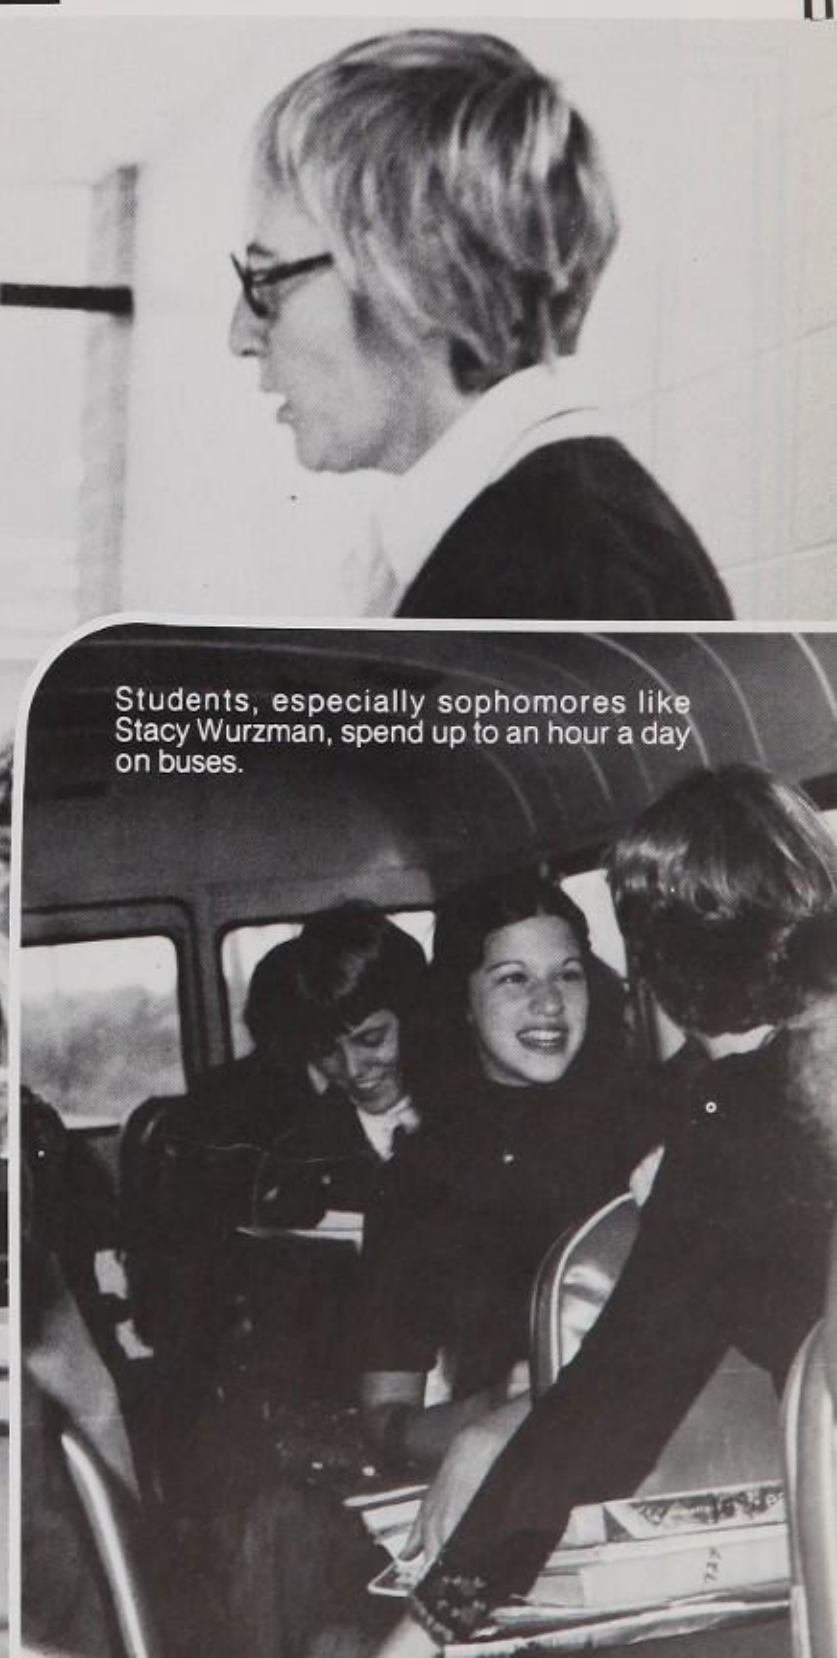

Because we have a swimming pool, students can get their Senior Lifesaving. And not many schools have a planetarium. The Career Center offers students a chance to learn or at least begin to learn a "real" profession before they're out of high school.

Field trips are what you might call "informative fun." They're actually part of learning too. Mr. Burrin took some of his Values and Issues students to the Rockville Covered Bridge Festival and to Billie Creek Village. These places let his students see a bit of Indiana's history, as well as have a good time out of school.

A relaxed smile is seen on the face of Mr. Burrin on a field trip to the Rockville Covered Bridge Festival.

Helping out at the polls gets Tom Fencil a day out of school.

Students, especially sophomores like Stacy Wurzman, spend up to an hour a day on buses.

SWING YER PARDNER

Clap to the beat! Leigh Schuette loves that music and enjoys mixers.

Waiting for some more guests is Jenny Wade at a club's dance.

Dancing has made it back! Instead of sitting on the floor and "getting into the music," kids nowadays get up and stomp 'n swing to the beat. Though lots of parents gasp at the sight, students have a great time and get lots of exercise.

Dances? Why sure! There's a Homecoming Dance and one for Valentines. Mixers are held after several football and basketball games. The seniors usually fall out for a Square Dance too. And, of course, the Jr. Prom and the Seniors' Grad Dance top off the year.

One of the best things about dances is they give students (girls and guys) an excuse and a chance to ask their "secret" honeys out for a night on the town. You know—the hunk that you see in H hall every day after English or the chick that eats during your lunch period—go ahead, ask 'em!

Alright! Lori Peglow really gets into her dancing at a mixer.

A red hot fire is great for roasting hot dogs, but a bit too warm for comfort.

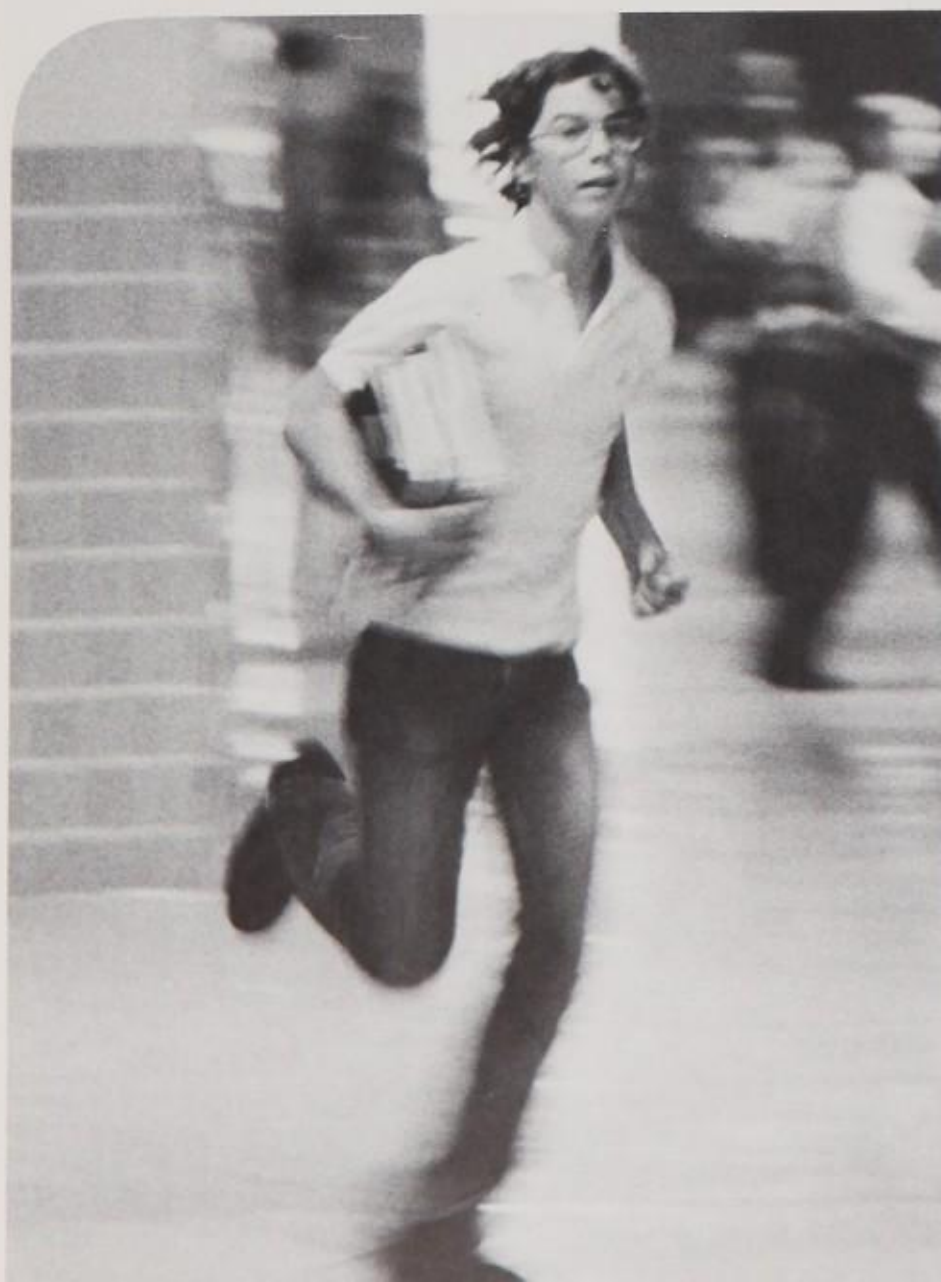

A little twist adds to the dancing style of Ginny Henry.

Like many other students, Tom Higgins races to beat the bell.

'Let me tell you this . . . ' begins Mr.
Walker as he talks to Peppy Mitchell.

Illegal parking may be hazardous to one's bumper, disposition, and wallet.

Sly is the word for Derek Black as he tries to slip into class late.

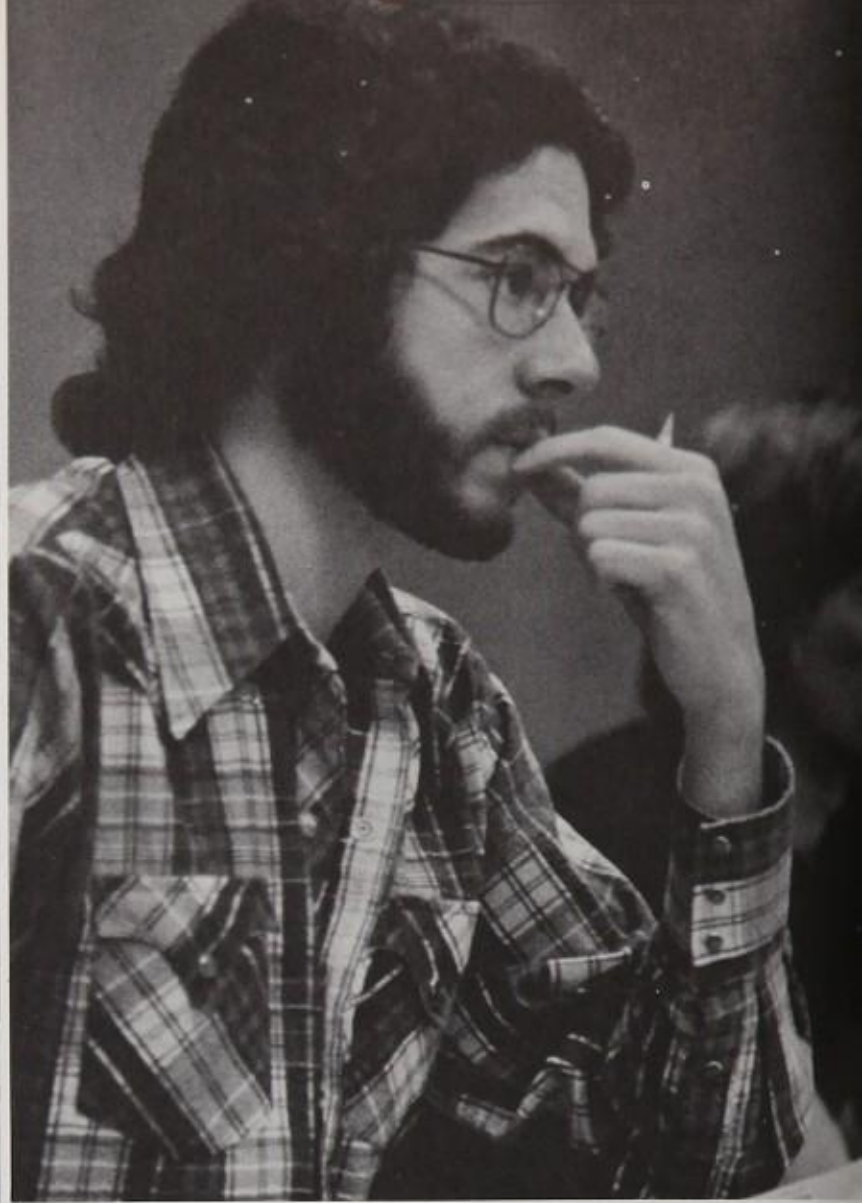

Why can't a student be late to class? Why can't he skip a class if he has something more important to do? Why can't a kid smoke in the bathrooms? Why can't he park his car where he wants to? Why can't students go where they want to during their lunch period? Why can't a kid walk from one room to another without a pass?

The organization of a school the size of N.C. is no easy job. Whenever a kid comes onto the grounds during regular school hours, the administration is responsible for that student's well-being, not necessarily his (her) happiness. The faculty must concern itself with fairness for all; everyone must receive the same benefits as well as shortcomings.

Why? Because!_____

Puzzled by a problem, Senior Class Council president Bob Lee listens to a discussion.

Brand-new members smile at an amusing remark during a Sophomore Class Council meeting.

Councilitis ?

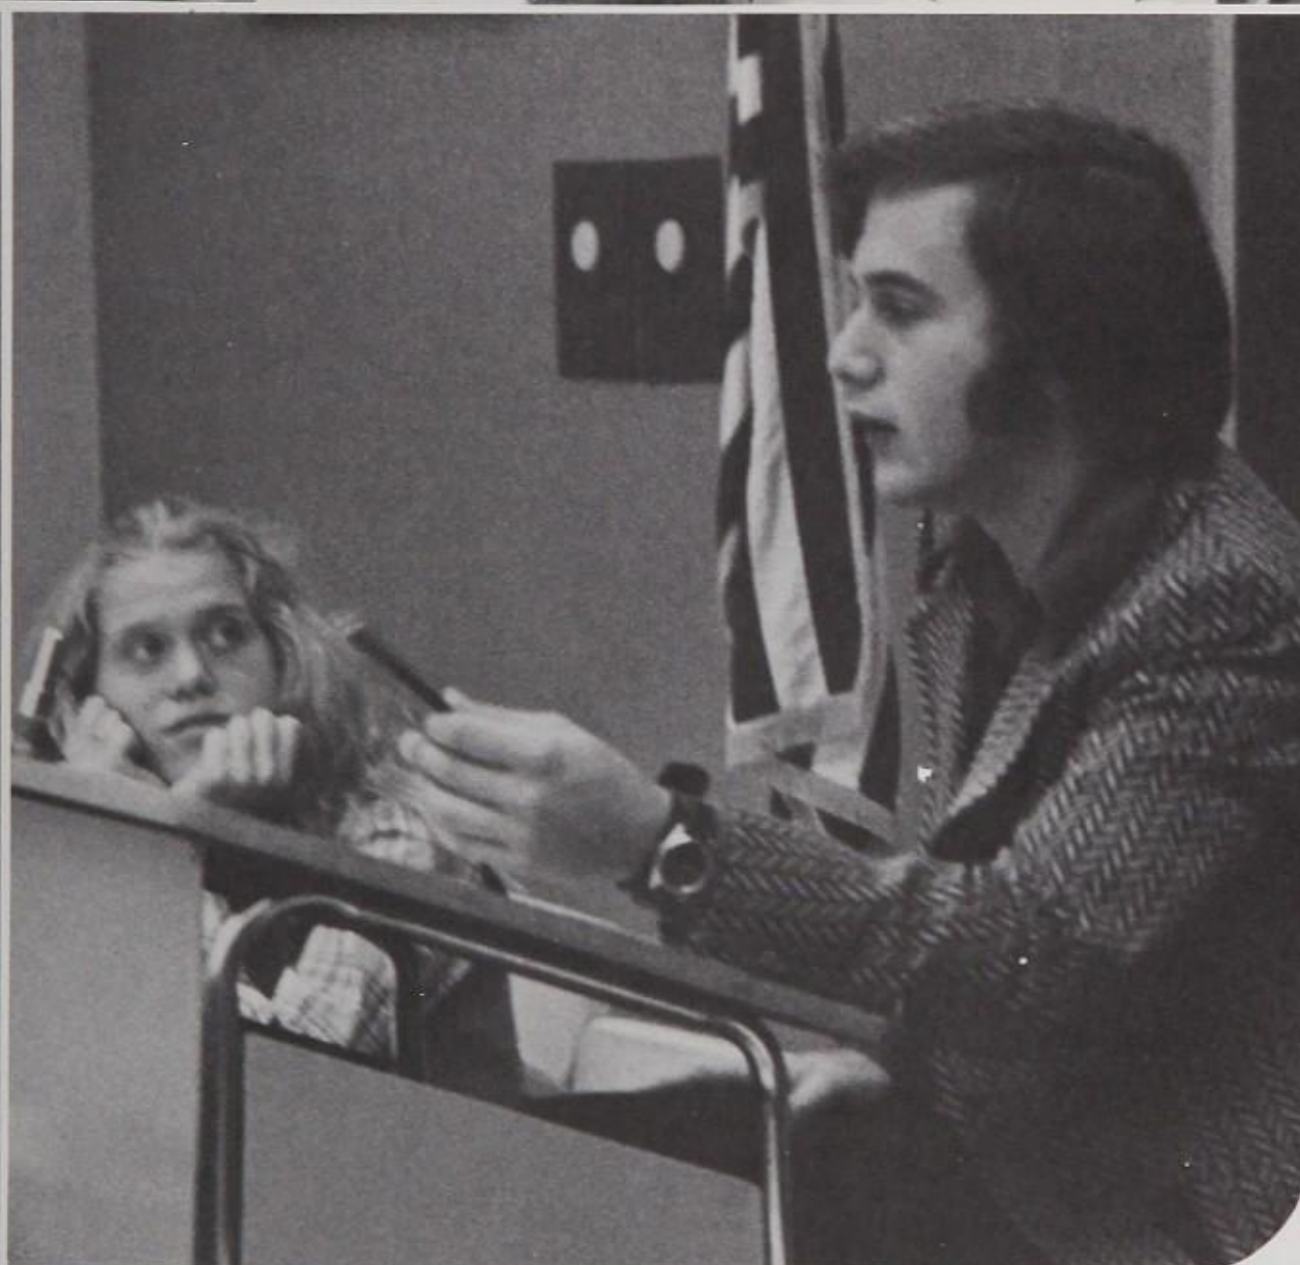

Ideas form for future projects as the Black Student Union listens to senior DeeCee Murdock.

Tonsillitis, hepatitis, and appendicitis are familiar names, but what is councilitis? It is a common disease at large high schools where there are many councils.

Student Council is the biggest council, composed of one person from each homeroom. Debate is the trademark of the Student Council, and they are efficient enough to pass seven motions in six minutes!

The Class Councils take care of social events, the Christmas tree, and floats. An informal Senior Class Council meeting even had to cope with the scary problem of a falling tree!

Black awareness is the idea behind the Black Student Union. They provide an opportunity to promote understanding between black and white. A great start was made when they presented the Homecoming football team with a 3 x 3 ft. box of cookies!

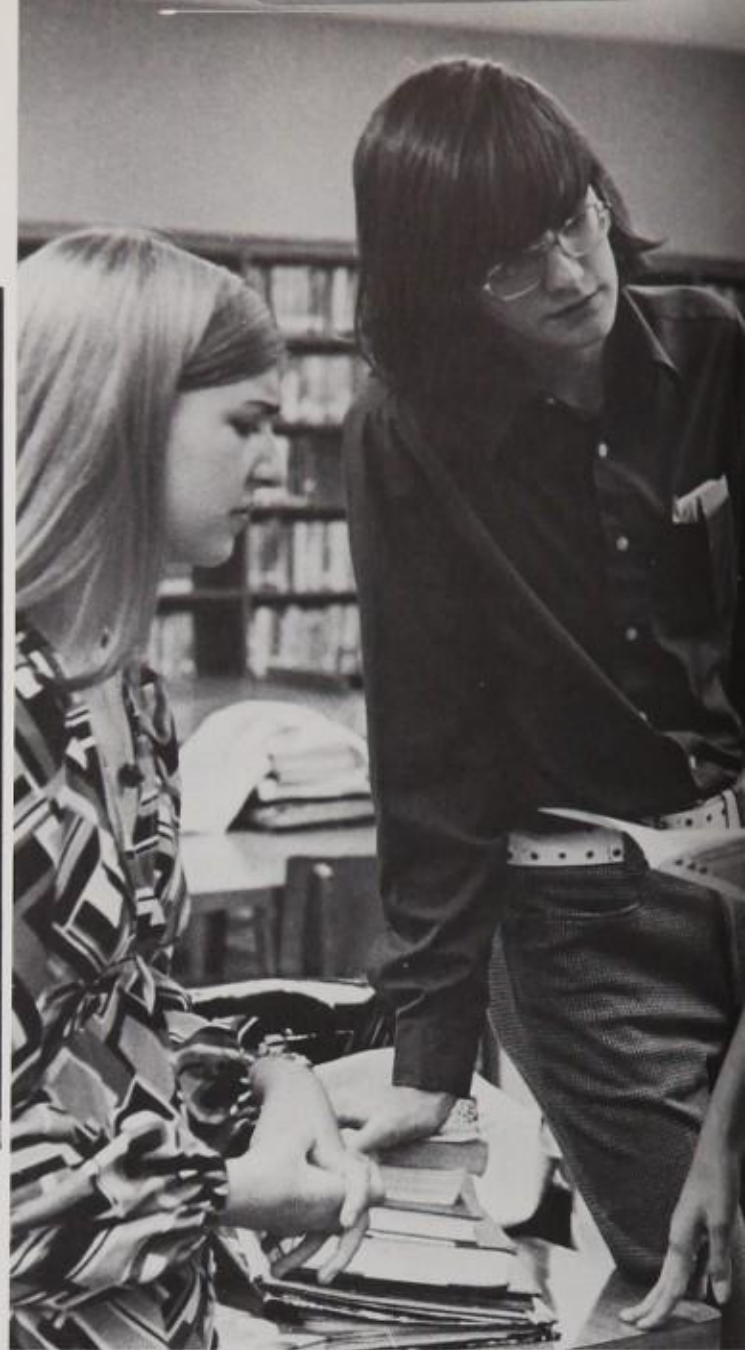

Student Council members try out for the post of assistant secretary. Senior Linda Morgan gives her speech as four of the other contestants watch.

To make his point, Junior Class Council president John Ackerman motions with his pencil, watched by vice-president Suzy Pantzer.

Formal and posed, Boys' and Girls' State members smile as they recall past summer memories.

Cramming math before Exercise in Knowledge team tryouts are seniors Sylvia Holt, Rick Boebinger, David Grossman and Jay Ponder.

Brainstorm!

Crash! Bang! National Honor Society is working noisily on its Homecoming float. This active group also tutors and participates in exchange programs. All the NC brains are busy.

Deadline after deadline is the monologue of any Quill and Scroll member who survived a year of editorship. Meanwhile, the Exercise in Knowledge team is out to uphold the reputation of last year's award winning team in miscellaneous knowledge. Boys' and Girls' State members are busy with luncheons and political rallies after a week on campus with camera bugs. National Merit Semifinalists were rewarded for their outstanding PSAT scores.

All these groups are busy in some way—stirring up a storm!

At ease on a counter-top is Quill and Scroll member, Vicki Shanner giving a staff member editorial advice.

Pleased, Sophomore Lisa Hudson accepts help by National Honor Society tutors Dona Vollrath and Corky Lamb, seniors.

At the first gathering of the National Merit Semifinalists, Mr. Richards gives them vital information.

A "peaches and cream complexion" is not exactly what Jo Schneider had bargained for at the Latin banquet.

Wishful thinking distracts Annette Howard and Esther Nahmias as they gaze at posters of Italy.

Semper ubi sub ubi. That is Latin for "always wear underwear." Oh yeah—so that's what they're teaching Latin students nowadays!

Seriously, Latin students learn much more than that during the course of the year. They don't do a lot of speaking, but the little speaking along with the writing that they do really helps their vocabularies.

Outside of the classroom the Latin Club is a very active group. With the catapult contest and the Latin banquet in the spring, and the chariot race in the fall, the Senate (class representatives who plan activities) is kept on its toes.

Senior John Capehart browses through research materials to present to his combination fourth-fifth year Latin class.

Mark Miller and Fred Kaseff pass team member Steve Sexson on their way to victory for their team, Tertium Fatum.

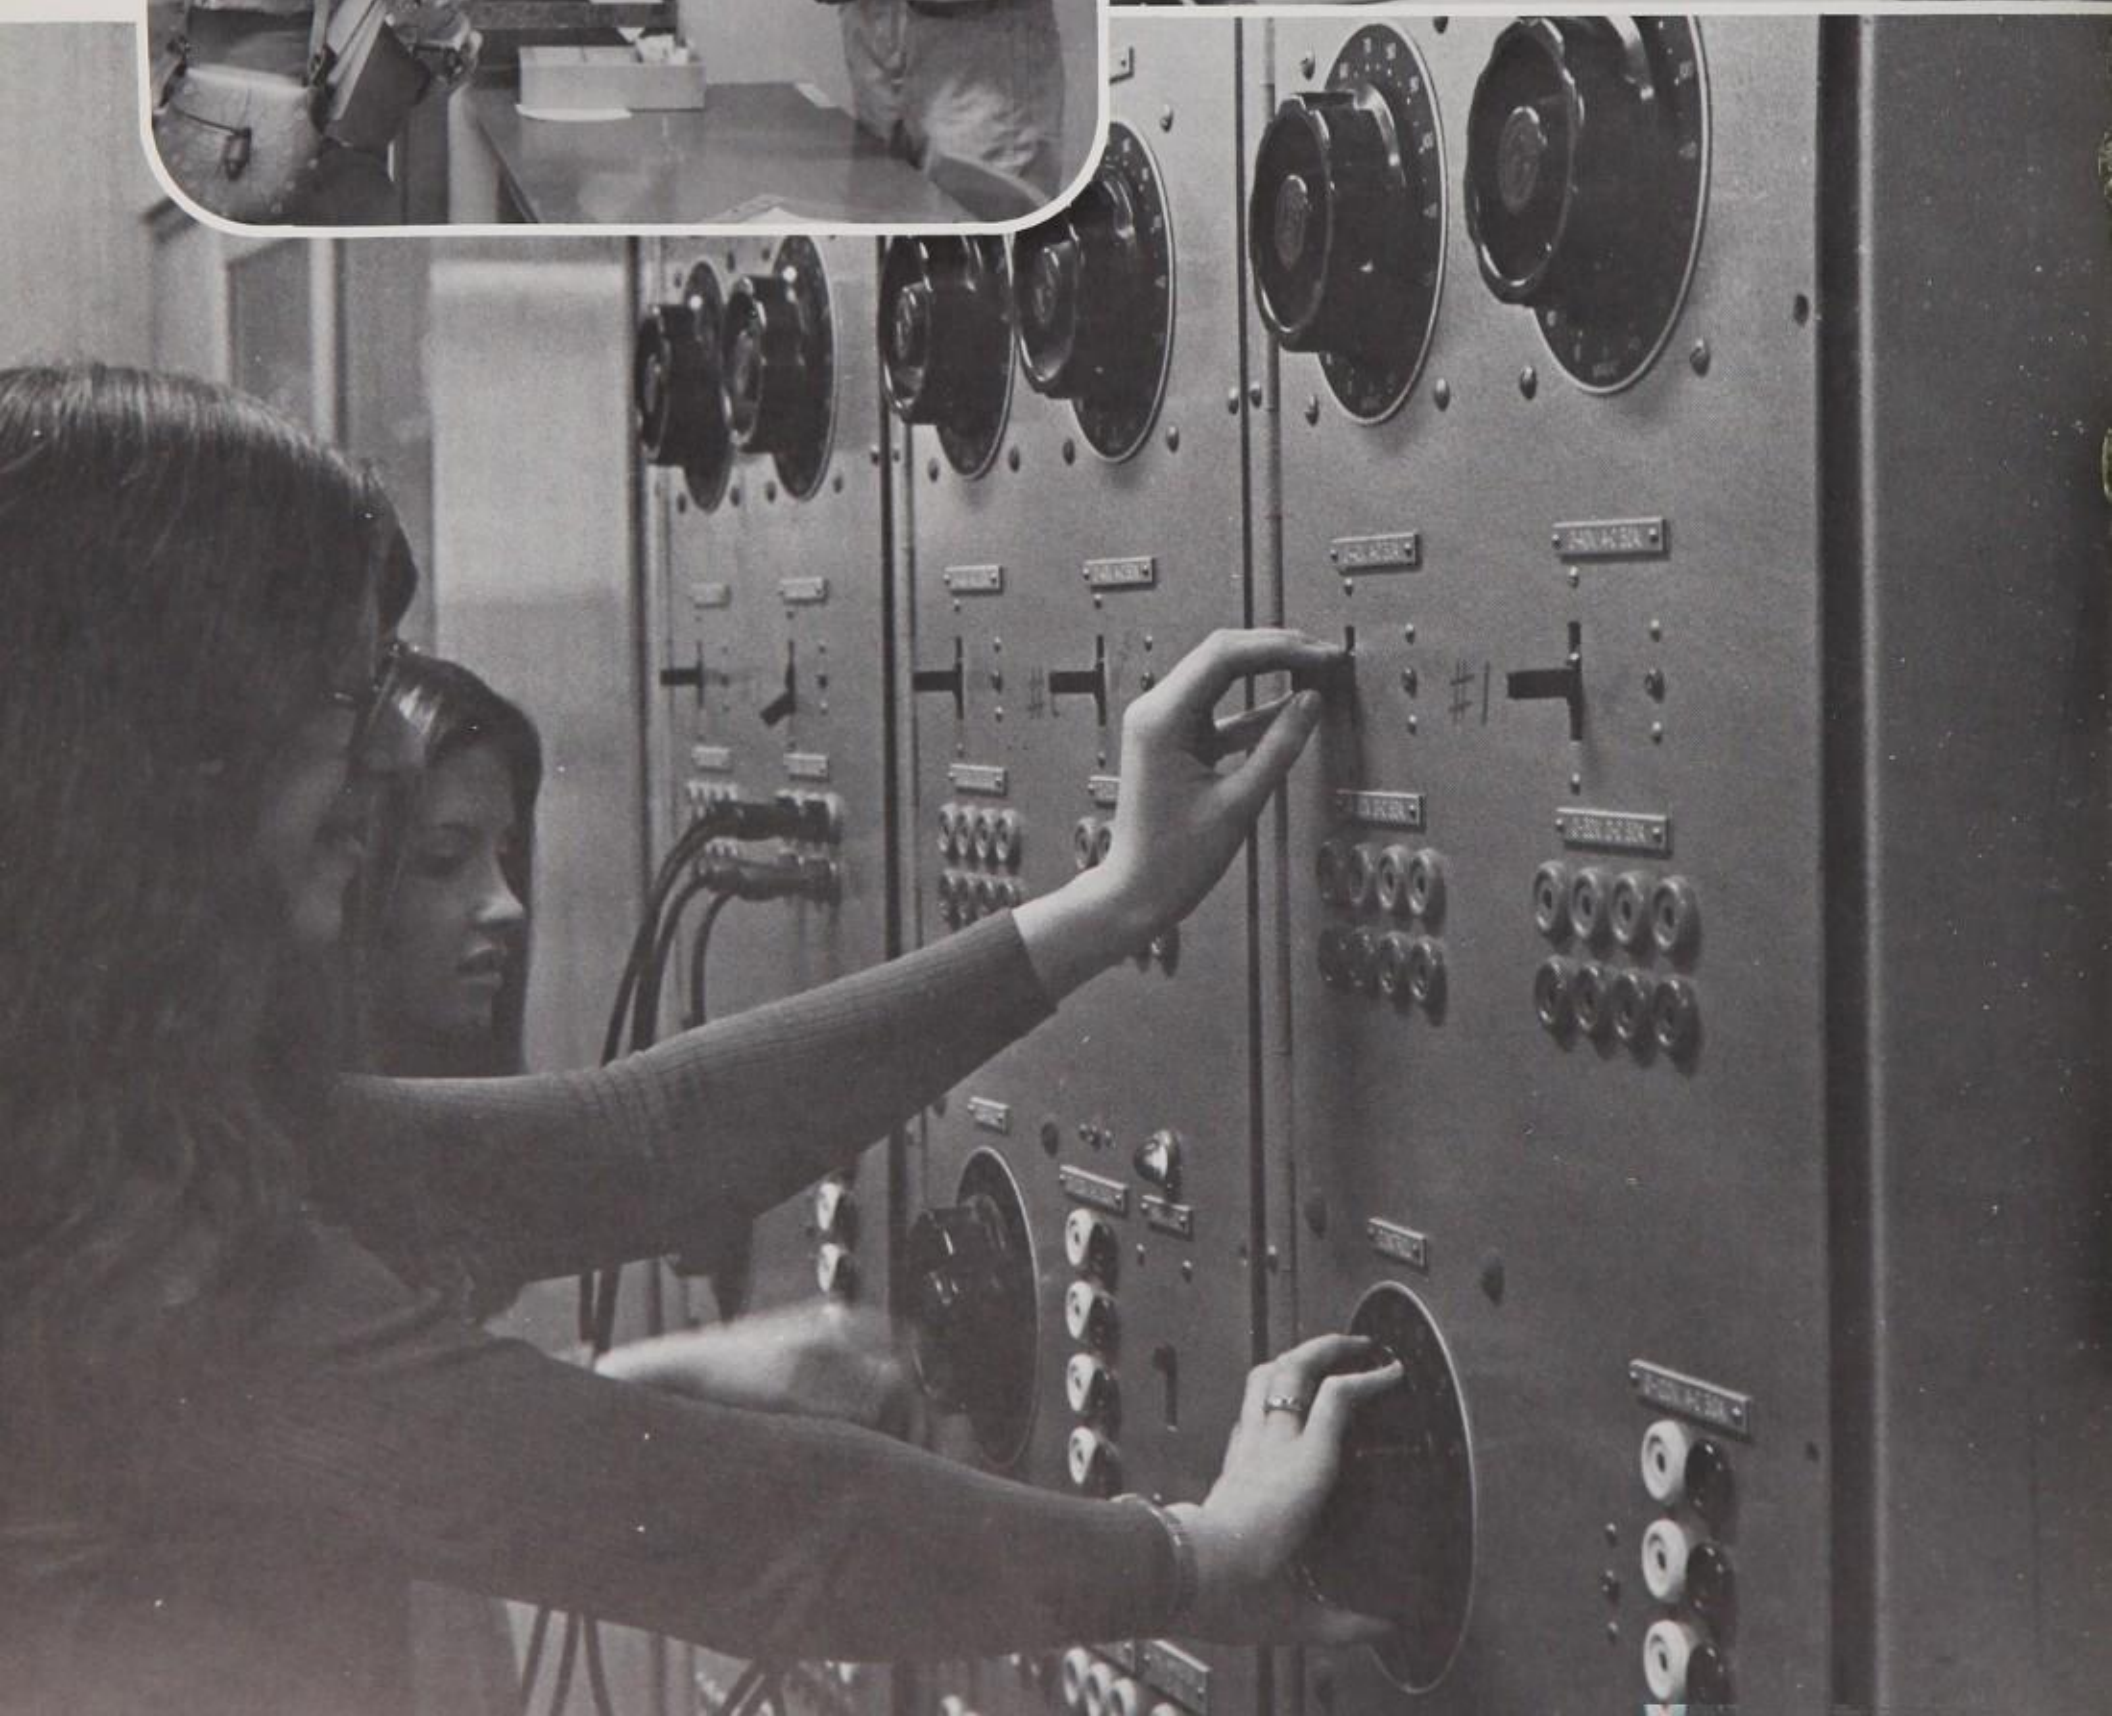

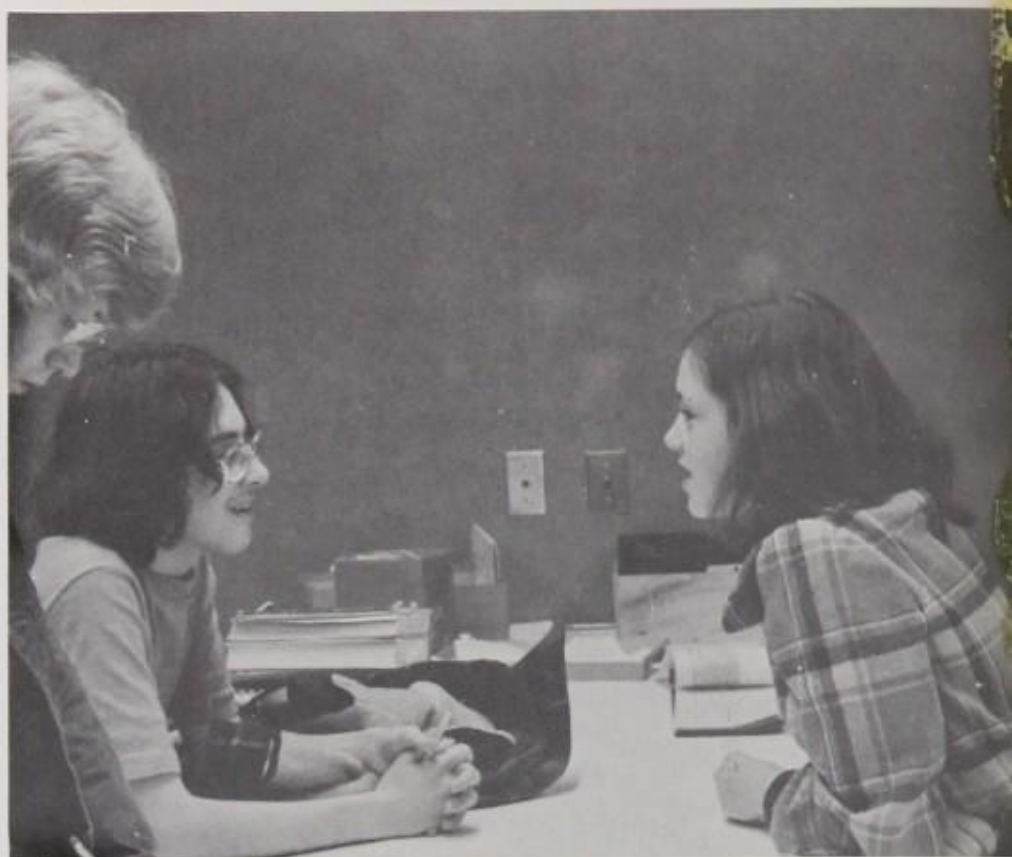

Always Wear Underwear

Please Take,

All's not work in the student office: Sophomore Amy Vandish chats with Junior Ivan Stillerman.

"Silence is golden" is one library rule; another is leave your pass with the helper, here Junior Deirdra Harrison.

Type, Do....

Where to find a wanted tape is a common problem discovers language lab assistant Jinny Litz, junior.

Basketball-chasing: a typical gym assistant sport demonstrated by Senior Robert Black.

Every official school place has helpers. The general office assistants perform many tasks—and when a vice-principal composes a poem for you on the day you get straight A's, it's almost worth the work! Reasons and excuses are often heard in the Guidance and Attendance offices. A false caller often gets caught saying, "This is my mother calling."

If books, paper, pencils, and so forth attract you, volunteer to work at the bookstore or the Student Council bookstore. It's a great way to escape study hall.

Labs and libraries need aid too. Peace and silence reign in the library, except when an assistant gets carried away punching cards. Labs are just the opposite—pure pandemonium during a class. Language lab helpers freeze in the icy office, keeping an eye on tapes and equipment.

AV is a vital part of NC. How could we see films without projectors? Organized AV helpers roam the halls with equipment, sometimes pushing three projectors per one person.

Students think gym assistants are lazy; but the assistants say they work hard. We need a referee!

Whoever you are, there is probably a place for your help and assistance in an NC office.

Power everywhere is what Junior Alicia Cohen and Senior Linda Morgan feel as they use the chemistry power panel.

Reproducing tapes in the AT room is one of the jobs of assistant Brian Scott, junior.

Help! Fire! Murder!

Even though the halls are empty, Jeff Vezira and Steve Higgs still manage to meet by accident.

Tired of carrying those heavy books? Not really. Debbie Walker accidentally drops everything on her way down the stairs.

All in all, North Central is a pretty great school. But every now and then, a comparative "disaster" strikes. Times like: the Homecoming Trike Race, when you can't steer your tricycle and you end up in the crowd; the water balloon fight in the parking lot that leaves you sopping; being allergic to your prom corsage that your date was so pleased with; having your choir picture taken with your eyes closed; dropping your lunch tray and getting chili all over everything; missing your bus on the first day; and even dropping your right foot clog over the stairs in the Student Center.

All these are disasters. But the best thing about disasters is that you can always look back on them and laugh.

Sandy Moore's sweet dreams during class are interrupted by her instructor, Miss Campaigne.

If you're late to school as it is, having to change a flat tire is not of much comfort.

Haste makes waste. Jeff Fisher finds this out when he cleans up his mealtime mess.

One kind of creativity that anyone ever thinks of in school is creative writing. How dull! Three hundred words on a piece of paper! Well, right in front of the NC student there are three other types of creativity: science, language, and cooking.

In the science laboratory one can do anything from creatively measuring a eucaliptus leaf to making a very colorful, loud and messy explosion. In the language lab the student can work wonders with his vocal chords in creating sonic vibrations. In the cooking lab the student can creatively poke holes in a soufflé or color the eggs a mouth-watering blue.

Those awful frogs! Well, frogs do have warts, but that's not exactly what's bothering Alicia Daily as she dissects one.

The variety of inventions beyond the mere word is endless. The laboratory seems to be the place to get the mind and body ready for creativity, or maybe it's just the place to get away from Frankenstein!

A mad scientist in the laboratory, Alan Berkowitz performs a science experiment.

Larry Nelson watches his neighbor, Frank Kieffer, get his earphones in place. They are both attempting to improve their French accents.

These second year cooking students, Jan Hinkle, Patty Standeford, and Frank Stone, are preparing to mix the filling for a pie.

Step Into My _____ Laboratory

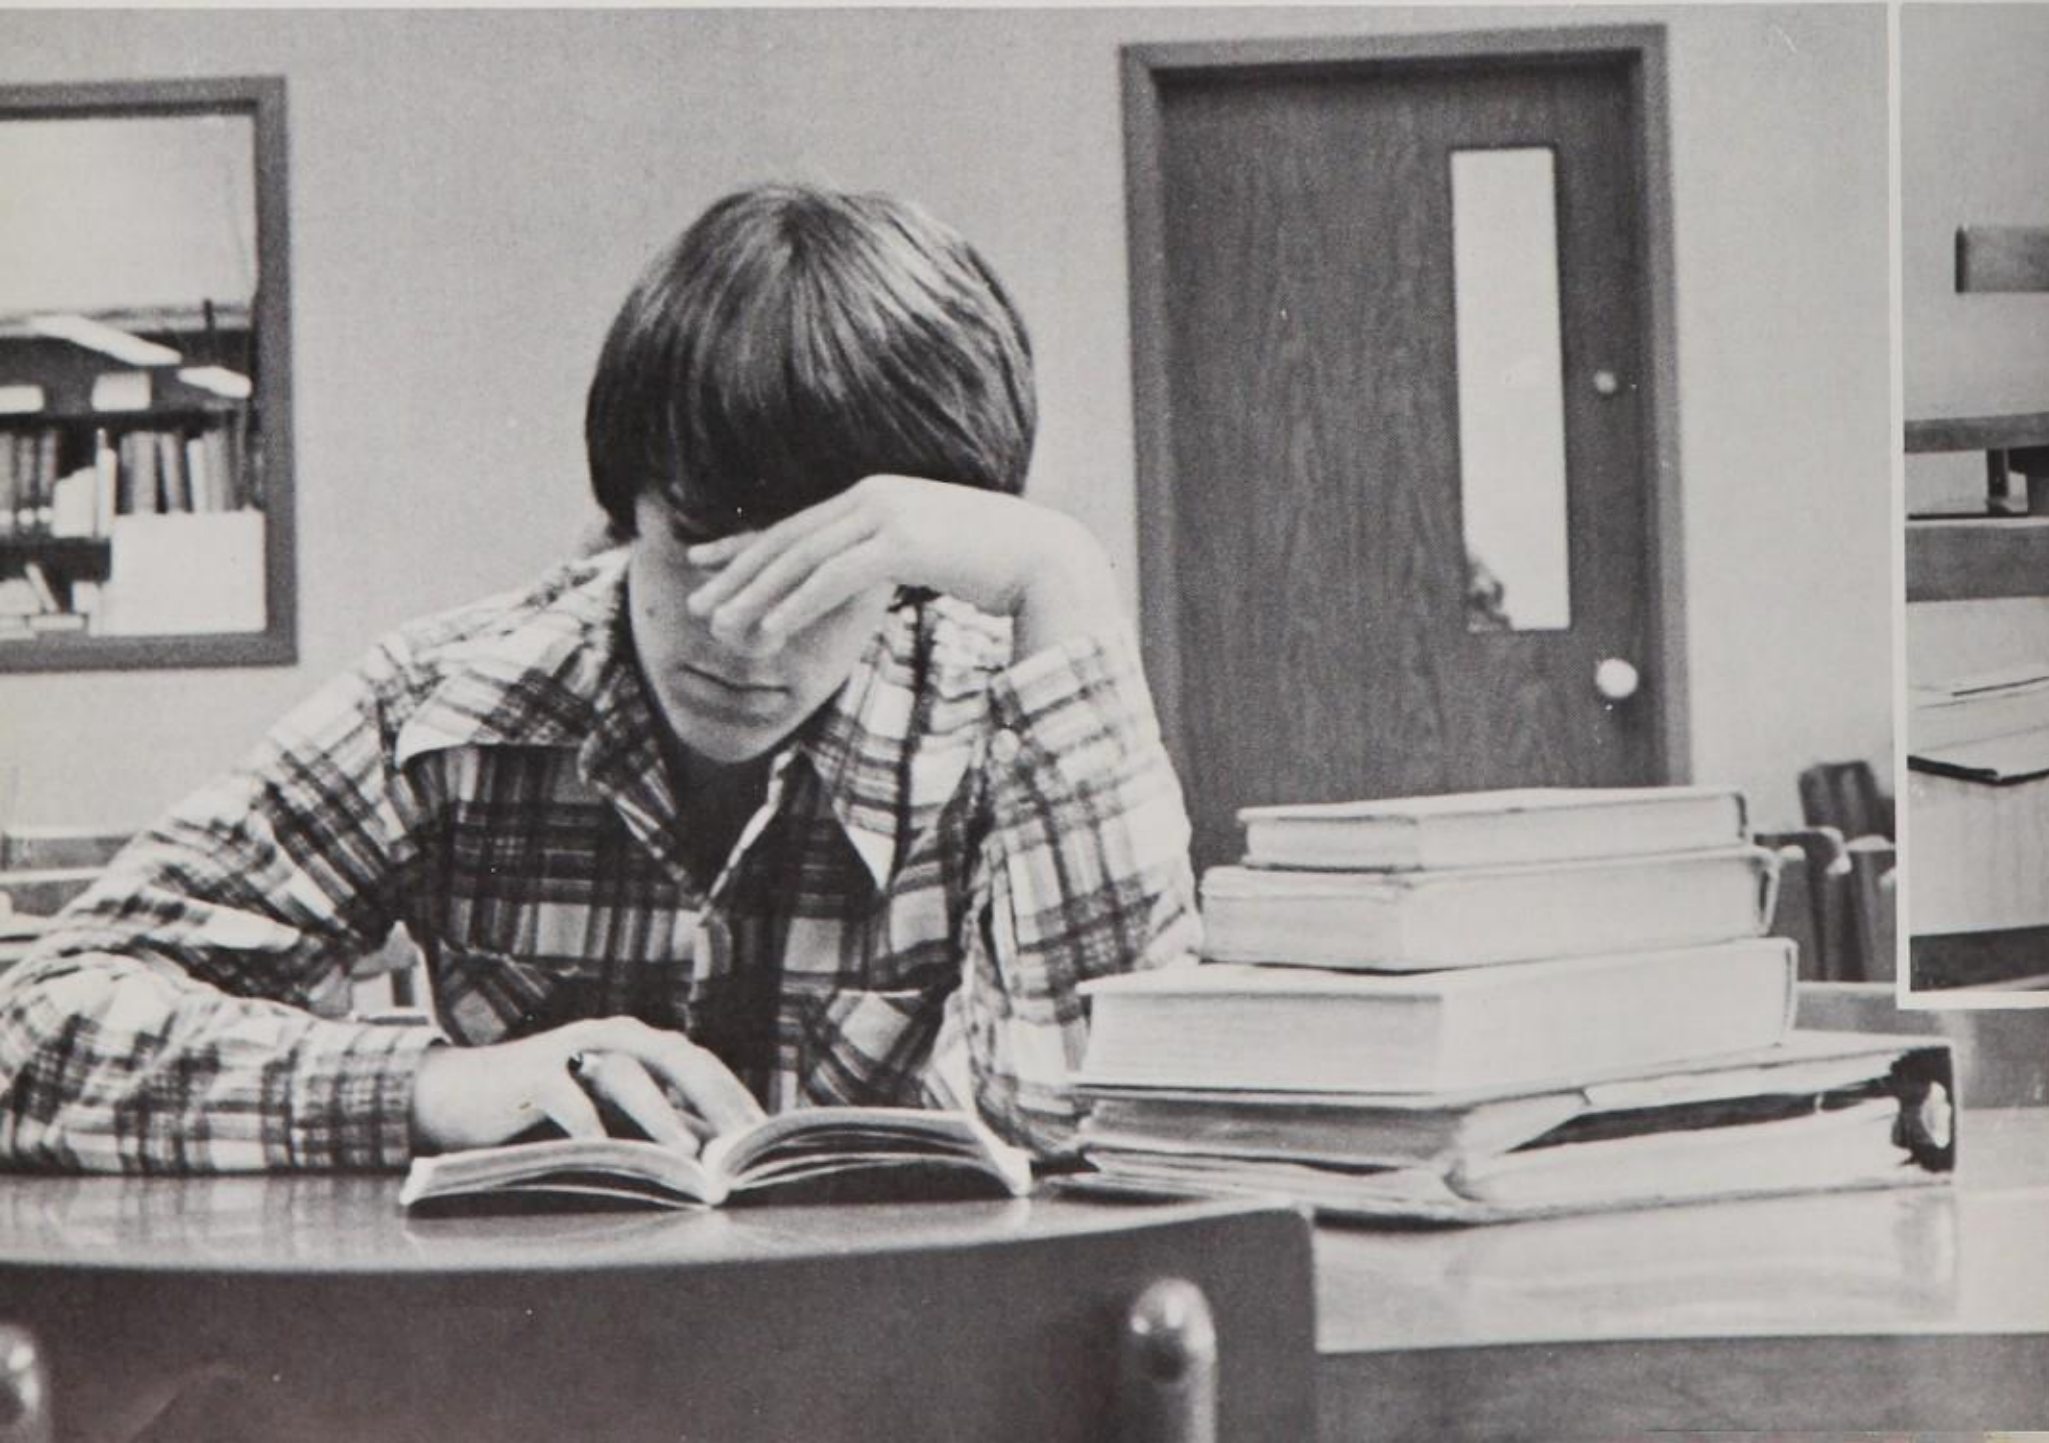

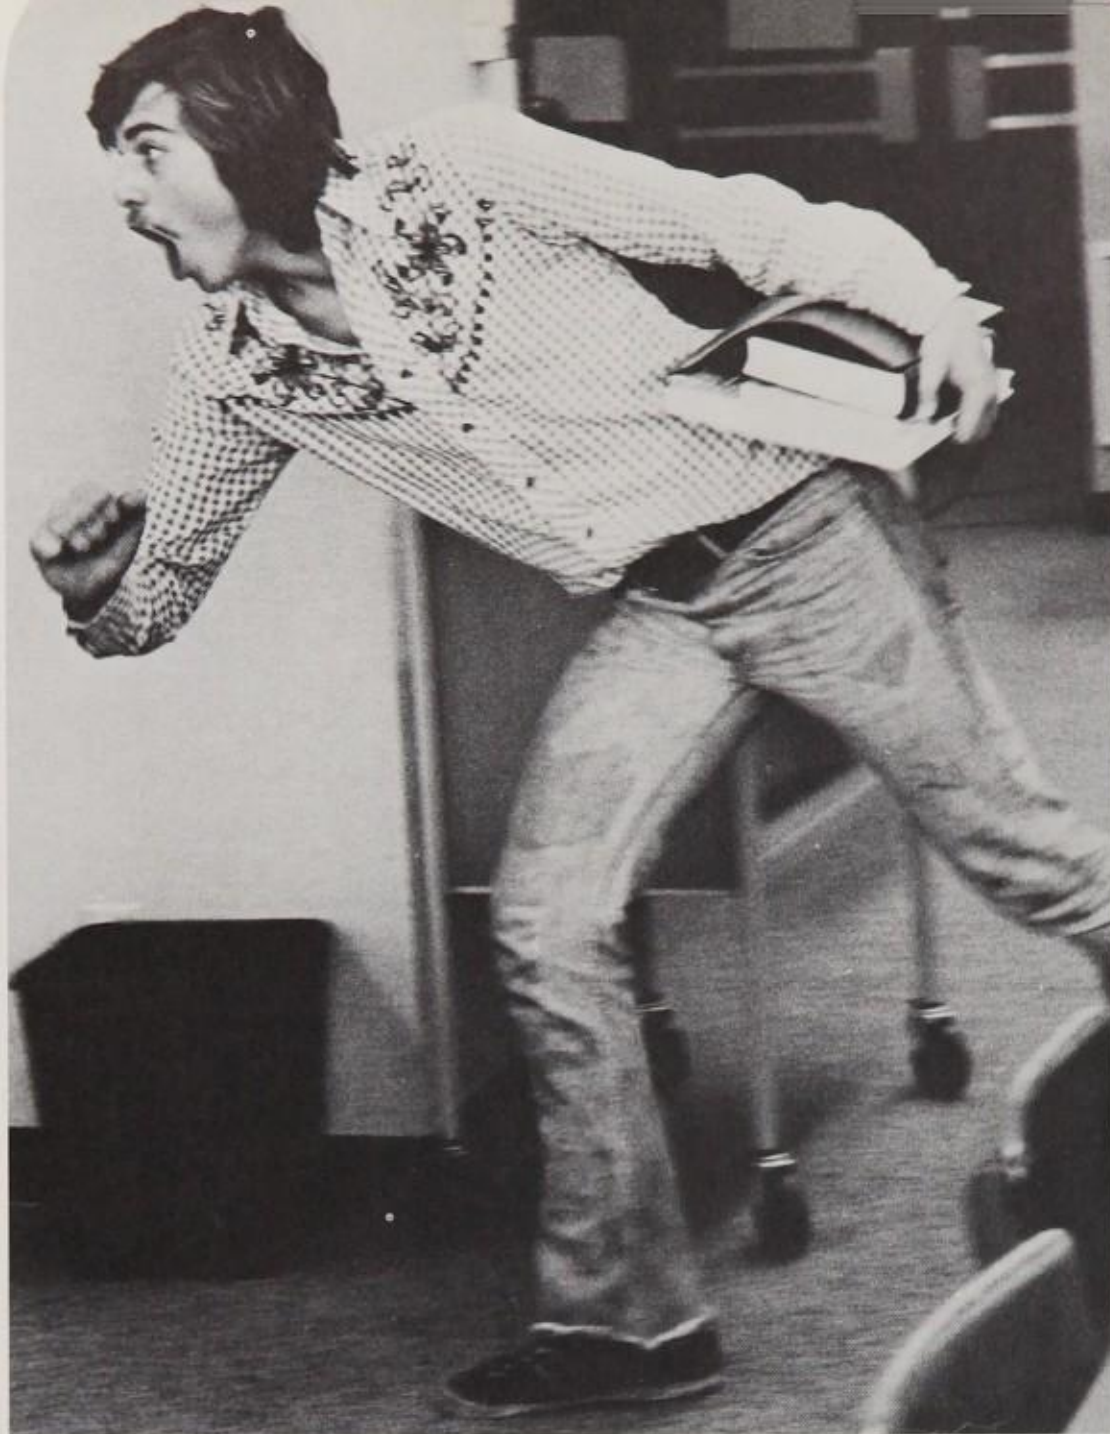

Junior John Tindall just can't wait to get situated in the library to get down to some serious studying.

Year after year the student gets this same old line (or something like it) from his teachers—"For every hour spent in class the student should spend two out of class studying." Sure! During school the students are all molded to the stiff seats of the classroom or the library, but after school, it's each to his own.

Favorite places to study vary from person to person. Some like to work on busywork-type homework in front of a T.V. in a very large room. Others do a similar type of homework in dead silence in a cubbyhole. Most students like to do their serious (?) studying in total peace and quiet—without even so much as a radio!

Whether confined to the little desks at school or sprawled out on a bed at home, studying must be done sometime . . . somewhere . . . somehow . . .

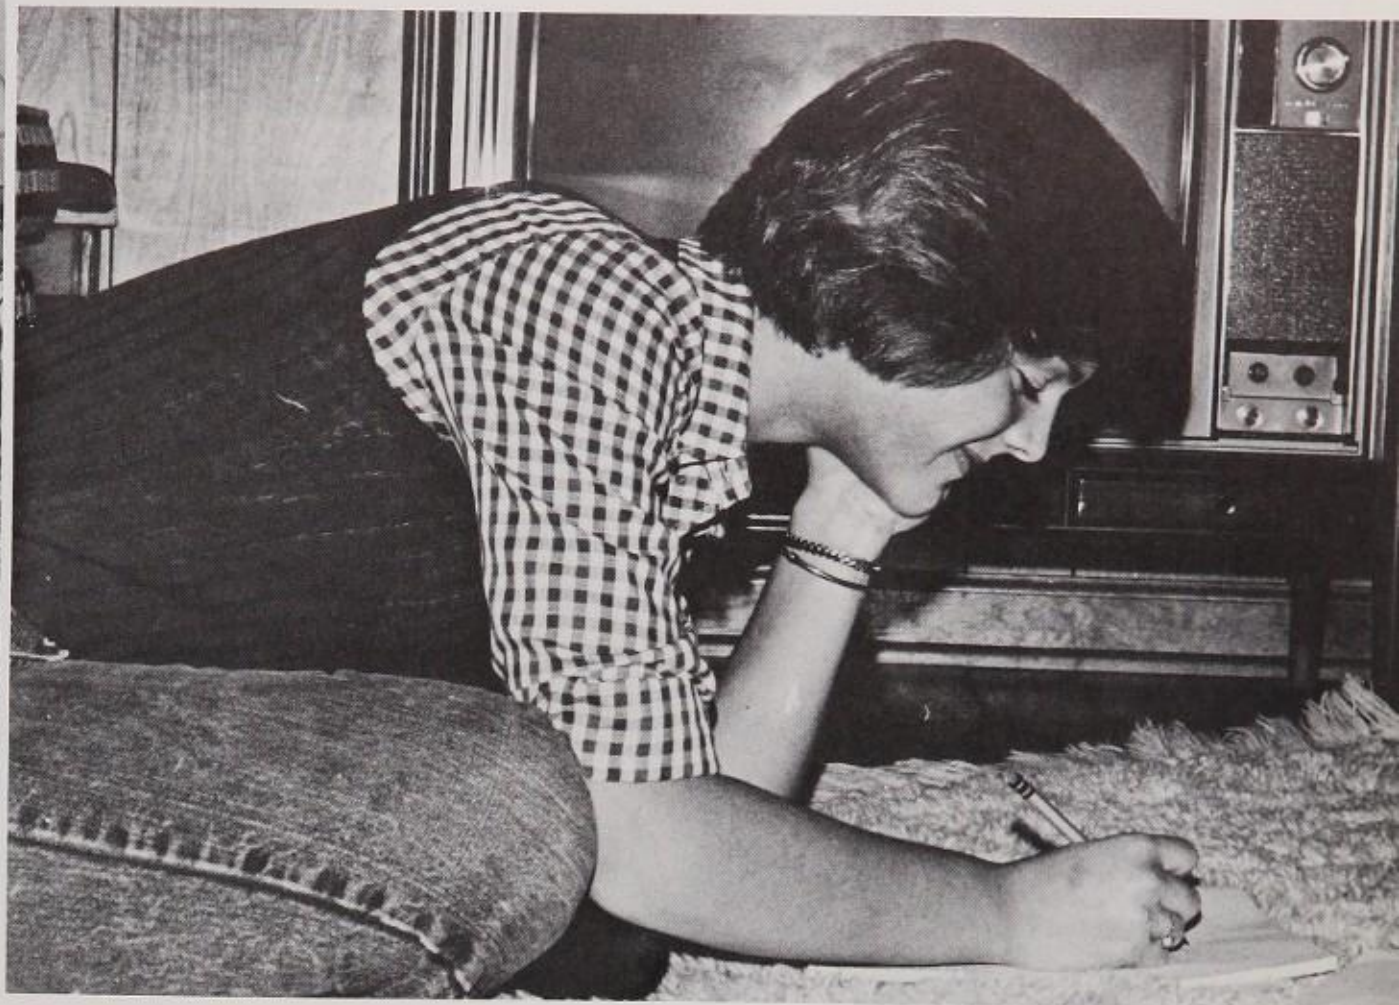

Concentration is the name of the game for Tom Lewis, who has to have his book read for his next class.

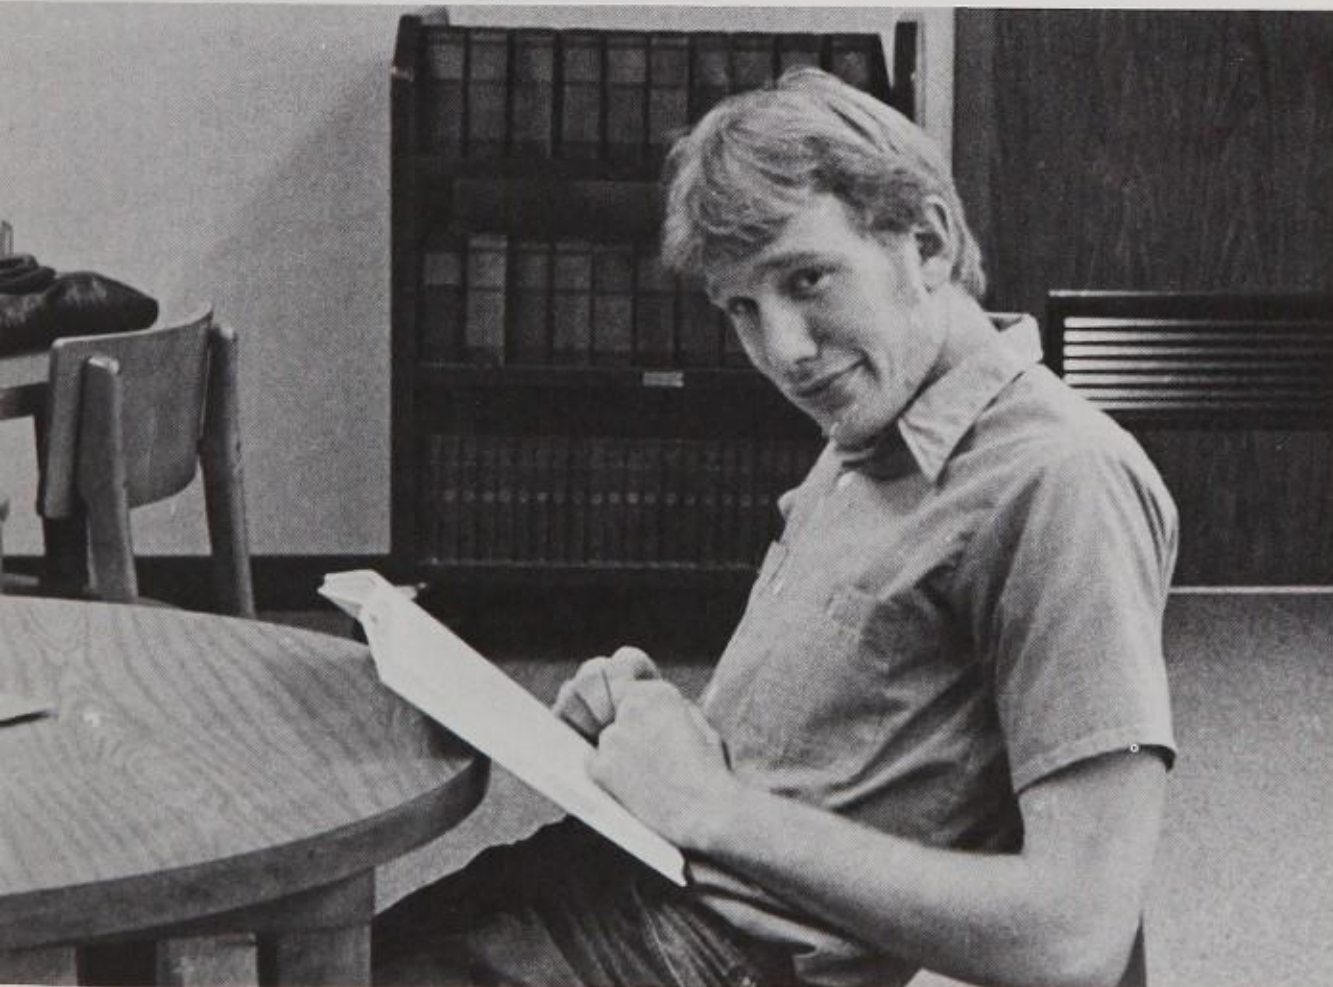

Relaxation and homework are not too dissimilar for Cathy Hurst once she has made herself comfortable.

Mimi Kraft has learned, through years of study, that homework is easier to do in front of a T.V.

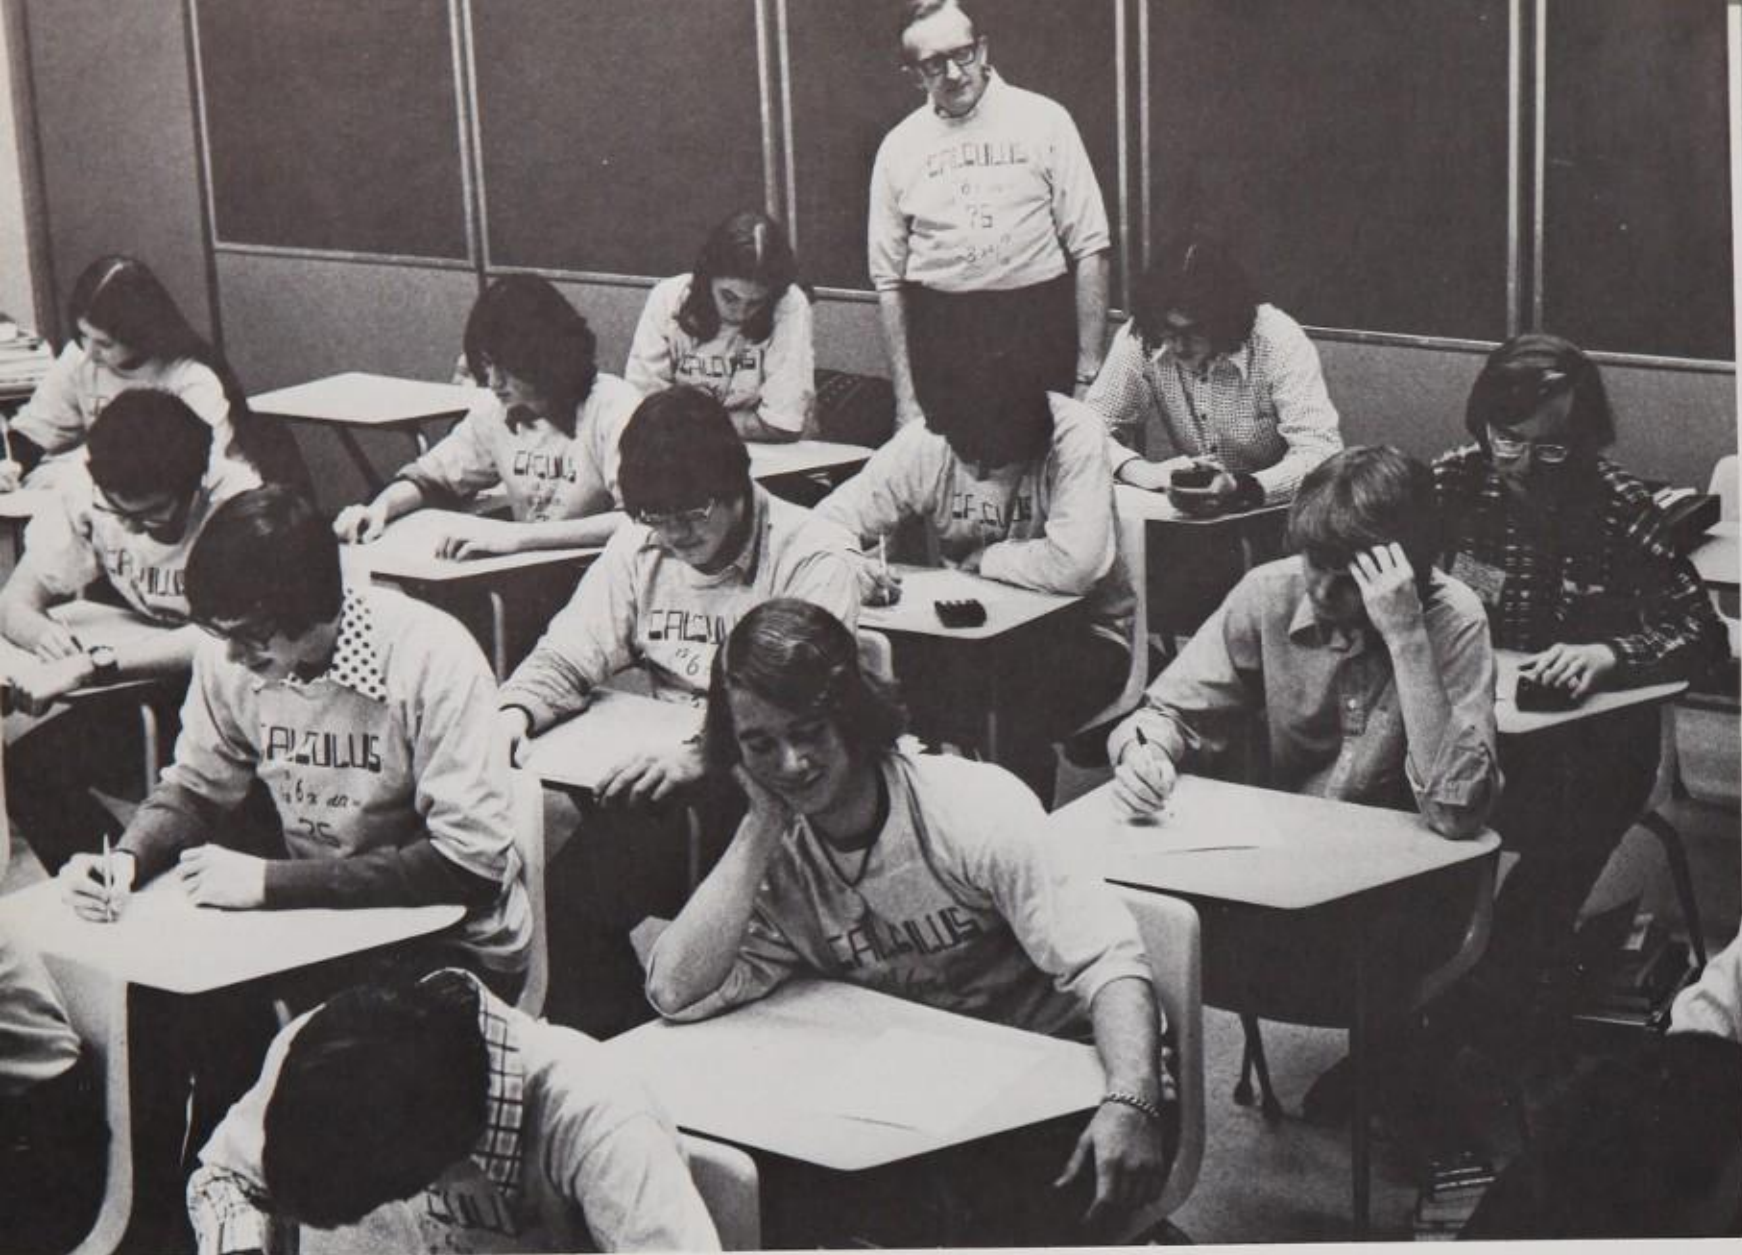

Yep, Dave, you have to do your homework every day. Dave Wolff seems unsure of the value in studying.

My Homework

Somewhere Over

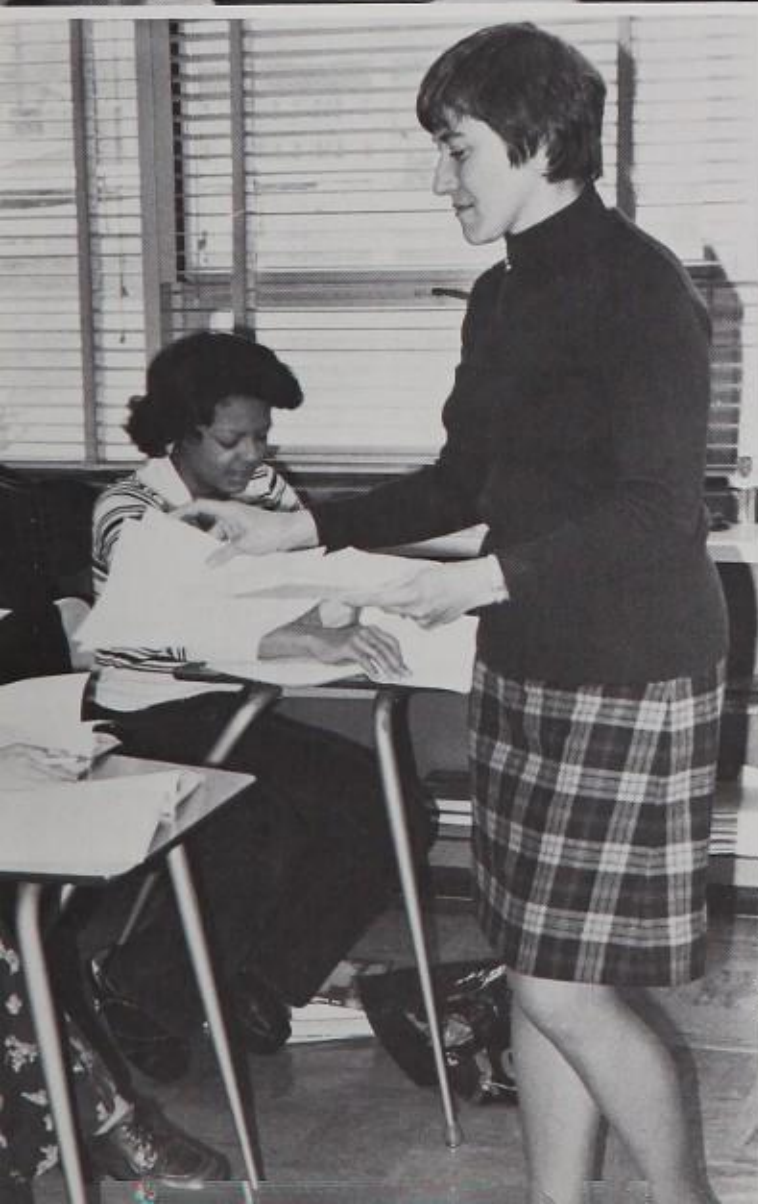

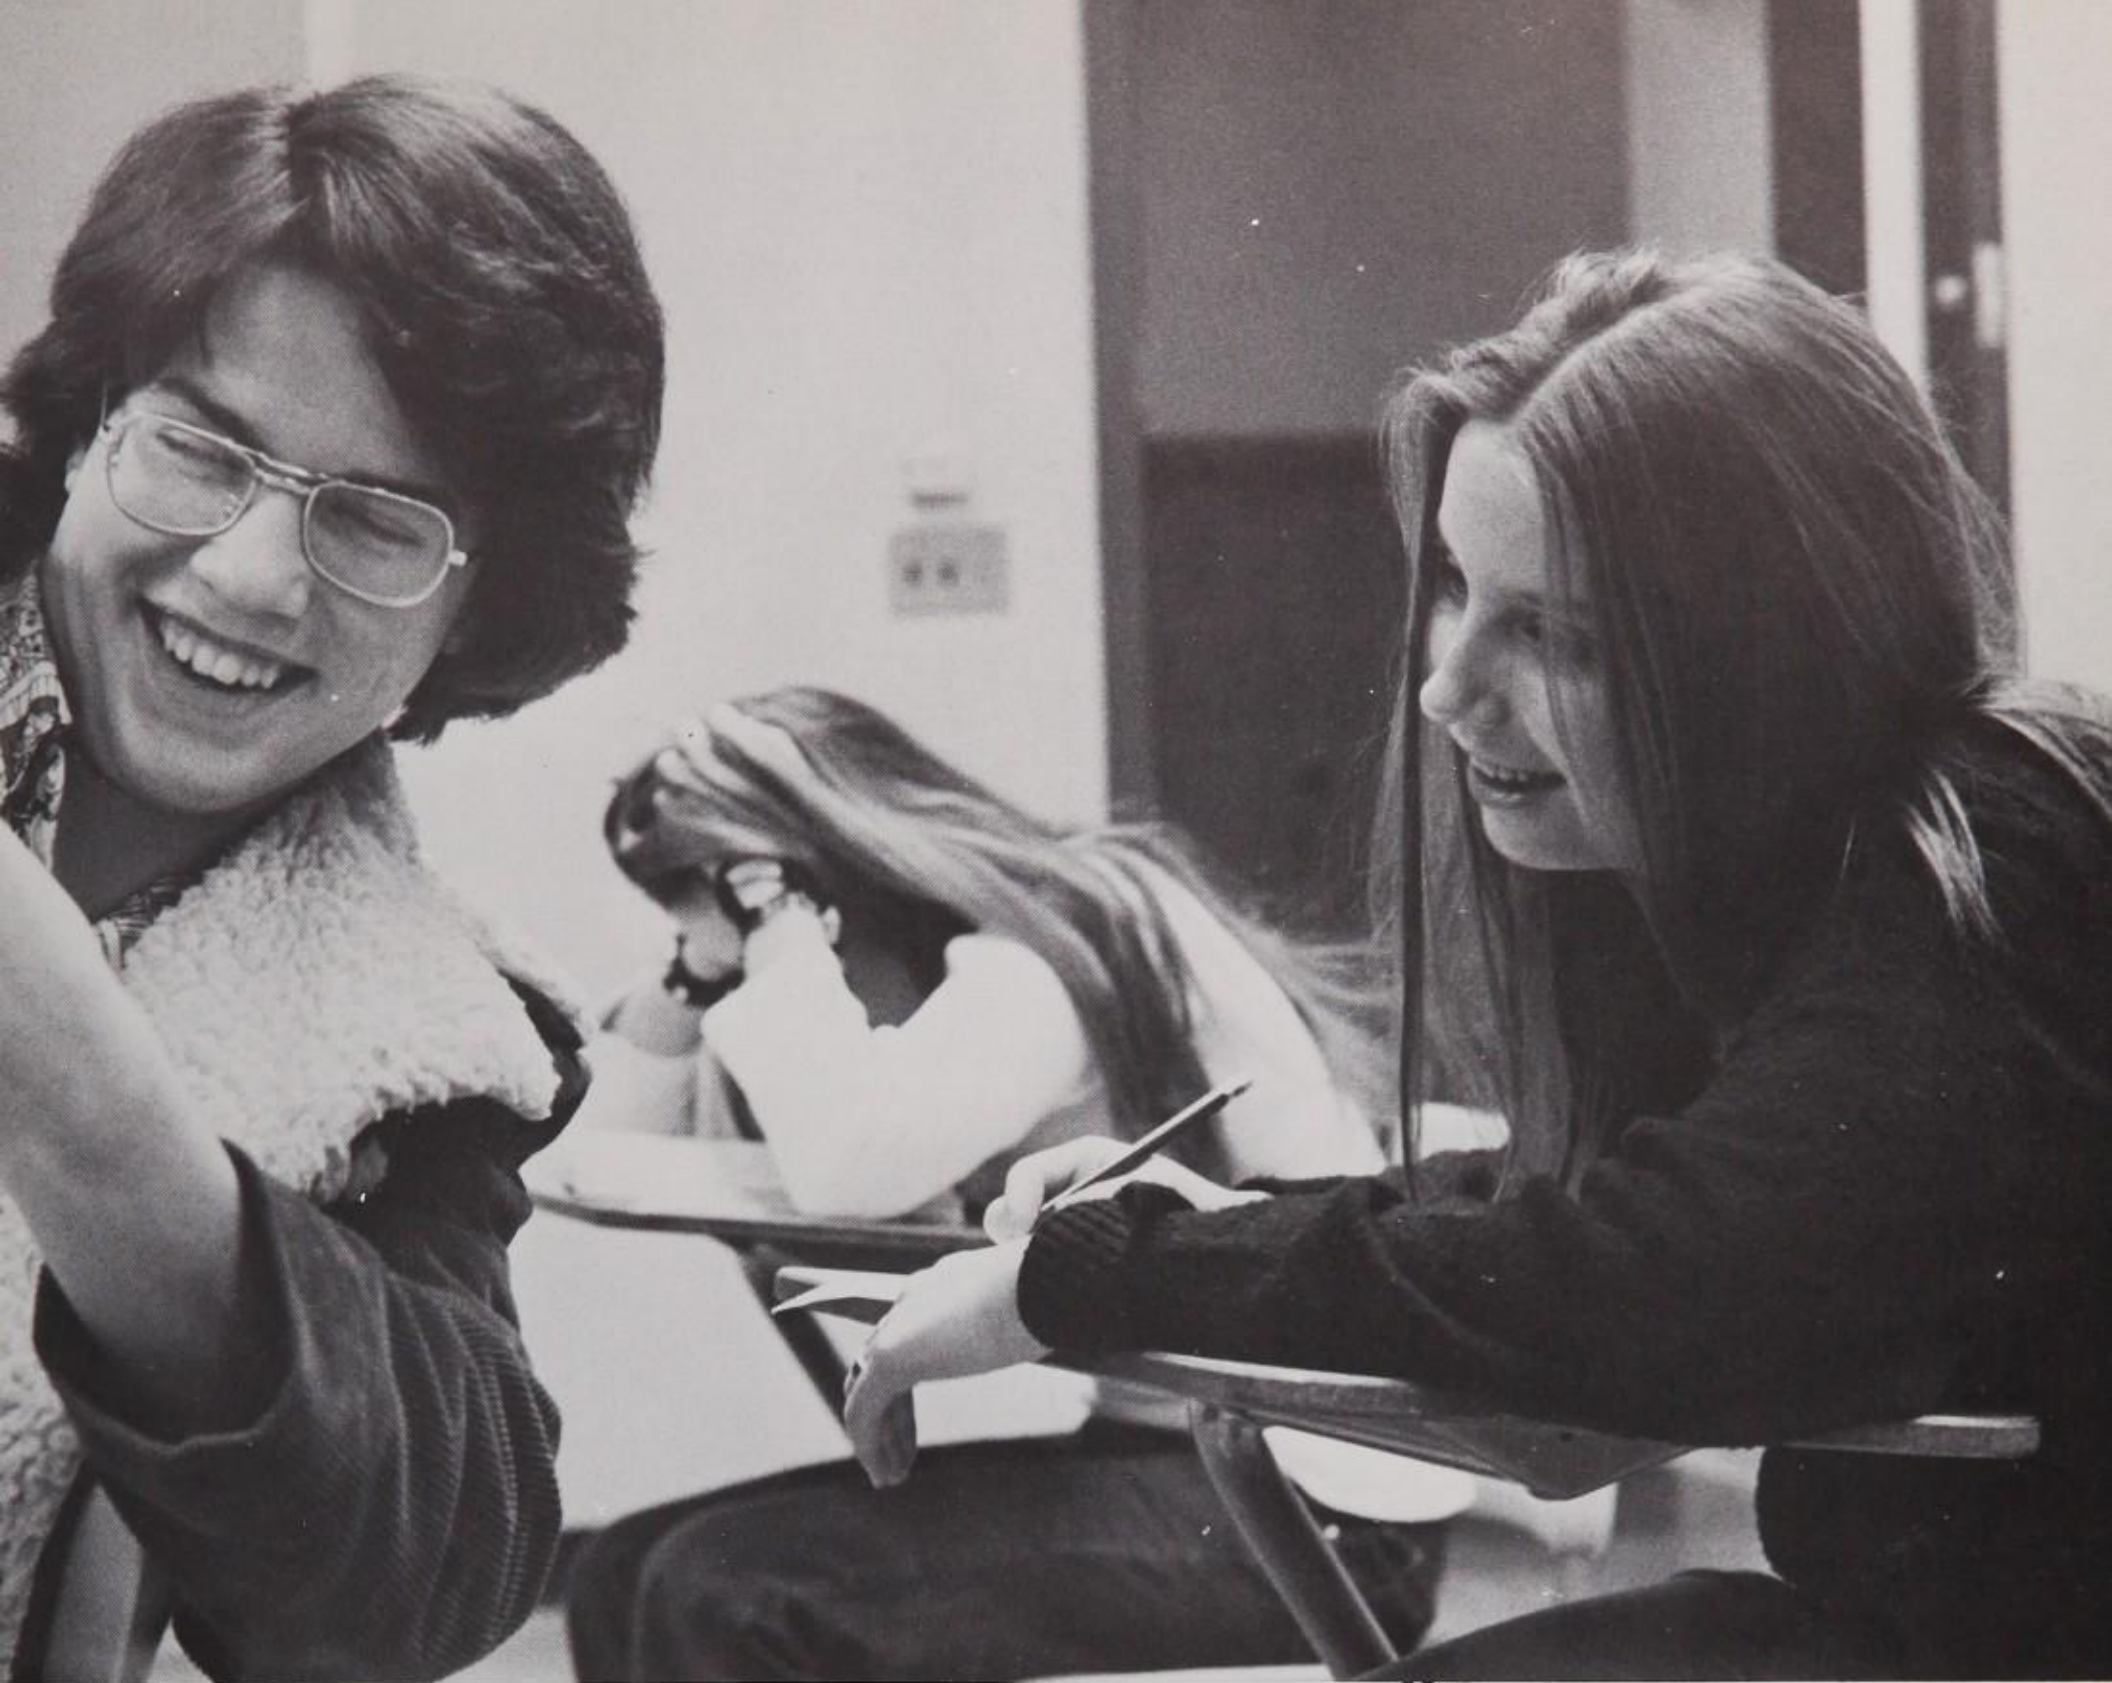

Diligent calculus students sport their brand new t-shirts to add to the atmosphere of their exam.

Just because you're not there on the day of the test doesn't mean you get to miss it altogether. Anne Hall concentrates at a later date.

Testmerized

"Class, tomorrow you will have a pop quiz over everything you have learned in triginomigeomebra 11. You will have ample time to complete the quiz—2½ minutes. You can only use 4 inch seaspray green number 1 pencils. Allright, class?"

There are very few students who can honestly say that they enjoy hearing a speech like this. The kind of kid who looks forward to an exam is probably non-existent! Yet we all know that testing is a must, don't we?? Otherwise our beloved teachers would have nothing to fill out every six-weeks to send to our parents. It's pretty important that students show what they have learned and tests seem to be the usual way to do this.

Beverly Sell gives last minute cramming a try even though her Spanish teacher, Mrs. Harris, is passing out tests.

Of course we know they wouldn't do this on a real test, but here Jim McDonough appears to be helping Barb Breunig.

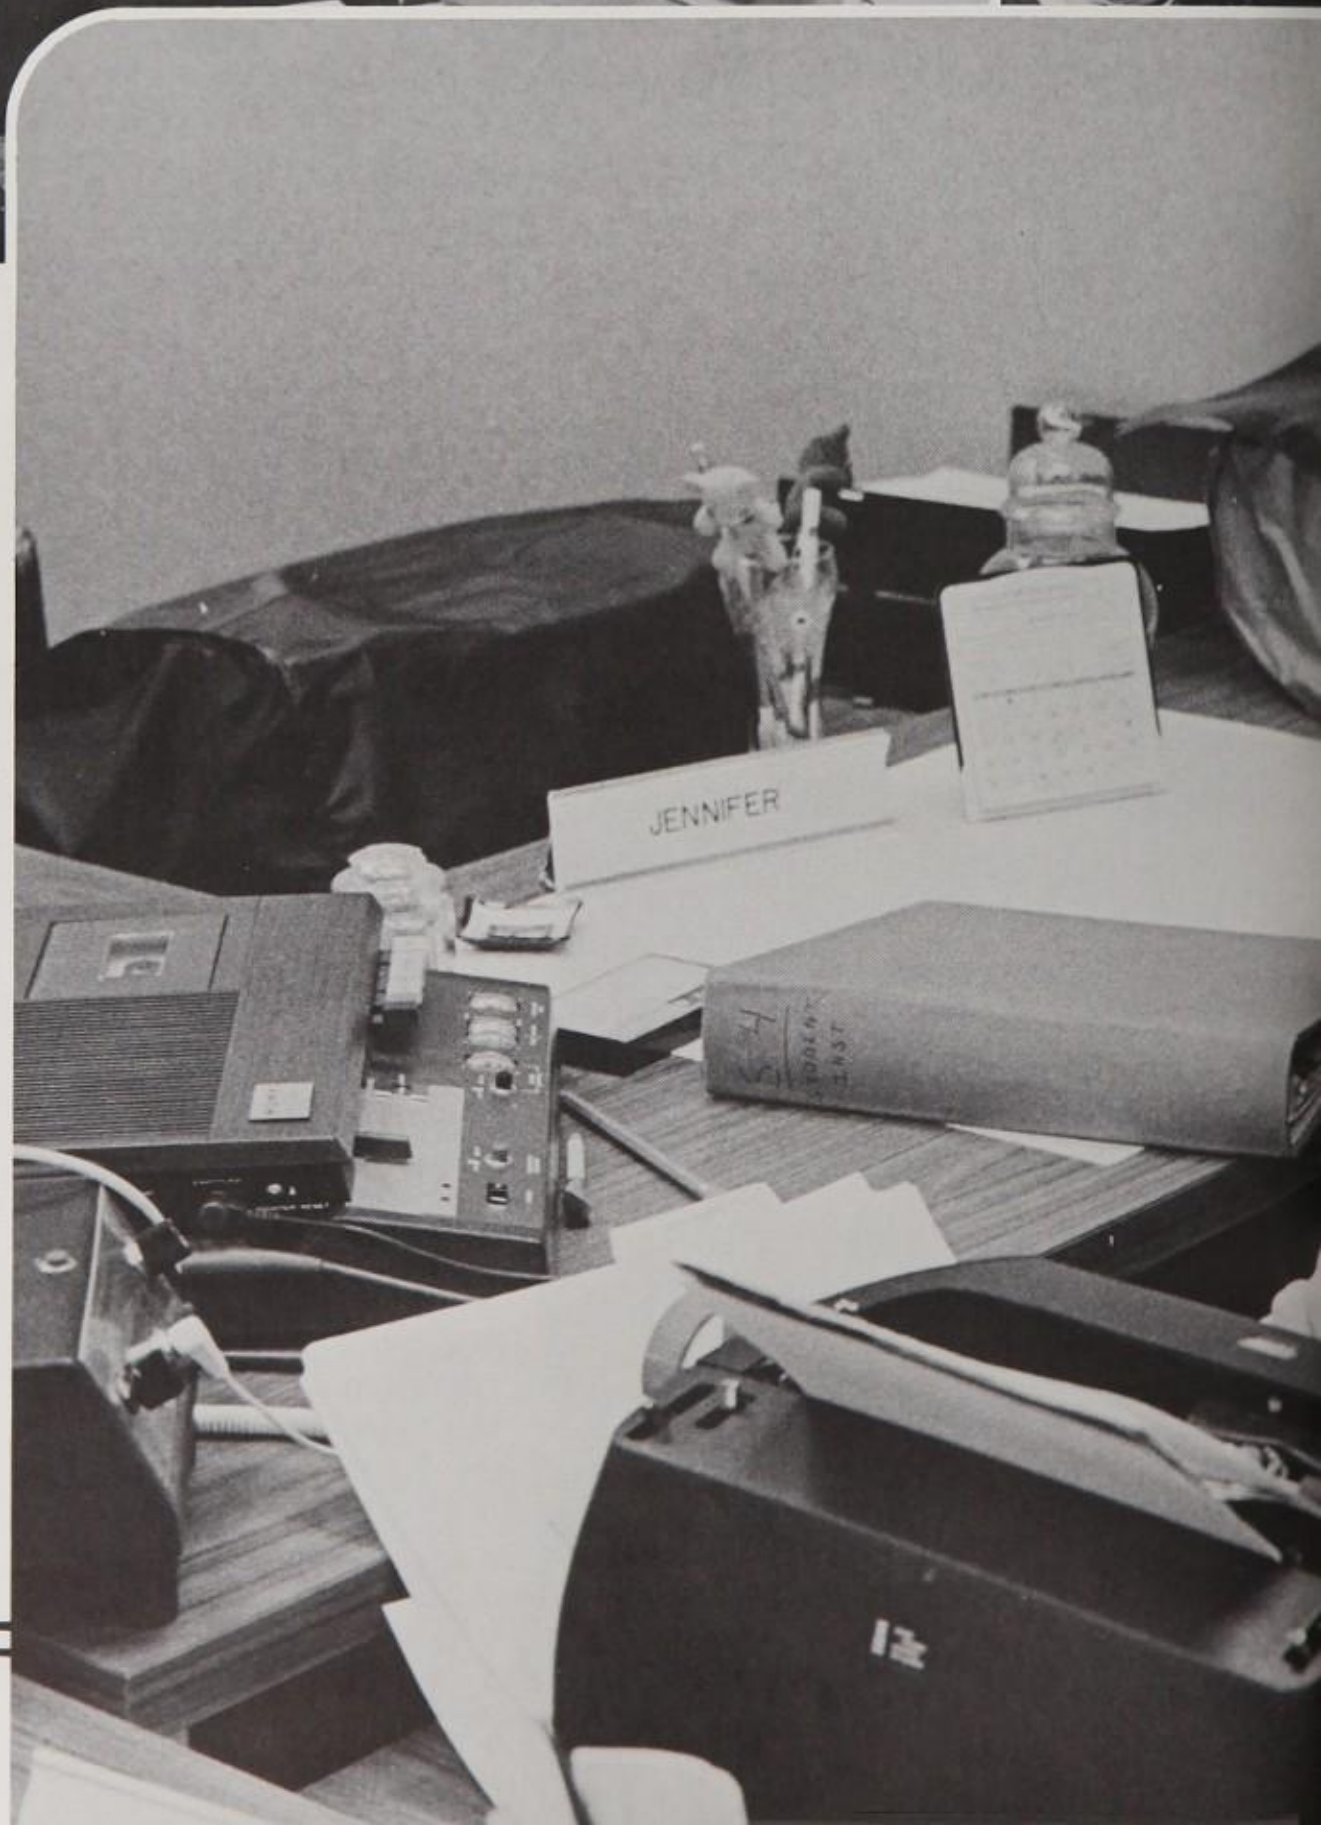

Tension mounts as students try to avoid mistakes on a semester typing examination.

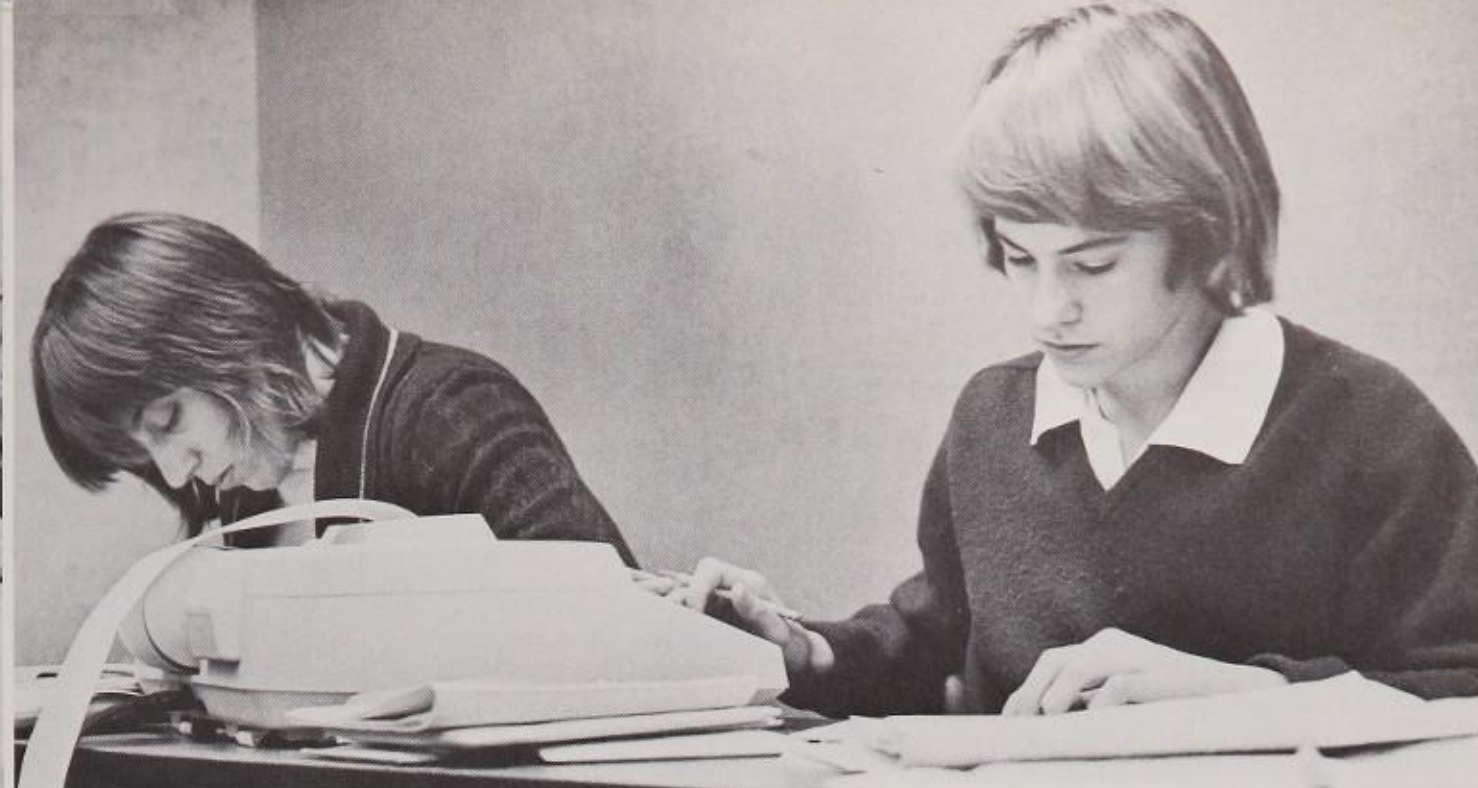

What would prominent businessmen do all day if they didn't have their competent and efficient secretaries to chase around the desk? Well, some of those bosses are in for a surprise when they find that they're chasing a six foot two, muscular guy around that desk. That's right! You don't have to be a female to be a secretary any longer.

There are many courses at the Career Center which instruct students in various business oriented subjects. A three hour complete secretarial course is offered as well as typing and shorthand. Business law, computer programming, business machines, and data processing are also popular classes.

Most occupations strengthen themselves when they form a central organization. OEA is a group which serves to unify many of these business students.

There is only one more course that could be added to further the cause of business students—judo, for the self-defense of secretaries.

Ron Harding and Doug McGrath acquaint themselves with various types of calculators.

Members of OEA clean this van both inside and out during their car wash.

Computers never make mistakes, do they? Kevin Marshall and Ernie Blackwell are just making sure!

One of the jobs of a secretary is to transcribe. Jenny Moffatt types from a tape recorded dictation.

How To Succeed In Business

If you want anything done right, you have to do it yourself! A rip in your new, old looking pair of jeans, snow in your T.V. set in the middle of May, your car in drive as you back into a ditch, finding the toothpaste hidden among the canned tuna at the store—you don't really need four college degrees to understand what went astray in these minor mishaps.

The sewing classes at NC are equipped to teach students how to mend rips as well as to sew the clothes themselves. The Career Center offers a course in radio and T.V. production which does not deal directly with fixing televisions and radios. Students enrolled in this class get basically a well-rounded background of production. Other courses at the Career Center include radio and T.V. repair, woods, drafting, electricity, general metals, auto mechanics, machine trades, welding, and construction trades. Marketing and merchandising classes, also at the Career Center, enable students to learn about the organization of supermarkets and department stores.

Jeff Todd, Julie Wirey, Mark Baker, and Greg Nichols produce a news broadcast.

This display window, designed by Andy Swiss, is sure to catch the customer's eye.

Leroy Munger is milling a slot on a Bridgeport milling machine. What?? In simpler terms he is drilling a hole in a piece of metal.

It's Up To You

Coffeemate seems to be a popular item as Tanya Berce rings it up on the cash register.

"Don't turn that dial!" Jeff Feezle enjoys being a "D.J."

Tender loving care is going into these pants that Hope Hopkins is making for her boyfriend.

One of the first steps to making a top is to cut out the pattern. Linda Lowe will soon be cutting up!

Nothing can stop Brent Ervin as he moves out with the ball.

The art of playing volleyball is demonstrated by Sophomore Cindy Amos.

No Pot ... Bellies

What better way is there to keep physically fit than to wrestle? Brad Holmes and Mike Tompkins are learning the basics of the sport.

Middle-aged old men have sagging stomachs. That's just common knowledge. You've never seen a NC student look like that, have you? The reason why is simple; they keep physically fit. The sophomores have no choice in the matter. They are required by the state of Indiana to take a year of P.E.

Well, how come the juniors and seniors also have such great physiques? (Some people think they do!) They all have made a habit of exercise since their sophomore year. The upper-classmen don't want to lose a good thing!

With anticipation of the next ring in his eyes, Jim Bradford gets into the swing of things.

Dawn Durret and Dana Powers engage in private conversation as they work on life-saving skills in swimming.

Moving into position, the Color Guard waits for the National Anthem to be played at Homecoming.

There are lots of khaki uniforms roaming around this school on Wednesdays. Those familiar uniforms are just one of the many things that distinguish members of the Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps, known as ROTC's.

ROTC classes are "never funny," but they do learn how to march instead of boring math, grammar or Spanish. They are the lucky people who went to Fort Collins, Colorado, marched in the Veterans Day parade, frantically directed scores of cars at Homecoming and won summer camp trophies. With all that to do, wearing uniforms can't be all that bad. In fact, the Volunteer Army at NC is alive and marching.

Summer awards are displayed by Junior John Kroeger, Sophomore Russel Gipe, and Juniors Tom Haynes and Neil White.

With helmets crashing and bodies straining, NC Panthers work for the BIG game.

Fields, courts, diamonds, lanes, and all those white lines.

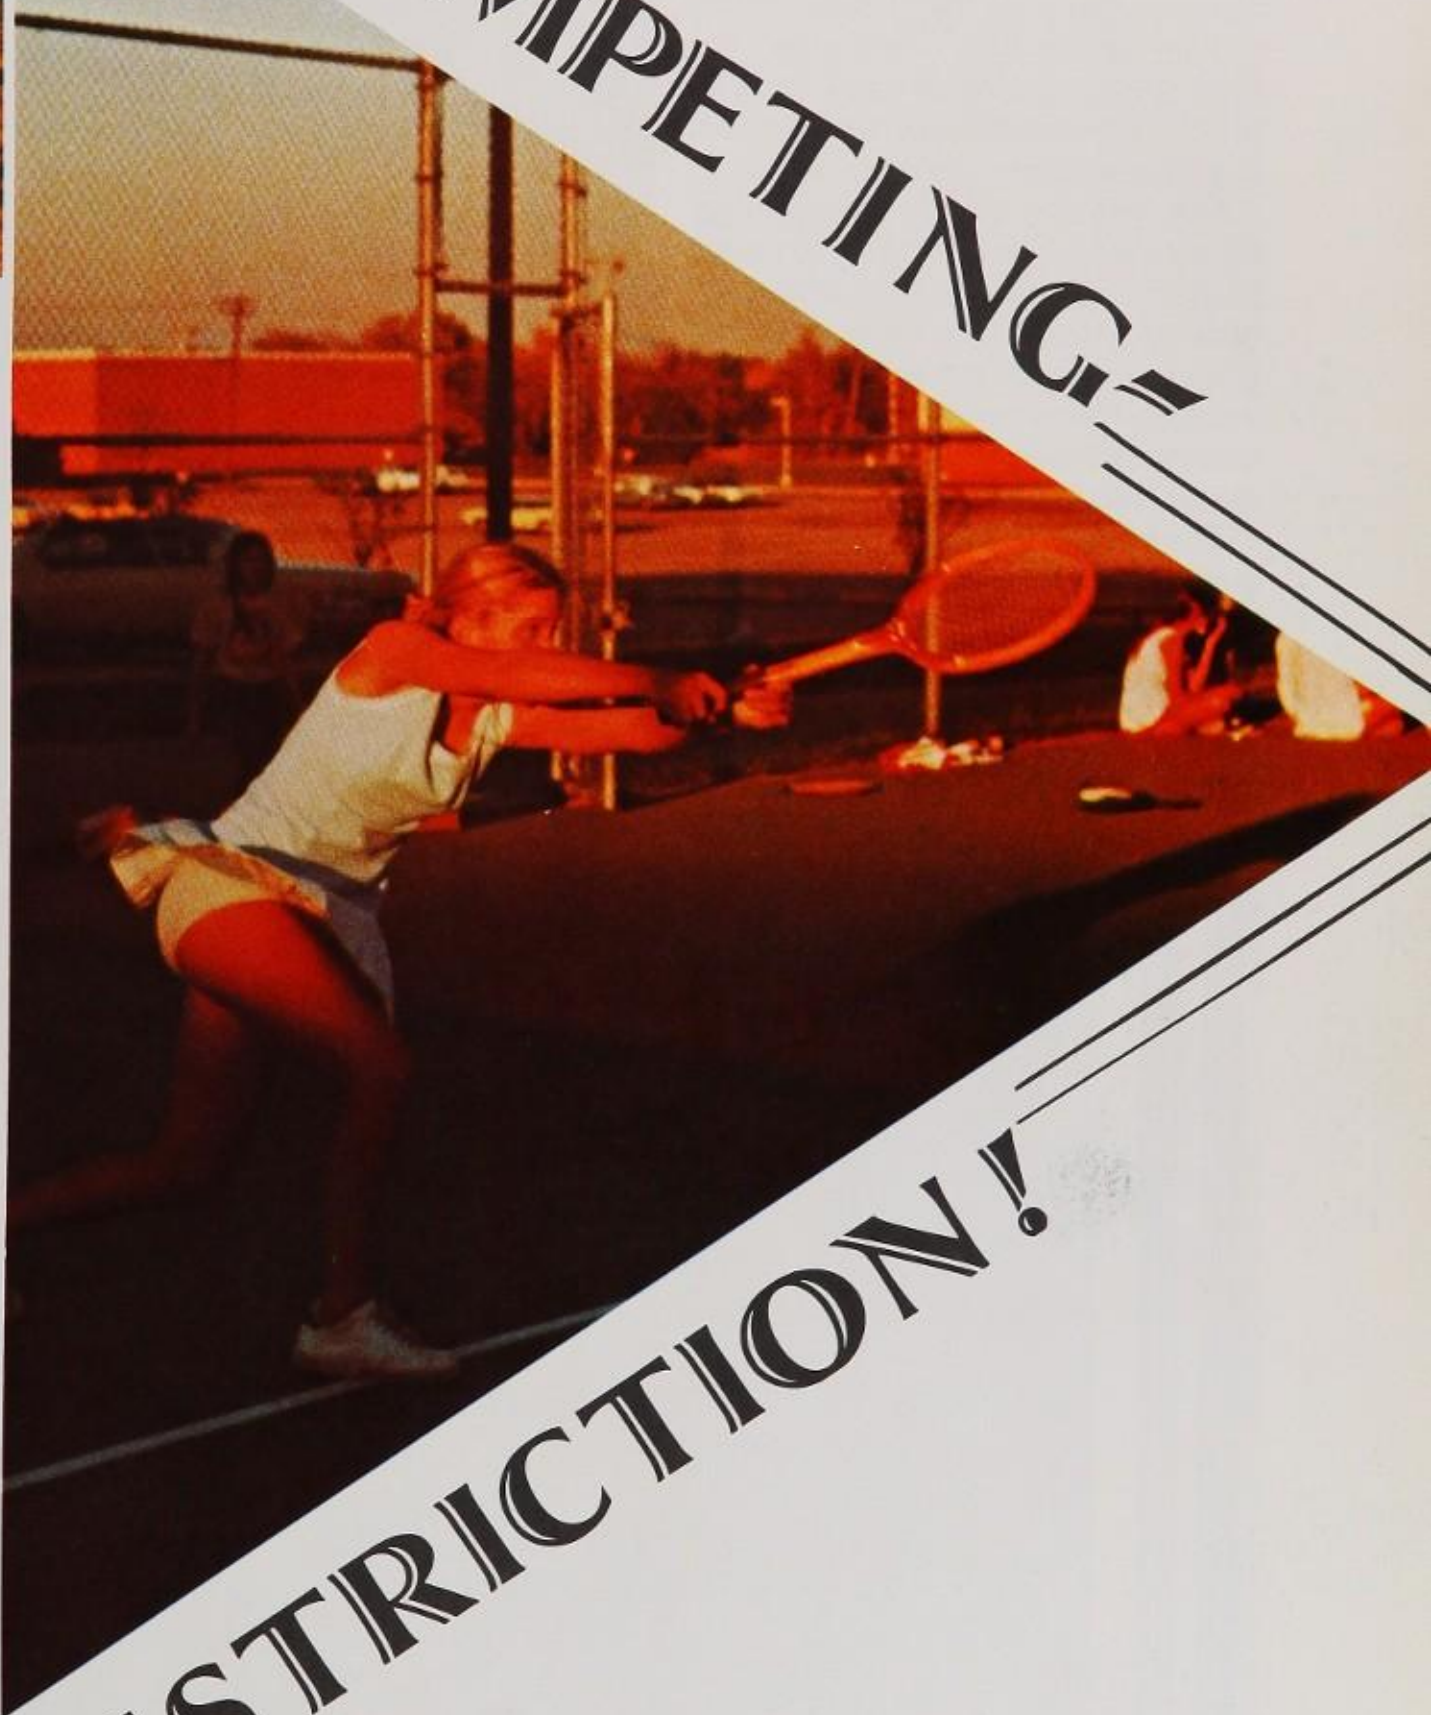

All sports have boundaries. In the fall, tennis players watch the white line to avoid faults, and the football quarterbacks must watch the sidelines while running a touchdown. In winter, basketball players try to rebound without stepping out of bounds; in spring, track records are set by jumping higher than the previous one.

Sports are full of restrictions. But bounded as they are, they still are a great way to get away from it all!

Gridiron anxiety

As the season ended, the players looked back at the events that occurred and perhaps even smiled a bit. Starting with a crowded stadium at the first game, the players noticed that the crowd began to diminish with each passing game.

Scott Smith, midway through the season, came on strong as he led the team to victory on the gridiron. Smith injured his leg later and handed his quarterback position back to Alan Burkett who led the spirited panthers to a double victory late in the season.

The first thought of Homecoming brought anxiety to the team members. Their fear of no school spirit or student backing almost made them dread the greatest event of the schedule. Their thoughts were proved in vain, for an enormous crowd appeared to view the defeat N.C. forced upon Southport.

The boys enjoyed the awards banquet and according to Dave Gangstad, the highlight of the season was the "Coach Roast" where the players gave Coach Weaver a verbal bruising.

The reserve team, consisting of sophomores and a few juniors, had the ability this year to achieve a close-knit team. Perhaps this was the main reason for their successful season. After experiencing the first two outsets, the team went on to complete a seven game winning streak. Well, guess they got it together!

Have you ever wondered who the coaches are for intramural football? It's easy to say who—the entire team. This is a definite necessity, for without a team there is no coach, and without a coach there are no plays; therefore, without the plays they cannot win. So you see the importance of teamwork.

The bowler's tenseness starts with the approach and reaches the climax as the pins begin to tumble.

"Defense is our main strength and we also work well as a team in all aspects of the game," said Miss Maines, the coach of the girls' basketball team.

Some of the outstanding players, who made up the starting five, were Lisa Harris, Kyle O'Brien, Kathy Walker, Judy Kilbury, and Lorrie Knierim. This team was one of the most successful in the area, as they placed second in the Lebanon invitational. There is even a possibility that girls may be accepted into the I.S.H.A.A. within a few years.

Intramural bowling is the only coed intramural sport North Central has. Here was a good way for all grades of bowlers to get together and throw a few strikes. Some of the teams were Mean Machine, The Rookies, and Bowling for Dollars.

Front Row: D. Wilkerson, K. Williams, B. Alford. Second Row: L. Knierim, K. Walker, N. Bates, B. Rafferty. Third Row: Miss Maines, L. Harris, J. Kilbury, K. O'Brien.

Balance is a very important aspect of a bowler's game. Deborah McInturff uses her arm to counter-balance her throw.

Intramural coeds

Whatever label intramural bowling goes by—a sport, an event, a club, or an organization—Jay Tzucker is proficient at it.

Sometimes it takes that extra surge of strength to assure a captured rebound. Lisa Harris gained control of this offensive rebound and put the shot up for two points.

When a player sees a chance for a "fast break," she runs toward her home basket to make ready for the play. Kyle O'Brien was ready when a full-court pass came her way.

A steady pace, for the most part, is essential for long distance running. Jack Dan and Mike Dudley have successfully achieved this set pace.

"I forgot to set the watch!"

One of the best fall teams in the '74 season was the cross country team. Though hard work and practices extended from early summer to late in the fall, it was, according to members, a "season of seconds," as the team placed second in most of the meets. But everything paid off in the end as NC placed in the county meet.

This year's harriers had a really great season with many outstanding juniors; next year promises to be even better.

Like most cross country meets, this race started out with all the runners close together. Toward the finish, Don Baker spurts ahead to break the string first.

Sprinting through the fields and being able to choose their own path makes practice a bit more bearable for Dave Sigal and John Underwood.

Paired up for this final doubles match, Ralph Kahn is dumbfounded as Rick Hurst saves the shot.

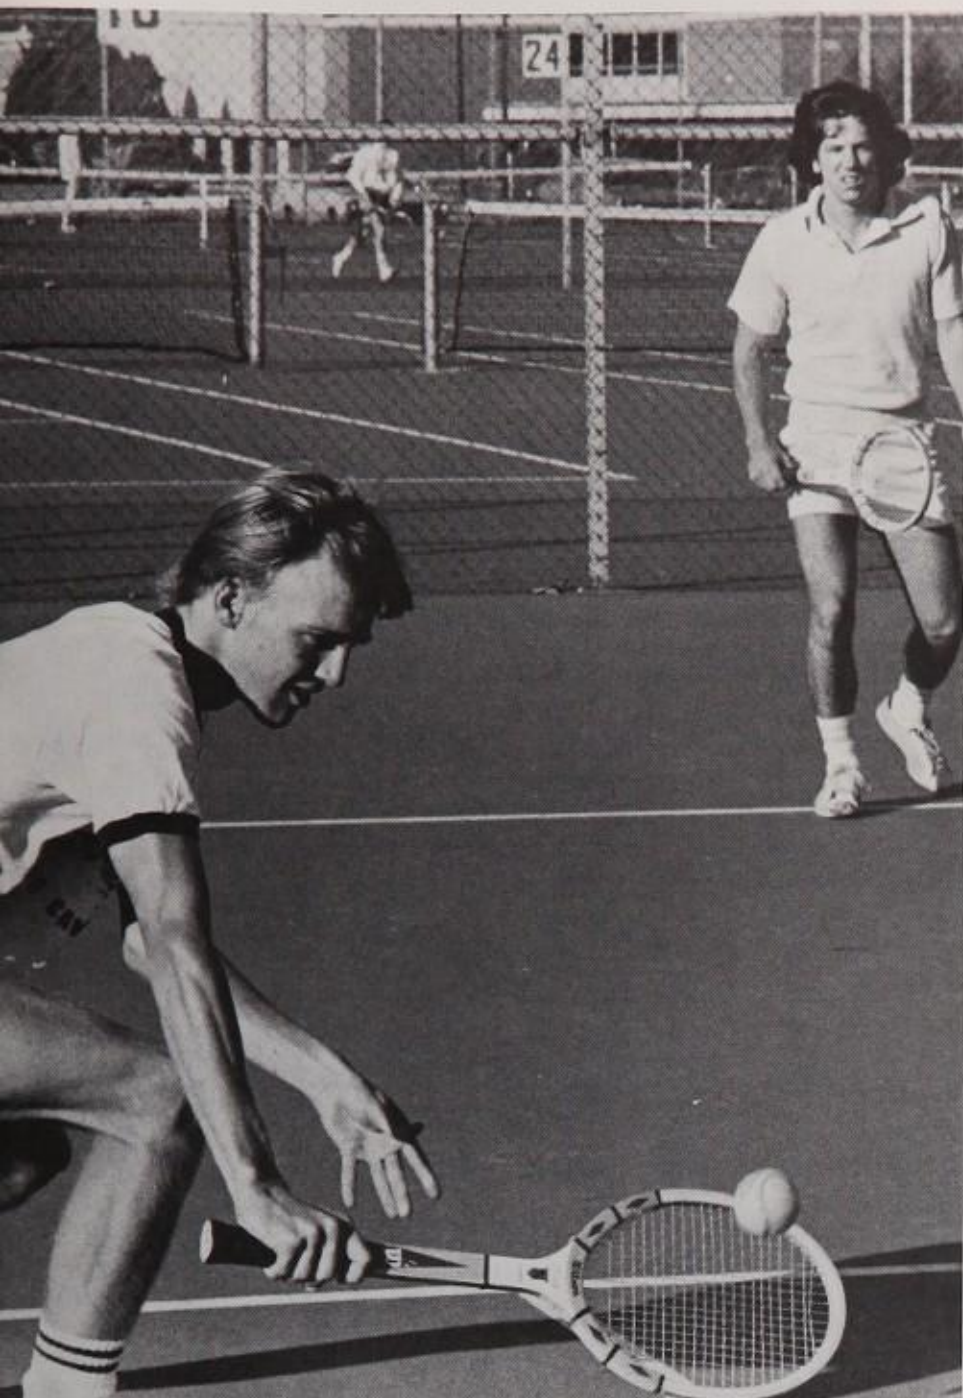

It's hard to believe that with all that goes on during the tennis season, the team has time to win all of its tournaments. Each player tried his best to add a little class to the team's identity. Ralph Kahn thought the team needed a new look and wore his snazzy swim suit to practice. Hats were also in. With Bill Bastian and Rick Hurst in their Redford hats and Jim Clark in his Dutchboy, the team revolved around today's styles. Coach Shirley manages to add dignity to the team by smoking a cigar after each victory. Jim Clark took over all the responsibilities the team had, although he wasn't on the team. He was the all-time cheerleader, opening courts official, and in charge of tennis balls and of getting Coach Shirley's cigars. Gerald Benjamin was initiated as an honorary member of the team because he "wanted to be on a winning team."

Time to win

Ralph Kahn, a dedicated tennis player, runs his legs off in order to get to this set point.

Surprised at his victory, Rick Hurst walks on air as Ralph Kahn congratulates him.

Hang on to your pants

"Chew 'em up" was Coach Elliott's favorite phrase as she handed bubble gum out to her gang before each meet. Perhaps it was to make them ready for the guys who came around and tried to take the girls' extra tennis balls from the sides of their tennis panties. This situation was embarrassing to say the least.

The experienced tennis players laughed as sky lobs were hit over the fence by the kids wearing the why'd-it-do-that look on their faces. Just another embarrassing situation.

The girls' track sprinters nearly became swimmers as torrents of rain poured down during their practices and meets. Ignoring this drawback, the girls, led by Justin and Frayer, piled into their bus raring to go to their meets. The runners often had to choose between skinned knees from cinder tracks or a slower time. Due to the fact that their sweat pants were several sizes too large, the girls were often seen racing around the track hanging onto their pants for dear life, which probably caused a slower time. Chanting several ridiculous cheers on the long bus ride home helped boost their morale. The team suffered setbacks during the season but supported Ruth Ann Green all the way to the finals.

Everyday athletes

Practicing his starting position, Dereck Laing works on his take-off speed.

Events of unusual nature took place along with the regularly scheduled activities for the team. Parties were held occasionally by the athletes to help keep their spirits high. Along with parties and after hour gatherings, it has been told that one of the Panthers performed a running display as he streaked the 440 yd. dash in a record time. These are only a few of the "out-standing performances by the every-day athletes."

A balance of good times and bad scenes was experienced by the team. It was a lot of work, but at one time or another each player had fun, and that's what it is all about.

This long-distance runner, Hal Justice, wears his warm-up uniform while practicing to loosen his muscles faster.

All Together Now

Daring as it may be, this opponent seems to find that stepping on Doug Lee's foot is the only way to hold him back.

The County, Sectional champion North Central basketball team soared to a near record number of wins, 5 new team records, and the highest State Tourney finish ever. The Panthers completed the 74-75 season at 19-8; including a 8-1 in tournament play. NC averaged 67 points a game or 5 more than their opponents. Coincidentally the largest margin of loss for the year was 5 points in the final game vs. Washington.

Kevin Jones led the roundballers with new school records in most points one season (478), shooting percentage (.594), and rebounds (375); and had a 17.4 scoring average. Dave Wolff, "Wolffie", recorded the all-time season net point high at 599. The star forward also averaged 14.2 per game. Both Kevin and David made All-County, Sectional, Regional, Metro, and Honorable-Mention All-State.

The narrow overtime defeat to Marion, eventual State Champs, proved to be a heartbreaker. The Panthers edged #6 Kokomo early in the season. Big tourney wins include a come-from-behind victory over Lawrence and a revenge defeat of Tech for the Sectional trophy.

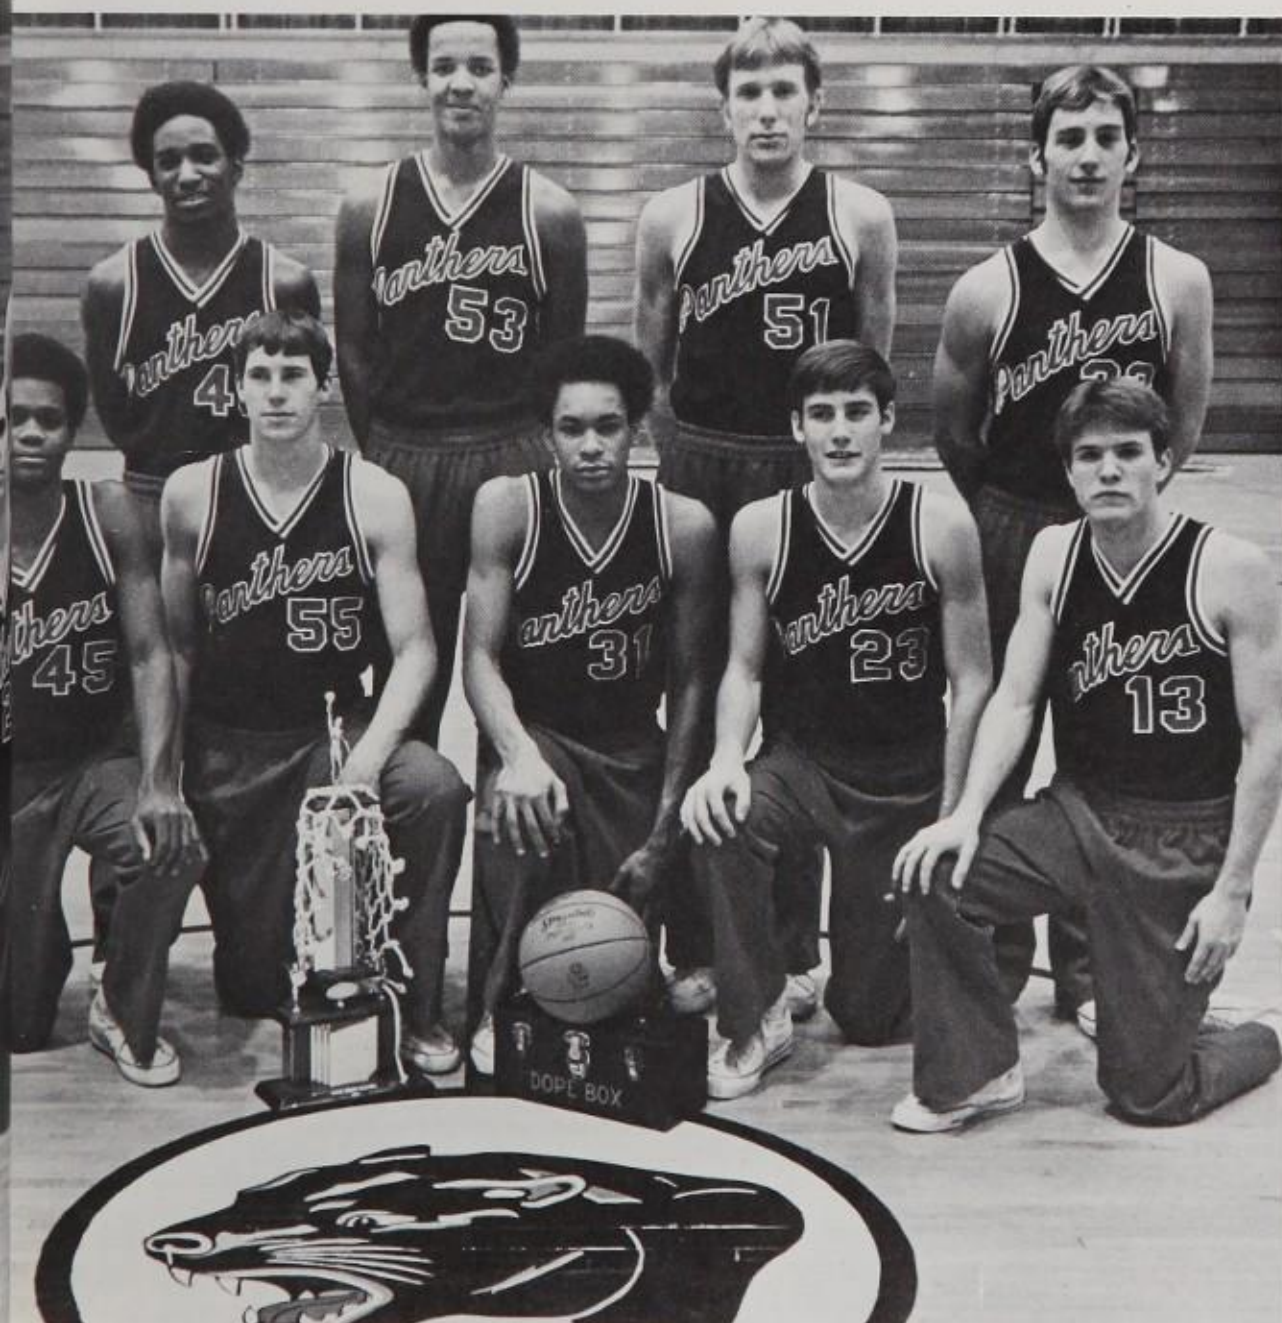

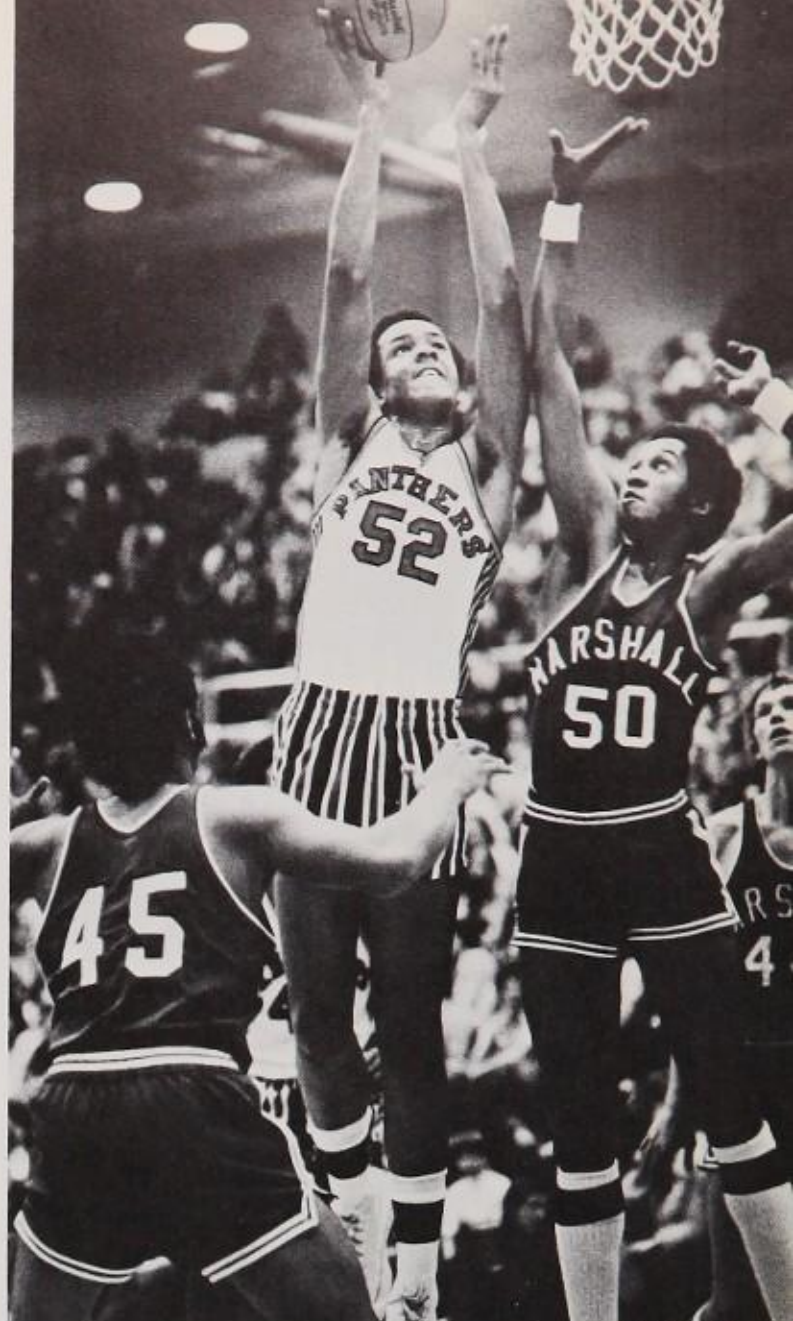

Assist leader Mark Baker, junior Dave Sherron, and Doug 'Larue' Lee received All-County and All-Sectional honors. Lee also made All-Regional.

Driving up the lane against the Bloomington North Cougars, Dave Sherron scores as Mark Baker watches in the background.

Determined to get down court, Mark Baker keeps the ball out of Anderson's reach.

Taking an offensive rebound, Kevin Jones goes up for a lay in and another two points.

Basketball is one sport where running and keeping muscles in tone are an off-season must. To keep this in mind, Coach Walter sponsors a summer program for future players.

Intramural basketball seems to draw people's attention more than any other extra-curricular activity. Long before the season begins, the teams are formed and the tedious process of choosing a name begins.

You'd be surprised how much time and thought goes into finding an appropriate name for the team. The name has to represent the entire team and also have a certain amount of pazaz to attract attention. Most of the names do fit these qualifications.

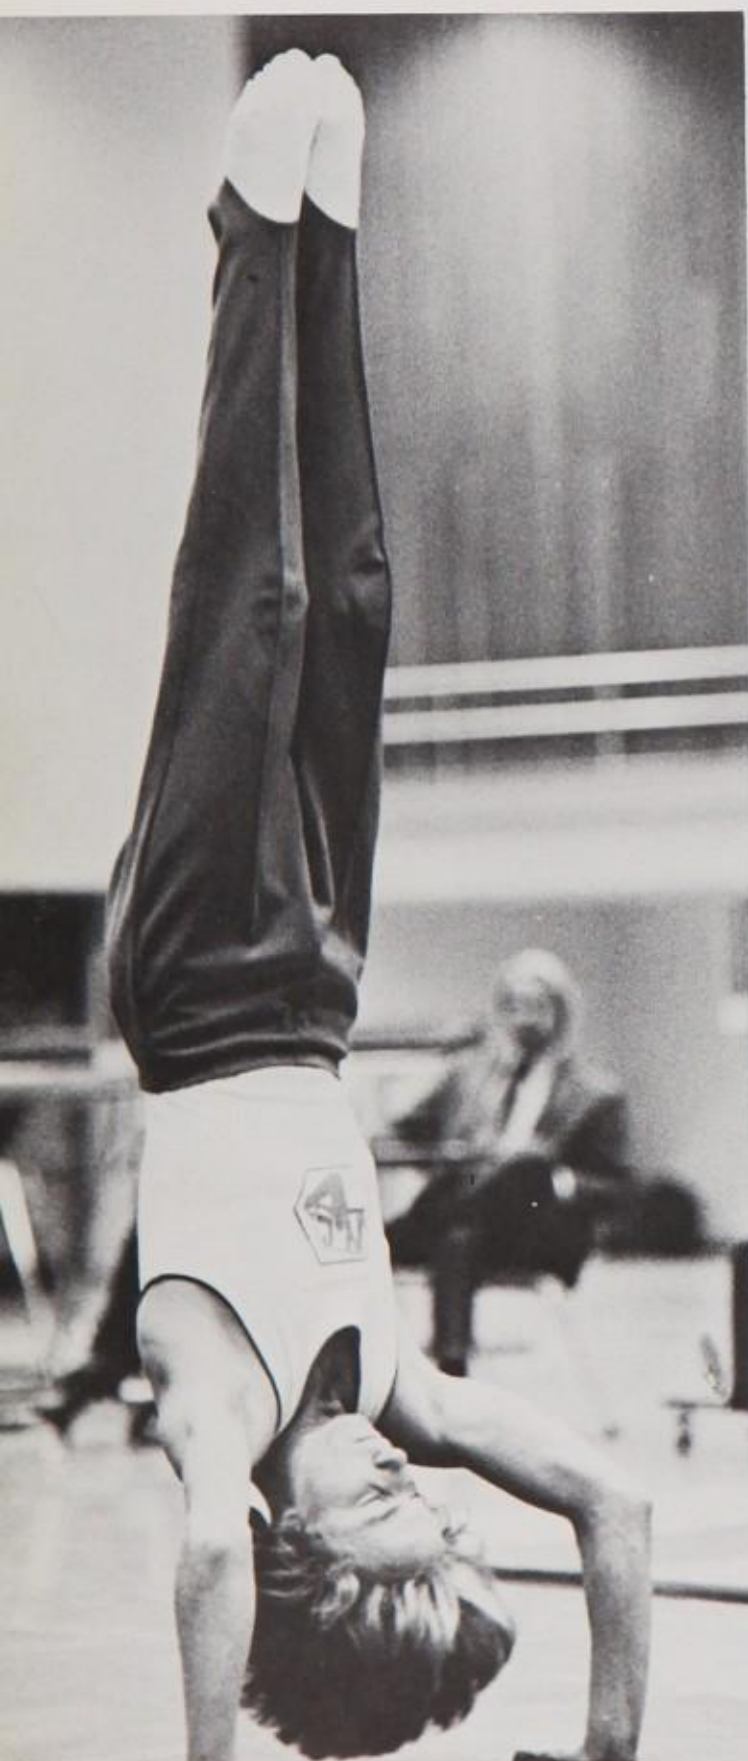

"Salt and Pepper" is a perfect example of the importance of the names. The team consists of four white players and four black players. Another appropriate title is the "Pygmies," who failed to produce any height. As the name suggests, the "Born Losers" had a rough season. Some of the more peculiar names are: "Sons of Scumbuddie," "Headhunters," and the "Spaced Cadets." In every group there are always a few that stay with tradition such as "NBA," "Stars" and "Pros."

Led by their fearless coach's battle cry, "It's only pain!," the members of the boys gymnastics team have banded together to produce a successful season. Each gymnast had his own special quirks and superstitions which helped him become victorious. Larry Tucker never performs without wearing his silver name bracelet. Ron McKallip will never admit that he is hurt but continues to perform even though suffering. Jim Laurent is known as a rag doll because his joints are so weak. Teamwork is so important to Kip Goode and Chip Walker that if one isn't at a meet, the other doesn't perform very well! On the other hand, Matt Leshar doesn't do much talking, but just keeps getting stronger every day. Although the team is one of distinct personalities, the members have worked together to make the team a winner.

The girls' gymnastics team proved what "team effort" means to a winning season. Coach Lewellen worked the team hard and concentrated on developing depth in each of the four events. Heavy with freshmen and sophomores, the team has shown remarkable improvement and should continue to be a powerful contender for several years.

One of the high points of the season was winning the Columbus Tourney, defeating the defending state champs. "Our team shows difficulty and creativity along with their ability to execute their routines," stated Mrs. Lewellen.

Picture the wrestler in your mind. Overgrown, not-too-smart, and mentally uncoordinated, right? If this is what you see, you couldn't be more wrong. Each person on the team must have enough brainpower for both quick thinking and near-perfect coordination.

Wrestling isn't just a lot of physical strength. It takes a great deal of practice to learn the numerous moves needed to win each match. The theory of mind-over-muscle plays a great part in over-powering the larger opponents.

Picture a Wrestler

The "spike" shot is a very crucial shot for the offensive player. Paula Hottinger sets up this attempt as Ruth Ann Greene positions herself to slam it.

Practicing bumps is a daily routine for the girls. Kathy Brannam, who has already mastered this technique, still strives for perfection.

Chalk up another one for the girls' volleyball team. An undefeated season placed the varsity team in the regionals where they were defeated in the final game.

Throughout the schedule, casualties were occurring right and left. Lisa Harris, after playing in a rough football game, came to practice with an injured arm. Kim Hankins, who pulled a few tendons, was seen hobbling onto the gym floor for a game at great cost to her knee. In a violent game, Becky Alford was forced to leave the floor when her eye was cut during the action. She wore a black eye as a memory of that day for some time.

The girls were encouraged by many fans; and soon after the season had started, a regular cheering block was established. The team's boyfriends were part of the cheering block for the sectional tournament too; as they put it, "Give it a little class!"

Chalk up another casualty

The elevation of the server's arm determines the aim of the serve. Lisa Harris and Paula Hutteringer practiced for accuracy of this elevation.

The horrible memory of a heart-breaking putt such as this would be long-remembered by any girls' or boys' golf team member.

Have you ever seen a lightening bug on the golf course? Next time you do, be sure to get a closer look—it might just be one of the County Champs, Gus Wampler—wearing one of his colorful hats. No one is really sure why he wears them. Could it be Gus is trying to make himself noticed so he can escape those flying golf balls? Maybe Wampler would like Reed Hutchens to know he is not a tree; or could he possibly be jealous of Bill Hamilton's hole-in-one at Bloomington Cascades? He could be protecting himself from the all-weather weather they play in by trying to keep his head warm.

To add a bit of class to the girl's golf team, the squad devised an unmistakable trademark. They took their speckled nail polish and decorated all of the golf tees. Perhaps they are merely trying to outdo Gus Wampler and his array of hats.

This is just one of many difficult situations Tom Beam encounters while playing the ball where it lies.

Executing the necessary form is essential to Kyle O'Brien's expert golf game.

This is not quite sea spray, but it's as close to it as Jamie Sohn is going to get on the golf course.

Julie Hudson, Julie Selig, Jamie Sohn, Kyle O'Brien, Stacey Smith, Marianne Eckhart, Nancy Johnson.

Exactly what does it take to be an outstanding player? Could it be a certain size like that of Hal Gaalema who receives laughter from the crowds each time he walks onto the diamond to relieve a pitcher? It could be Bill Burgess' fighting spirit which is said to have put the "claws in the panthers." Might it be the trait of agitation to arouse enthusiasm that Doug Meyers practiced each time the team took the field? Or could it be a person with no outstanding humorisms; one who is cool and calm in all situations. John "Steady Teddy" Wilson is such a person. It's very hard to say what it does take to be an outstanding player—when the entire team stands out as being great!

A grandstand play is made here by a Panther against this Arlington Knight. The game was a sure win from the start.

Third Row: S. Hullet, D. McElroy, J. Wilson, Coach Bradley, Coach Schmucker, D. Meyers, B. Garrison, R. Rust, K. Stahl.

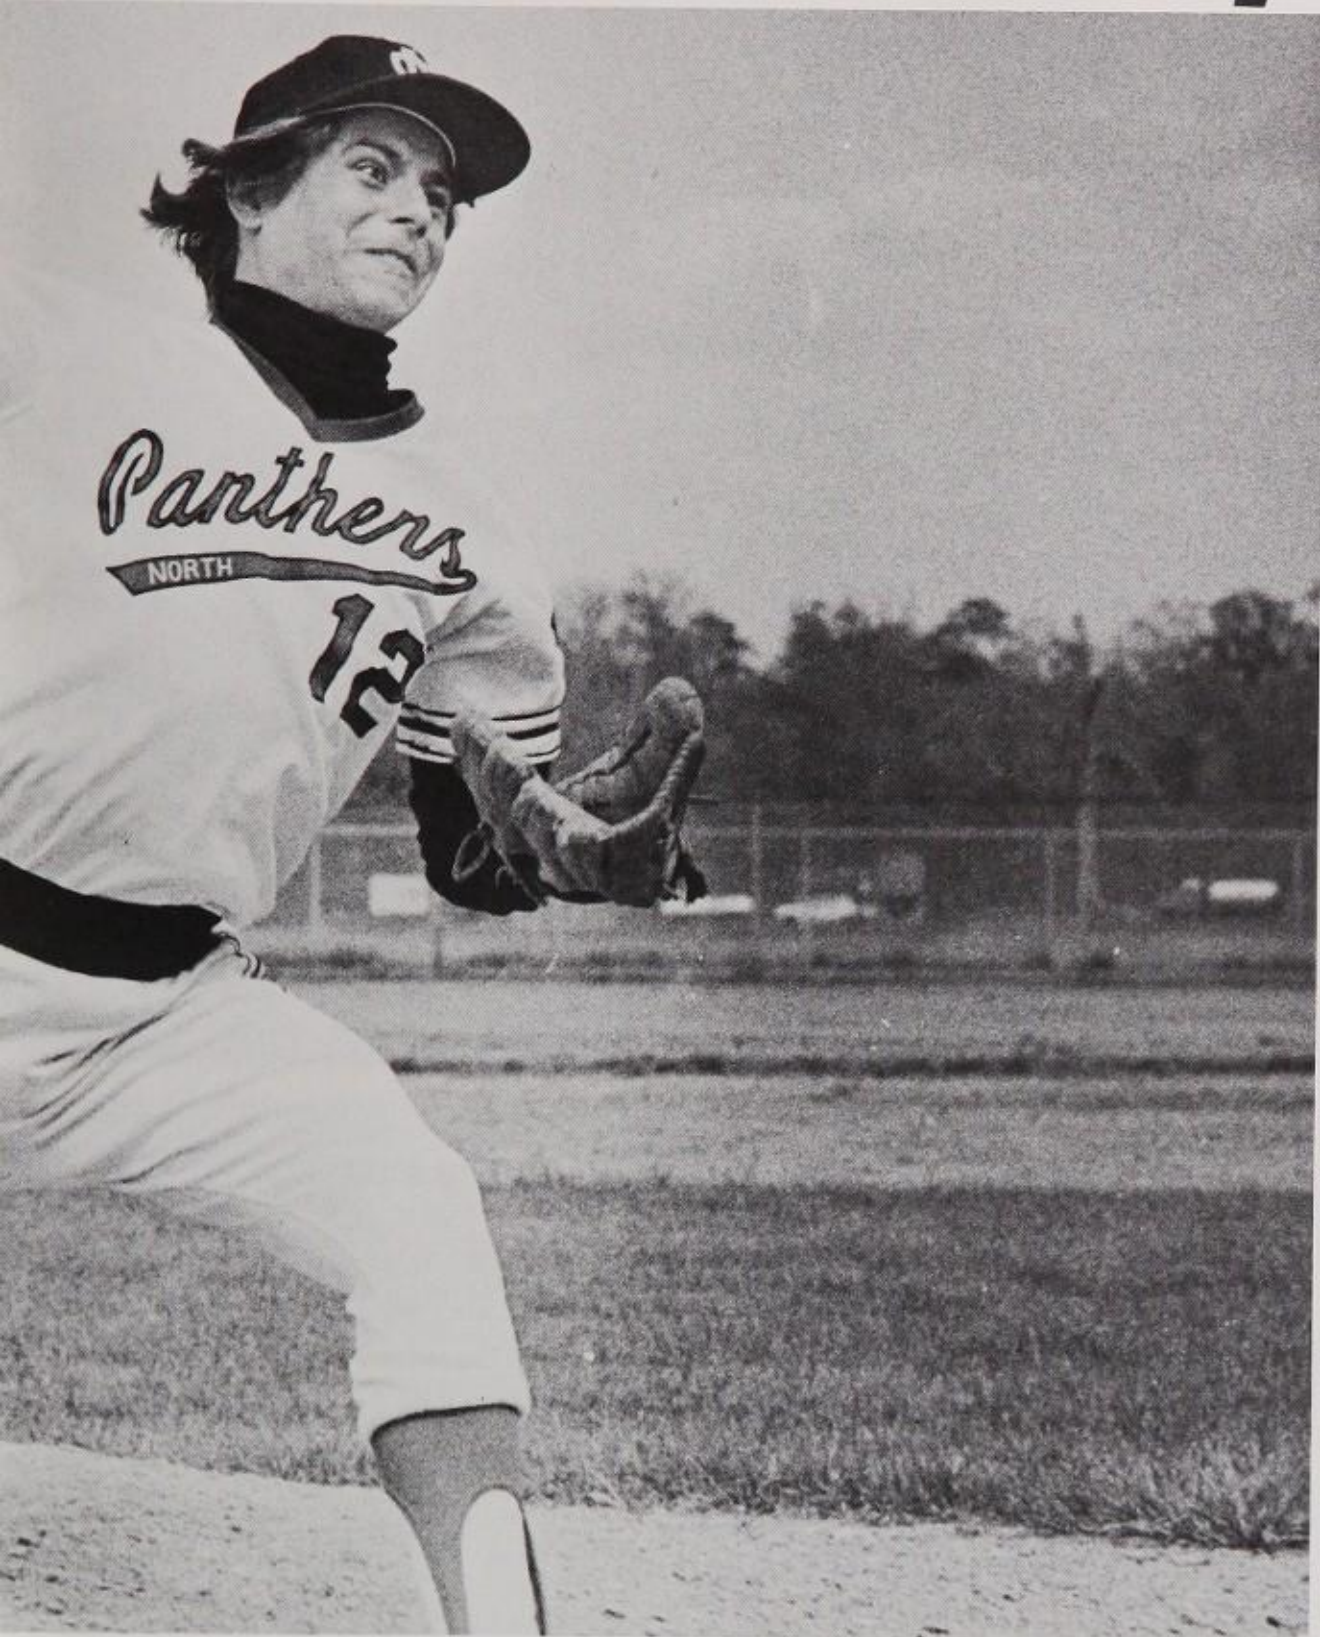

A clean uniform is hard for Bill Tait to keep with all of the sliding he does.

At the release of this wind-up, Kirk Stahl succeeds in his fourth strike-out of the game.

It's hard to say!

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" is the slogan for the swim teams this year. In order to make their task of swimming seven miles a day easier, the varsity team often practiced with the lights off, and pitched in for a breakfast of cereal and doughnuts after their 6:30 A.M. practice.

All was not fun and games, though, as shown by both the boys and girls teams' success. To improve their swimming techniques, the girl's team studied swimming movies, although, of course, some became more interested when Mark Spitz was the star!

Lack of SPIRIT may be the gripe of Student Council, but Judy Paton really gets things jumping.

There sure are LOTS of people around NC—and the differences between them go on and on and on.

Start with those most bounded by NC, the faculty and administration.

Follow up with the students. Sophomores, juniors, and then seniors. Lots going on here—getting student spirit up, getting straight A's, finding the right college, just getting to know others.

But whatever the differences, all are stuck in the middle of the goings-ons. And that's good 'cause the differences don't matter so much anymore.

College night gave Ann Mahrtdt, Susan Fansler and Jan Poteet a chance to get a closer view of their college choices.

Broadening Our Horizons

The alternative education program is on a three year trial run. There have been a lot of opinions regarding the program. Junior Bruce Meyer shares his: "Like a band of lost dutchmen, the people involved in the Alternative Program were flung from the security of sitting quietly behind the school desk into the constant drama of the outside world. Suddenly the beautiful dream of free education became the sweat and reality of trying to learn how to compete in a new system that pushed more work at them in one week than they had seen in a whole semester of regular classes. Struggling under the burden of added work and outside pressure the students began their trek to learning with great excitement and thirst for knowledge. For the students were not held back by being told how to learn, they were given the freedom to learn."

Hopefully, the Alternative Education Program will help North Central students striving for knowledge become the leaders of tomorrow.

As a get acquainted session, 40 members of the Alternative Education Program participated in a retreat. Ping Pong was a popular activity for Dr. Thompson, Mr. Meyers and other students.

Bach to Rock -- At His Command

They speak loudly and carry little sticks that control approximately one-eighth of the school's students. Who are they? Mr. Rhinesmith, Head Band Director, Mr. Wagner, Assistant Band Director and Mr. Dennis, Orchestra Conductor. To these men, their music is serious business. Consequently they are inspirations to their more serious students.

Being a conductor or director isn't easy. Most of ours have had conducting experience and are qualified musicians themselves. It takes dedication to be a conductor or director. This dedication is usually the driving force that uses students to their fullest potential. A conductor or director has to be a good educator. He has to be able to communicate and get along with the students. It helps in having a rapport with the students if he has a sense of humor. And in regards to discipline, he has to have and exercise self-control. In addition, he is responsible for choosing the music to play, arranging music and teaching it to the students. It's a demanding job, but also a rewarding one, especially when the students continue their playing in college.

Creative Writing Lets Me Be Me

"Writers write." In Creative Writing, a limited one semester course, twenty students are given an opportunity to stray from the norms of composition writing, and create something on their own. Mr. Cox, a published author, offers his own experience on an individual basis by acting as a helpful critic.

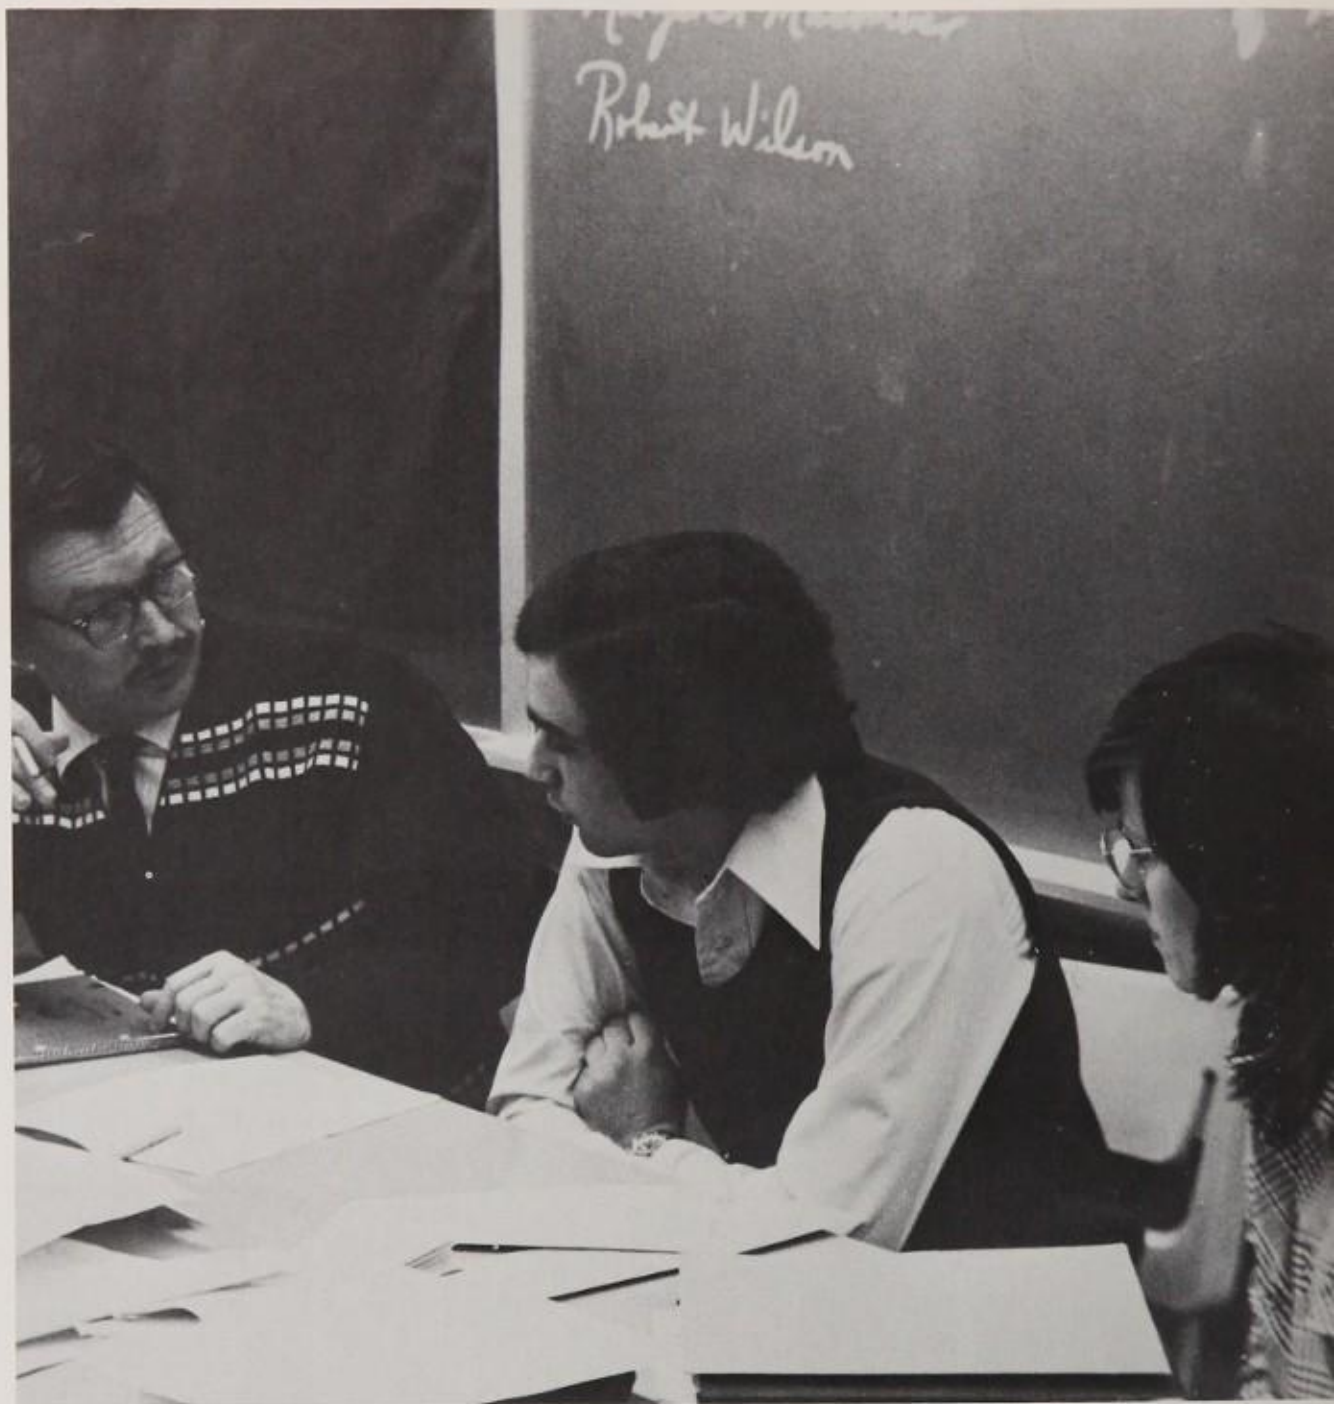

"Remember, in opening a story the first thing you do is to hook the reader." Throughout the first six weeks, Mr. Cox reminds his students often that the only reason writers write is for the readers.

"Action dialogue" is the main point which is brought out during the second six weeks. A one act play or a portion of a much longer play is created by the student.

The course is based on an independent study program. This leaves the student free to determine his own style of writing. Anyone who has the initiative and the ambition to learn to write has unlimited opportunities in this course.

Writing is an art and art is a craft. Any craft you desire to learn must be constantly practiced. Talkers only talk but "writers write."

Mr. Cox explains to Marc Palasini the importance of writing for the reader while Mrs. Stoltz looks on.

Computing Calculations

Most people take mathematics courses to hopefully increase their intelligence. But, most don't realize what the courses entail. It takes a serious attitude, initiative and perseverance to make good grades. Math courses can be a drag. Daily homework, weekly quizzes and twice a month tests get to be pretty boring after awhile. Even though it does look impressive for college to have three to four years of math, unless your willing to apply yourself, it will be a waste of time.

Mr. McIntyre seems to forget algebra as he enjoys a game of basketball with his daughter.

Styles

Mothers are wishing that they had kept their long skirts. And fathers are feeling relieved with the boys' shorter haircuts. What's the old cliché? History repeats itself? Well, it seems that styles repeat themselves also. We shouldn't be surprised if seamed nylons and wingtips are seen around North Central soon.

Zoo Time?

This scene is nothing unusual to the seasoned music traveler. Alan Ray and Doug West are really acting quite normal.

Somewhere in the halls of our school lurks the mad bassoonist. In the same general area fantastic music and beautiful voices are heard through walls and doors. Music teachers are locked in their offices and there's always the danger of being mauled by certain band members. Interested? If you dare to journey down the music wing be prepared for the unexpected.

Instructors are sometimes amazed at the ignorance of new drivers.

Instructor: "Uh, you're going down a one way street."

Student driver: "I know. I'm only going one way."

"Where's the 'B' that makes the car go backwards?"

"Well, it only took me six times to do my three-point turn-around that time."

"Help! My seat belt's stuck!"

Some people worry about damaging the car. These people worry about damaging Mr. Cullings.

Bubble gum is a favorite pastime for many bored students such as Tracy Munro.

What can you do to amuse yourself in study hall without getting your library privileges taken away? How can you stay awake listening to the teacher who could put even an insomniac to sleep? Some people put their own books in their rental books and have a good time. Others sleep. Then there's the guy who puts his knees in the back of your chair and jiggles until you're frappéed. Oh well, at least he keeps you awake.

Diet--You'll Like It

A practical way of limiting calories is through diet drinks as Mr. Siegel and Rhonda Schuff illustrate.

Almost everybody at one time or another has gone on a diet. Some of them are unbelievable. How people can stick to them is amazing! Wrestlers never cease to be a phenomenon with the way they can lose weight in just a couple of days. What willpower it must take to eat only hot dogs and bananas! It must be awful sticking to a diet of milkshakes! And what's done with all the clothes that are too big? They could always be eaten.

Belt, Belt, or Belt?

Mark Plane "belts down" skim milk at lunch.

In everyday lives, words play an important part. It's interesting to hear some of the words that are spoken, whispered and yelled in the halls and classrooms. But interpretation depends on the individual. Take the word "belt," for example. To some it may describe something worn to hold up clothes. To others, a certain type of blow. Or it may refer to a way of singing. And then, to some, it means a way of drinking.

Good Company

The November performance of the rock group Yes in the Convention Center was attended by many North Central students.

Where would we be without our music? What would calm us, relax us, make us happy or give us the bitter-sweet feeling of sadness? Music is a means of expression whether we create it or just listen to it. And because there are so many different types of music, appreciation is an individual thing. But sharing it with each other provides a common bond.

Most underclassmen dread having pictures taken. The photographer always manages to catch them with their eyes closed or their mouth open.

"Do I really look like that?"

It's always entertaining to watch the reactions when they see their pictures for the first time. The usual reaction is "This isn't me!" Or, "That's TERRIBLE!" Some reactions aren't printable. The majority just sigh, "I can't wait until I'm a senior and can get this done right!"

Cracking Down

Members of last year's Baseball Pep Club provided an important part to the games.

"Where are you supposed to be? Are you supposed to be in lunch? You'd better get there. No one's supposed to be in the halls until the bell."

Since the new disciplinary regulations there's not much roaming in the halls. The rules may be a pain, but when you think about it, they've sure helped. We can go into moderately clean bathrooms and have doors on the stalls. The sinks aren't an ashy mess and even the halls are relatively clean.

Sounds like three of Snow White's wierdest dwarfs. Actually, the title describes the way people look and feel at school on Monday morning. The "Monday Morning Blahs" is a universal disease that everybody suffers from at one time or another. Teachers always seem to know when the blahs are present. That's when they ask the questions. Making it from one class to another is almost a death defying venture when under the influence of the blahs. But there aren't many complaints because the hassles are usually worth the weekend!

RED!!

Chess Club advisor Mr. Konkle and members Bill Schlichenmeier, Rick Rheins, Jim Murdock and Mark Traas.

An interesting characteristic of school life is the "red tape" most of us wade through at one time or another. Unexcused late passes for being late, unexcused absence passes for being sick, passes to go to the doctor's and dentist's, passes for the library, passes to pass from one class to another, receipts for book rental, forms for changing schedules and all sorts of other things that there isn't enough room to write about. For lack of nothing else to think about, this all gives cause to wonder how much money the school spends on paper.

You only get out of school what you put into it. Sad, but true. That's why the senior year always seems to be the best. Most everybody's had the same friends for three years and they put a lot of time into getting the best out of their last year in high school. Actually, it's kind of an art that's finally perfected upon reaching senior status.

No I'm Not!

The Jazz Rock Ensemble (dressed up).

A lot of things we do nowadays are out of rebellion. Styles, attitudes and philosophies stem from rebellion more times than not. The "Radical Student Union" was one group rebelliously based which emerged this year to unfavorable opinions. Perhaps it was because their rebellion was not constructively used. According to psychologists, rebellion at our age is a unique characteristic of American teenagers, and when used properly, not destructively, it's a healthy way to get things done.

Unbeknownst to many of us are the great variety of elective classes to choose from, especially the ones in which you can express your own individuality and talent. Most everybody knows about the art and ceramics classes, but did you know about the weaving, graphic arts, sculpture, advertising, radio, T.V., data processing, welding, yearbook and newspaper classes, just to mention a few? You might check it out before you make up your schedule next year. It'll be worth your time.

Our individual identities often appear to be threatened in our complex, modern world. The stupendous numbers of people and their organization into larger and larger social groups—huge schools and colleges, gigantic corporations and industries, growing governments—these tend to lessen the importance of people by reducing them to the level of a mere statistic. Soon, instead of being a name, we may be just a number.

Names and faces lose value in the impersonal masses of a large school.

Quite a few people have expressed the fact that they won't be voting in the next election because of the disgusting way the country's been run. But the only way to change things is to get a foot in the door. And the only way to do that is by voting. Voting privileges are just one of many responsibilities we will inherit as we prepare to graduate. It's up to us to meet those responsibilities and to exercise our right to have a part in our American democracy.

Timing is just one of the many duties of the members of the Girl's Swim Team Pep Club.

For The Love Of Money

Selling wigs is one of the many things Ann Offutt does as a contingent at Block's.

With the way our economy's been, we can't do much of anything without money. And most of us will do just about anything to get it. Work on construction crews, cut lawns, plow snow, pump gas, sell candy, run paper routes, cut hair, make jewelry, sell wigs, play with the little brat up the street, sell hamburgers, exercise, mop floors, make posters, answer telephones and sell doughnuts. How can money be the root of all evil when it prompts good, hard work?

We Got It Good!

Active members of North Central's Key Club.

As North Central students, we've got a lot going for us. Academically we're one of the top ten schools in the nation which means we're getting a top rate education. Our school's facilities are some of the best in the state. People come from all over to attend classes in the career center. We've also got fantastic facilities in our music department. And if you haven't attended a program in the planetarium, you're missing out on quite an experience!

A prevalent attitude that seems to emerge as we advance from year to year at school, is how much effect a teacher has on the courses we take. It's particularly noticeable in the senior year when we're much more serious and interested in what we're learning. How well we do in a class usually depends upon the teacher. If the teacher is knowledgeable and is interested in the subject he is teaching, learning from him is a valuable experience.

America's supposedly a land of leisure. It would be difficult to convince many N.C. students of this, but when they do have leisure time, most are creating. Recently there's been a trend for natural food, looks, and clothes and the "natural" aspect has also hit hobbies. Instead of buying, people are making, and earning money from their creations. Just about anything you can buy today you can make with a little initiative, and probably for less money.

Needlepoint is a favorite hobby of many, including Senior Ginny Henry.

Ironie, Ain't It?

Our school's bigger than some cities. So it's no wonder that some students have difficulty finding a niche. Individuality's an important value to a lot of us. And at our school it's usually a three year struggle to find it. Some try to find it through sports. Others through music or drama. It's a little ironic—you know you've finally found your place when you're ready to leave N.C. . . . when you no longer worry about people who don't accept you for what you are.

"Um, Well, I, Uh..."

Doug Blake can't fool Mrs. Buddenbaum!

If you've ever had the (mis)fortune of being in the attendance office in the morning, you might understand the cynical attitudes and disbelieving stares you get when you ask for a pass. Can you honestly blame their reactions when they're used to explanations for missing classes like, "I had a seizure in lower 'G' hall." "My mom said she called!" Or the typical "car trouble." Just a word of advice: If you want to try to fool the attendance office, at least be original!

It all started with gas rationing. Prices went up. Americans were urged to tighten their belts, lower their thermostats and do without unnecessary things. It was called an energy crisis. We (as Indiana residents) were somewhat reassured by reports of our adequate coal supply. But prices continued to climb and a new term was used to describe the situation: recession. We started the new year with a shaky economy, a questionable government and a suspicious people. It used to start with a bang.

This is the limit if you've got the gas.

School seems to be the last thing on Senior Tim Ballew's mind.

Ah, the weekend! That's all some students live for. It's nice sleeping in for at least one day a week and it's nice having time to just mess around. There are football games, basketball games and hockey games, but most of all—PARTIES! That's when the most people have the most fun. Yes, the weekend parties have a tendency to bring out the best (or is it the worst?) in people. They also help most people to make it through the week!

It's Been Real!

1975's last mixer is enjoyed by Seniors Monica Throgmartin and Bob Lee.

Aren't you going to miss all the complaints about student apathy? Are you going to miss the 40 degree school in winter and the 80 degree school in summer? What about the excitement of sneaking out in the halls without a pass? Aren't you going to miss the morning announcements? How about the romancing in the halls? All this was part of our high school career. It's sad to see it all end but exciting to know that we're going onto bigger and better things.

Senioritis

This is an example of a severe case of "senioritis."

Symptoms: Usually occurs in the twelfth year of school. Characterized by intermittent "craziness" alternated with restlessness. Victims are prone to unusual actions and thoughts. Many confess to desires ranging from throwing jello in the pool to flushing all the school toilets simultaneously. Cure: There is no known cure as the ailment is only temporary. Experts recommend that the patient simply relax and "let it happen!"

HERE WE COME

Broken arms present problems in cold weather. Jerry Lacy helps Brent Ervin as Lloyd Crowe waits patiently.

Journalism classes provide many creative opportunities for students like Linda Prenatt and Kathy Bowe.

A Cappella choir members Julia Fleek, Debbie Moorman and Kelly Adams practice "Messiah" music.

Looks like Eddie Davis has run into some unexpected trouble because of an illegally parked car.

Carrying on a conversation while fighting the traffic is an art that Kathy Price and Cindy Ford have mastered.

A mixer's a good way to work off after-game excitement. Caroline Bennett has a good time at the Stonewall mixer.

HERE WE ARE

"Juniors, juniors '76! We're the class that never quits!" yell Denise Leonard, Lynn Levy, Debbie Osborne, and Dave Ostermeyer.

A long day at school can be exhausting, so Rick Kearney decides to stretch out and relax (?) with the aid of two nearby stools.

Coming and going to his classes, John Porteous has the sure method of preventing tardiness.

Sharing a quiet moment together at the Student Council-sponsored mixer are Kathy Rust and Dan Neff.

"Please remember, Scott Phillips, it's 'Be Kind To Clay Heads Week.'"

Class Of '75

It's true that seniors have more fun. Janet Sievert and Steve Hocker are no exception.

Participating in a new dance class started this year are Julie Meyer and Monica Throgmartin.

It's easy to be distracted from government, as Rita Davey and Leigh Dickinson illustrate in Mr. Davis' class.

Take your pick: Marc Palasini's either enjoying his book, "smiling" for the photographer, or grimacing in pain.

LIVING

LIBERATION

"Tears of Joy"—what more can be said about this picture of Joan Kennedy, our Homecoming Queen.

Now for the not so routine stuff—both in and out of NC.

School isn't always the same old thing—look around! There's scuba diving with the Alternative Education Program. Or how about going to Rockville with the Values and Issues classes? And H192 might have a Congressman or two speaking there. Even a group project in English class seems to help change the pace.

And OUT of school, well, MUCH is going on! Start with those weekend parties. Hit the concerts. Travel to visit the colleges and friends. Don't forget sports—horse shows, sailing regattas, swimming at the lake, snow mobiling, and hiking. Of course, sometimes sleeping late and then sticking around the house is fine too!

Like a shepherd watching his flock, Mr. Seigel observes the football game, and—it would seem he's alone.

No—it's not the Lone Ranger . . . It's Lizi Rice (again) enjoying a jaunt around the dirt track.

What do you make of it Marvin? Jim Bracken, Gary Halpern, Marvin Goldstein and Mark Strauss are at Rockville.

Travel

"You make me sick" is the big line after spring vacation. The kids that have been down South come back bronzed and healthy looking, while the ones that stayed home in the cold look pale and sickly.

Tons of people make it down to Florida every year. They get there in just about every way imaginable—by bus, car, plane, truck, train, and thumb. The main activity once they're all down there is laying around in the sun and swimming in the ocean. That's it, but it's enough!

Students go all over the country for their vacations. They go skiing where ever they can find a little snow and a molehill. They go water skiing where ever they can find a puddle, a boat and a rope. The important thing is to get away from Indy!

I.U. Honors and the People-to-People programs offer students the chance to go over to Europe.

Mickey Mouse leads the parade at Disney World, "the vacation paradise."

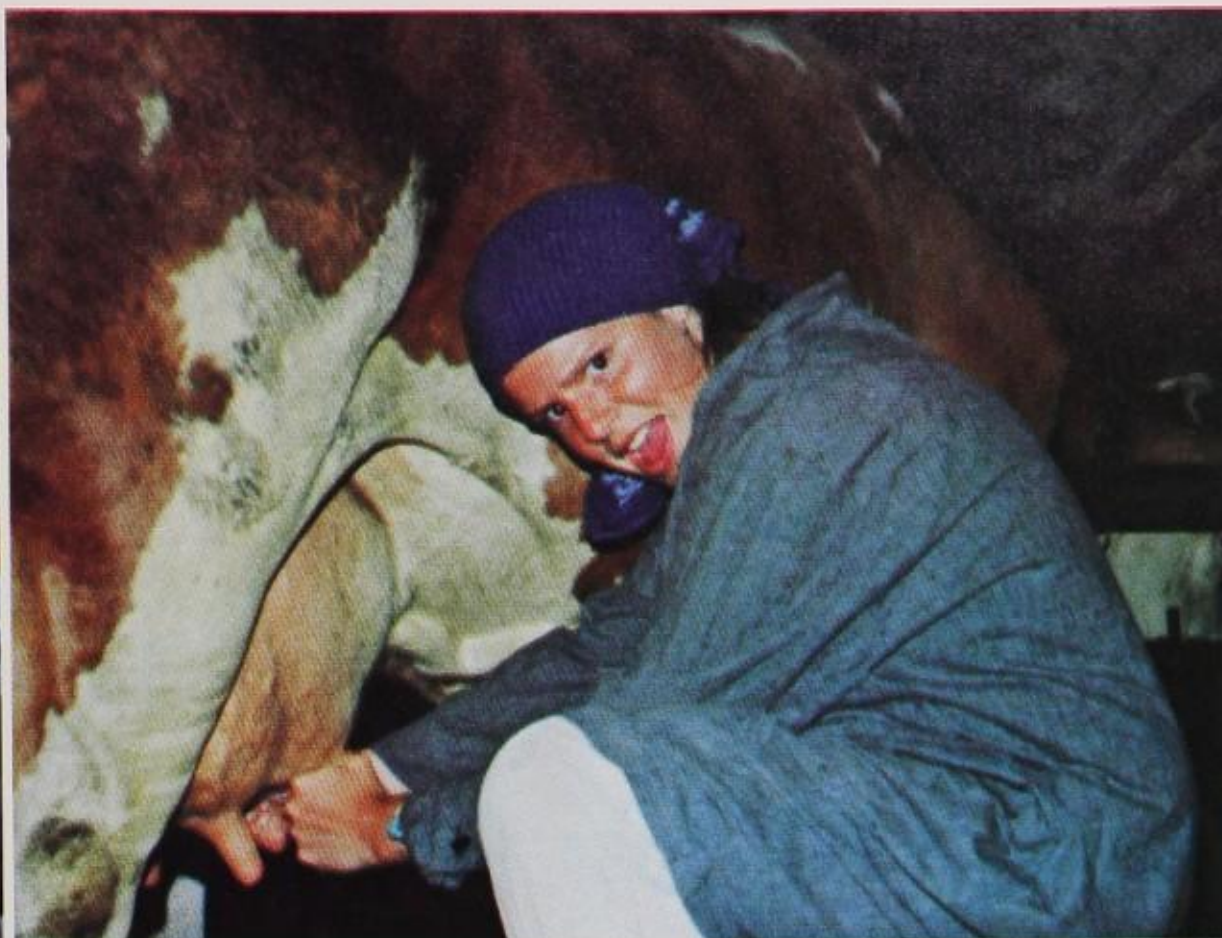

Check out the shoes that Sue Fisher found on her People-to-People trip.

Sitting in a park in Paris, "readin' the news" are Lisa Abel and Terry Dunne.

Shlip-Shlurp-Shlip. Mary Miller helps while on her People-to-People trip.

Bumming around, Nancy Partenheimer and Kim Crays dig Young Life in Colorado.

Floating on your back can be hard to do, but Joan Kennedy makes it easy.

Funburgers, apple turnovers or even a salad make up Diane Carmen's orders.

Yep, sex is something that EVERYBODY wants to read more about, but unfortunately this spread isn't about that popular subject. It caught your attention though, didn't it?

This is really about our working students. Everybody seems to need money. There's never enough of it. Since most parents don't give it away, kids are forced to get jobs to earn their cash.

There are lots of different jobs around Indy; they're just hard to find. Students are most likely to find jobs in stores that sell clothes, food, or other essentials. But there are jobs that get away from the ordinary, like being a camp counselor, working on the horseshow circuit, or as a last resort—corn detasseling.

Some kids volunteer their time to help out at Crossroads, the blind school, a nursing home, or a hospital.

Believe it or not, this was taken at NC.
Look, there are lots of things to see.

Balloons fly at the beginning of Indy's biggest event, the 500 Mile Race.

The Indiana National Bank gives a great view of the city, especially at night.

Monument Circle lights up with thousands of lights at Christmas.

Lions and tigers and bears, oh my! There were some elephants, monkeys, llamas, and some camels marching around downtown last October. They were on their way to the new Market Square Arena where the Ringling Brothers' Circus was held.

What else goes on in Indy? There is the 500 Mile Race. Lots of kids go there every year. They have some great times in the first turn. They had a couple of streakers, along with lots of munchies and beer.

Nowhere else in the world is there an I-465, an Indiana National Bank building, or Sam's Marching Panthers. Our Children's Museum is the world's largest, and the spanking new Market Square Arena is the fifth largest covered arena in the world. Lest we forget our farmland origin, a minute drive can put us in the midst of acres of cornfields.

Getting into his music, Kenny Edmonds of Tarnished Silver plays at Homecoming.

Yesman, Steve Howe, blisters off the riffs to "Close to the Edge."

No, this isn't the Red Barcn! It's the Doobie Brothers' drummer, Brother!

"Wow! This group is really weird" says Casper Q. Milktoast.

Just when we're all about to give out and have nervous breakdowns, the weekend comes around and rescues us.

Everyone has his own way to unwind. Dates, movies, concerts, and parties of every kind—you name the party you like and North Central has had it—that is, if you can find it. The way kids flock to parties is practically unbelievable. Word spreads like wild-fire; and everybody gets directions and maps and takes off. People love to live it up.

There's always work to do too—washing cars, cutting the grass, cleaning garages. Just doing nothing has got to be the favorite.

Under orange lights the Doobie Brothers get down and jam.

Hot stuff at the Senior Bonfire. Lots of people showed for cider and doughnuts and fire.

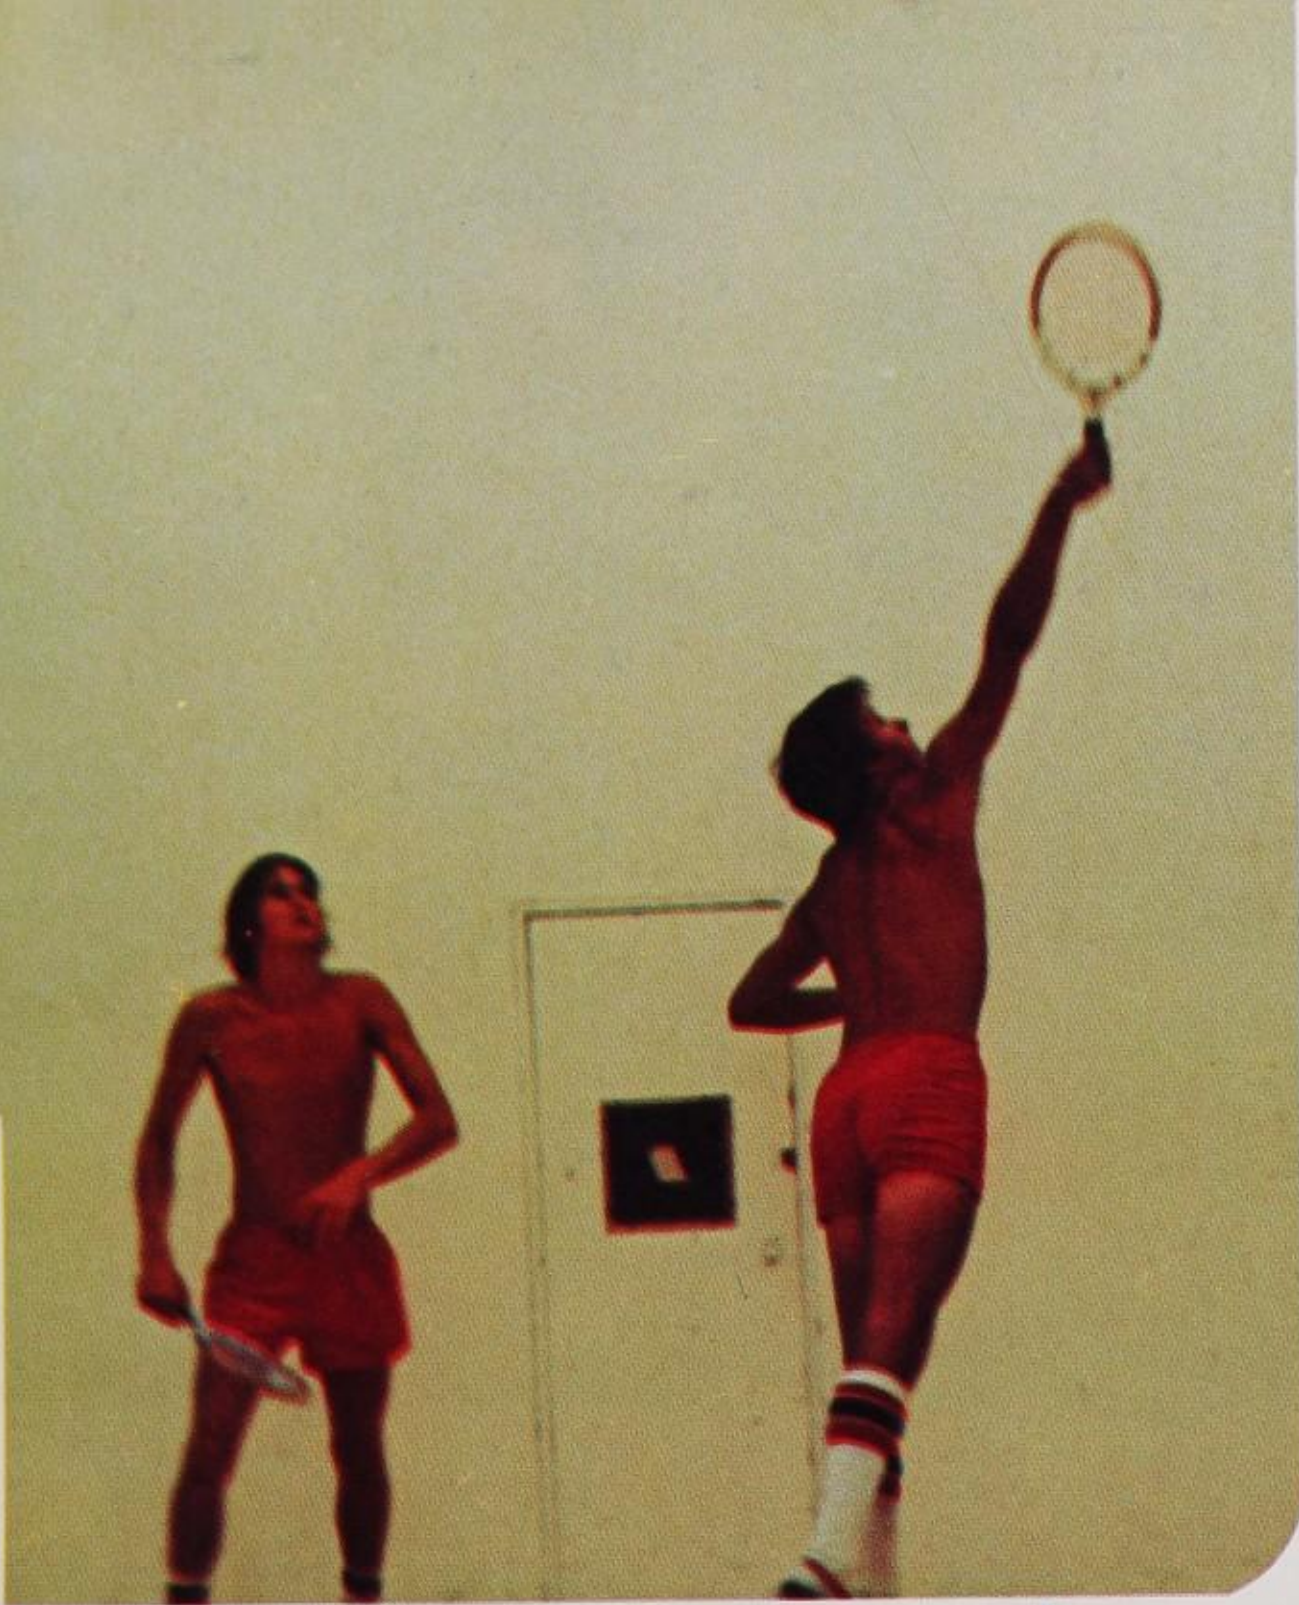

Ready for a plunge into the Carribean, Mary Miller adjusts her gear.

Sheets of water fly as Kyle Lanham shows his style on skies up at Wawasee.

LIVE

Summer offers so much to do! People can go out and "do their thing." There is no school to get in the way so kids have freedom and a chance to express themselves.

Cobwebs have a tendency to build in people's minds, especially over summer vacation. These cobwebs get things all clogged up—who wants to be clogged up? Get out and live!

The waterfront is a big thing in the summer around Indy, mainly because Indiana water is either real cold or frozen for the rest of the year.

Since there aren't too many lakes or oceans close by, swimming pools become the summer hangouts. The major activity must be comparing arms to see who's the tannest! There are also rousing games of shark, water basketball, and a few hardy souls swim laps.

Wawasee, Crooked Lake, Indiana Beach, the reservoirs, and White River open up room for sailing, and skiing, and general putting around. Some kids leave the state for canoe trips, scuba diving, and stuff like that.

Deep in concentration, Bob Austin and Bob Deitch practice at the Y.

Enjoying the wind, Steve Sexon sails a Sunfish off the coast of N. Carolina.

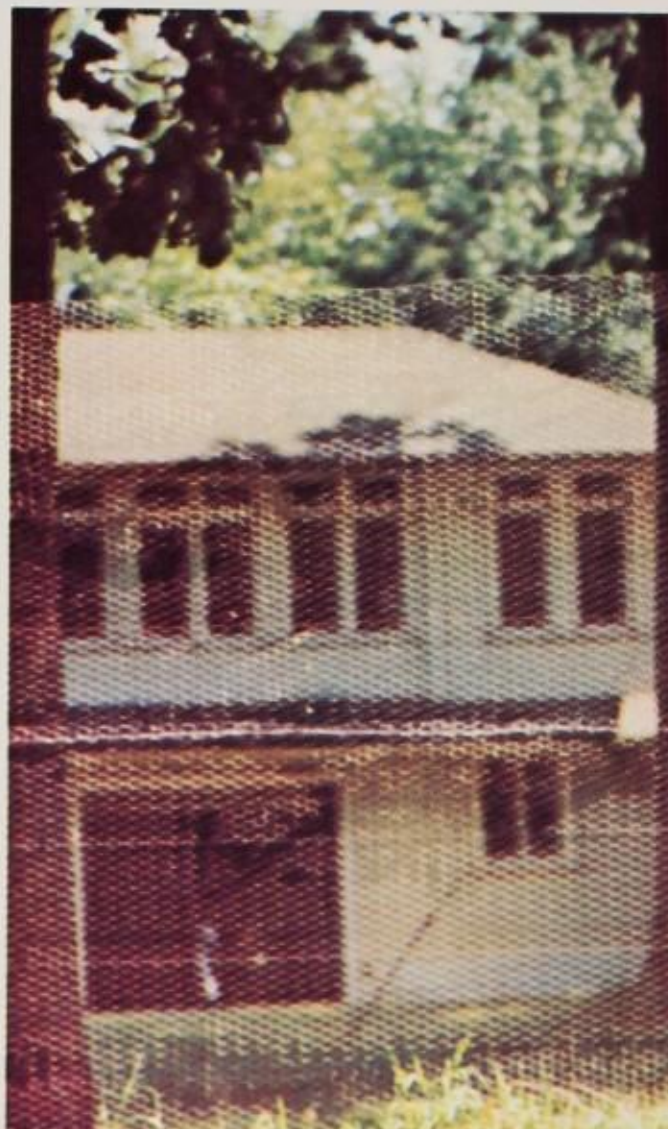

A refreshing early morning dip in Cayuga Lake, N.Y., wakes up Emily Wade.

Even though his socks don't match, Doug Vezina manages to play good soccer.

What a forehand! Kyle Lanham plays tennis up at Wawasee during the summer.

BE FREE

Peddle-Pushers, Mary Fencel and Ann Overshiner, cruise their neighborhood.

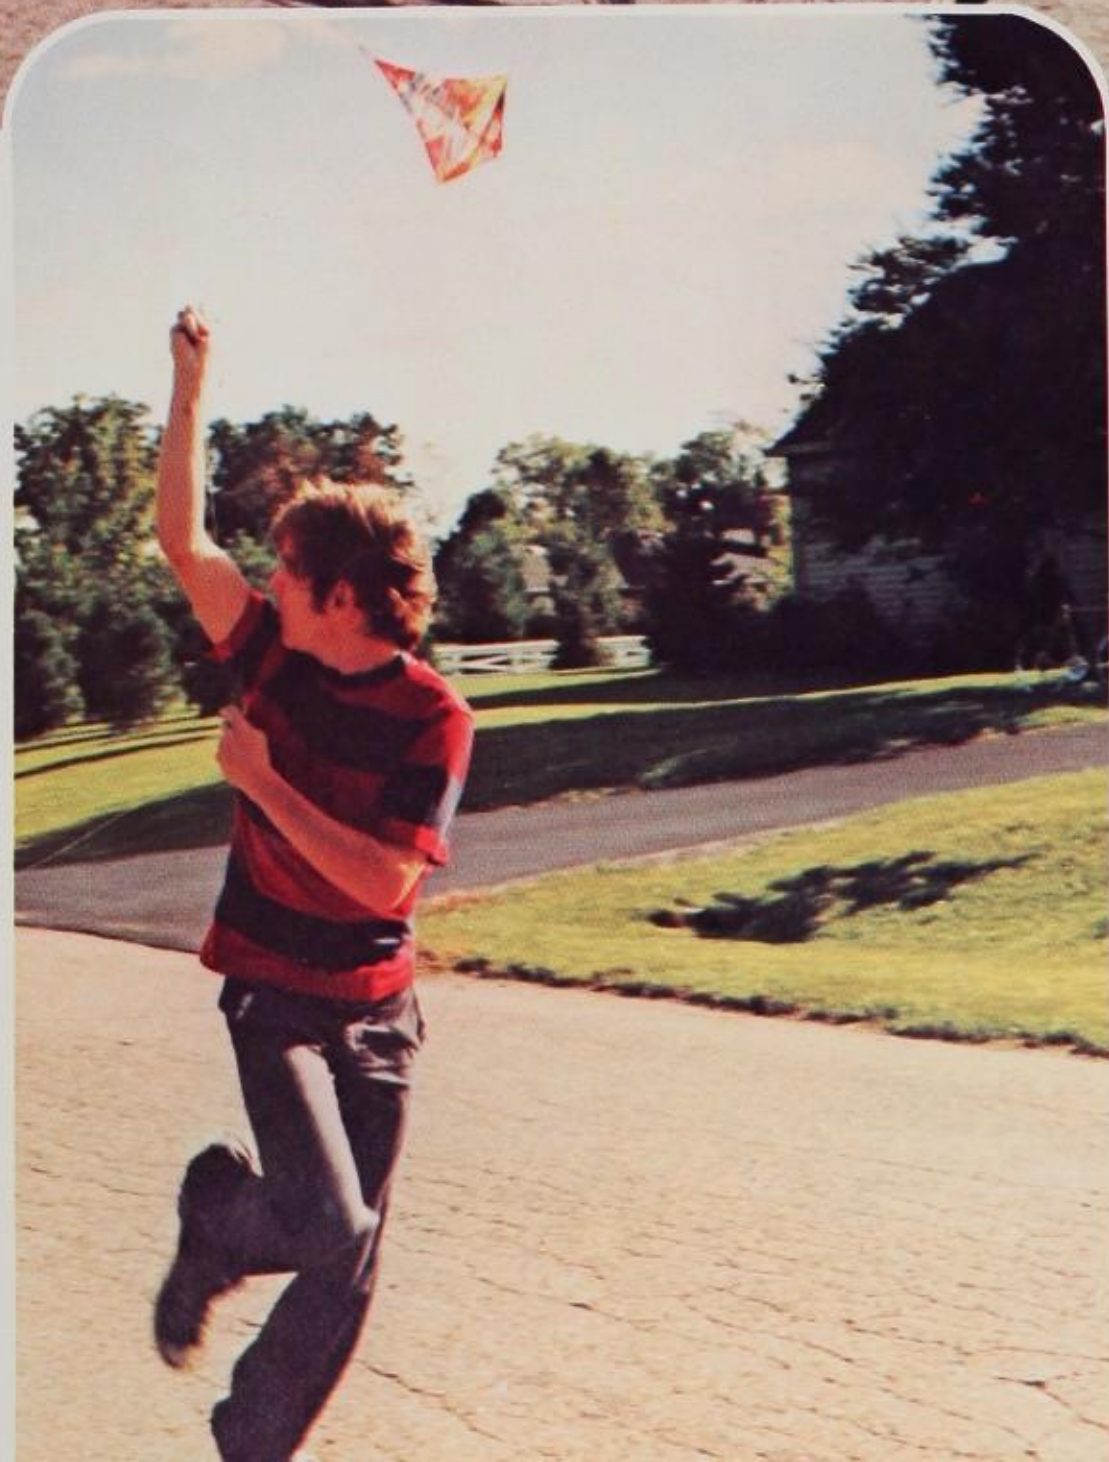

Flying high, Chuck Schnider runs to get his kite aloft.

Fresh air, blue sky, and wide open spaces make the scene as students collide with nature and sports.

Primitive camping, kayacking, backpacking, fishing, archery, and even trail-blazing are all good nature craft sports.

Why all the activities? Staying in shape (or getting that way) is one of the reasons. Getting a gorgeous tan is another reason, and just plain "something to do" is a third. But most of all, sports are just "good clean fun."

Eating—cereal is not the only way to get back to nature. More blue sky can be seen from a mountain top than from just about anywhere else. As for wide open spaces, well, the ocean is the place to be. But if you're looking for some Country-Fresh air, just truck on by your local dairy farm. Whew!!! (?)

Sailing is a great way to get away from it all.

There are some people who are different. Some people dare to push beyond the everyday, to get the most out of life by pushing it to the limit of human achievement. These people strive to find the out-of-the-ordinary. They challenge life; and it returns a bounty of rich, fulfilling experiences.

Some of our students are such people. They fly airplanes; and if they're not piloting the plane, they're parachuting out of it. Some fly sailplanes for the thrill of unmotorized adventure. There have been a couple of students who battled the air currents in balloons.

In drag races danger, speed, skill, and concentration are sought after and challenged. Go-carts can give the same kinds of feelings.

Some people dare to be different.

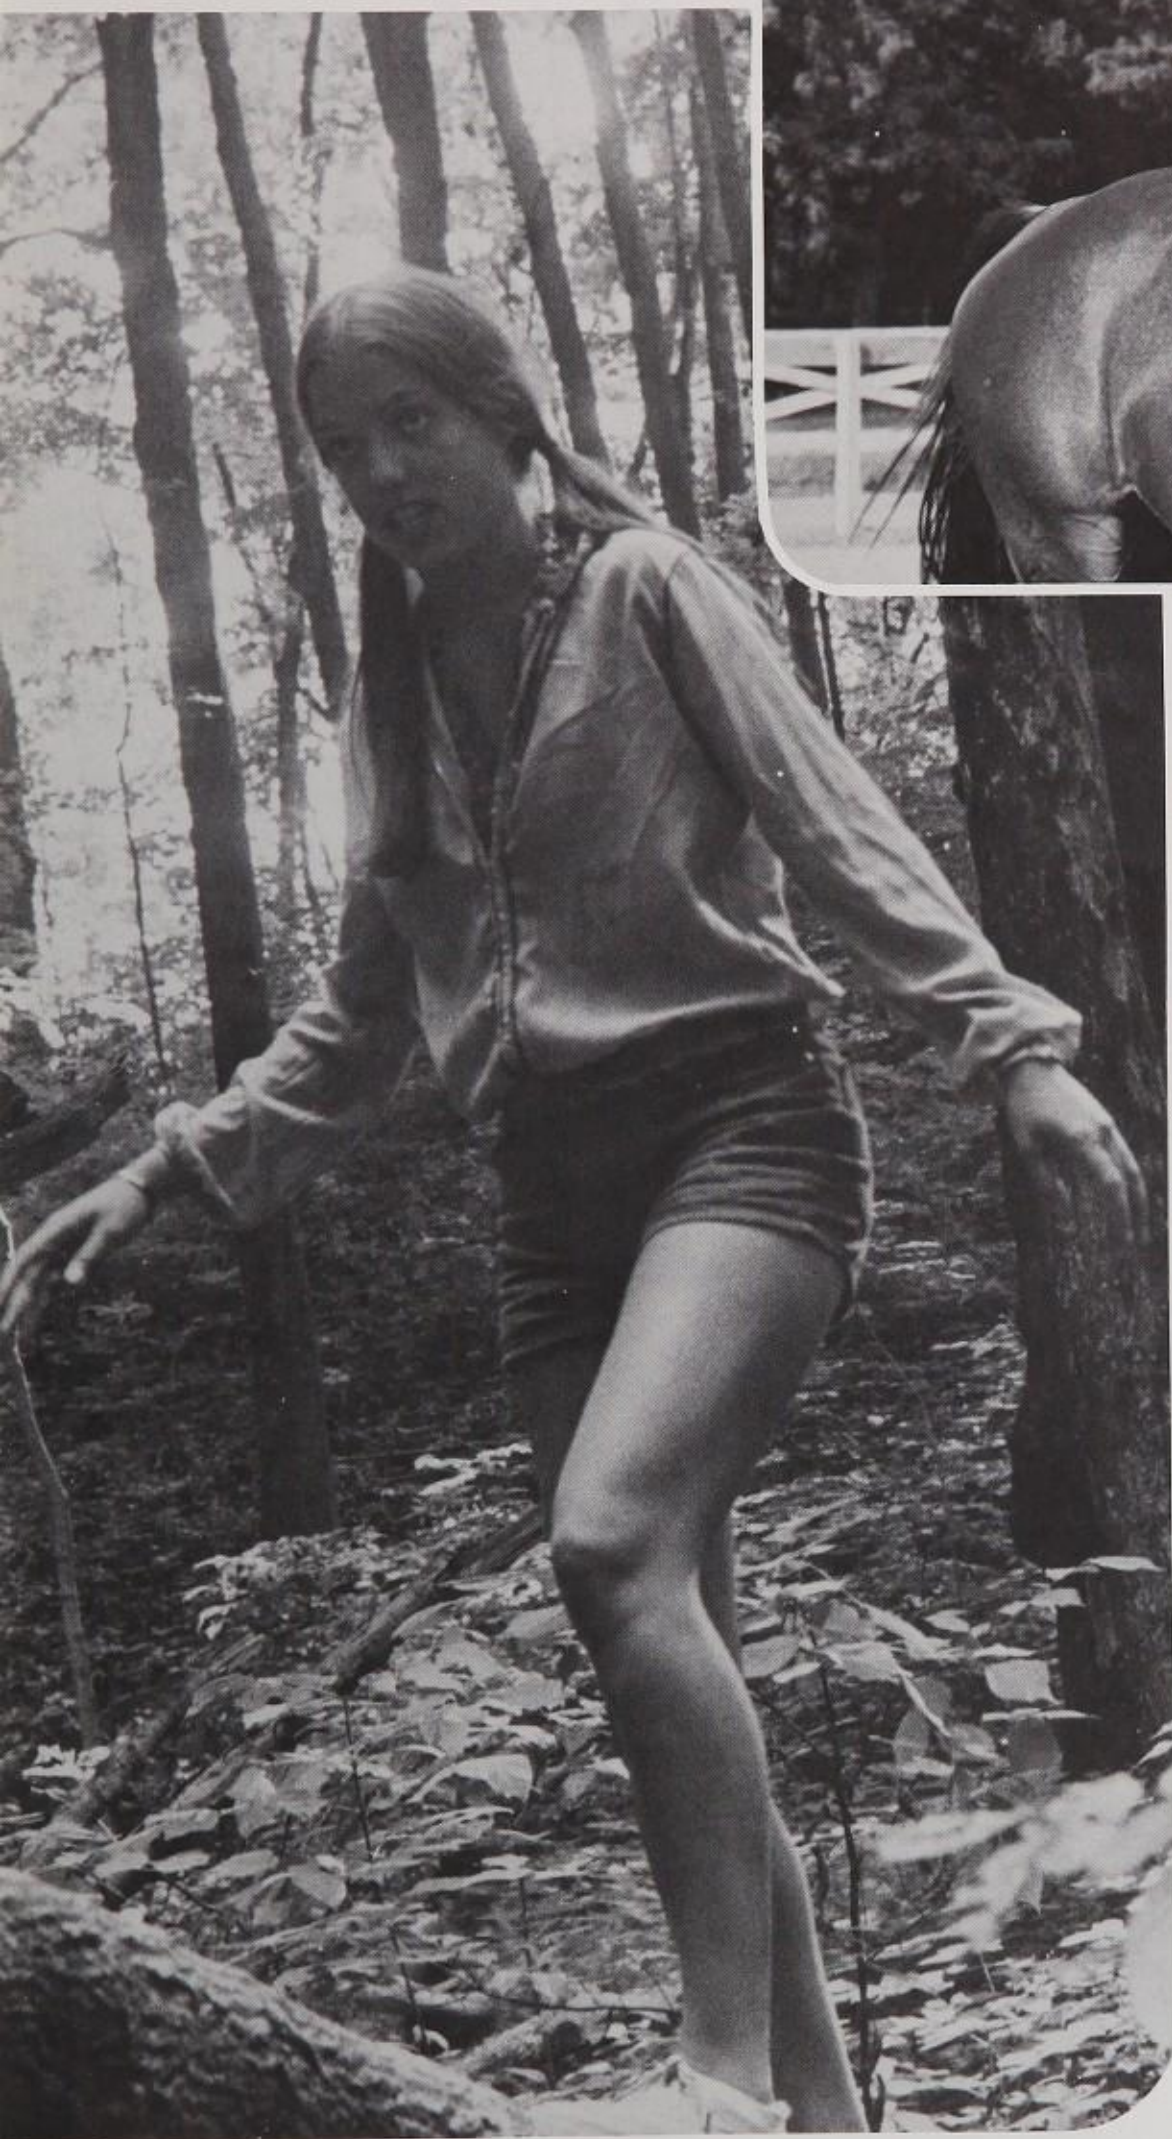

Being up for the game is one thing, but this is ridiculous!

DO IT!

If you have a sled shortage or want to stay on the ground over bumps, try Sue Campbell's and Nancy Wagner's way.

Snow—I love snow in the winter-time! When it starts to snow, I begin to pray for a huge snowstorm—at least four feet! Maybe then, school would be closed.

Winter's great!! Snowball fights, snowmen, hours in the cold (frozen toes), and hot chocolate by a fire. Lots of kids wind up at Butler Hill for a day of sledding, tobogganning and skiing. You can ice skate or play hockey on a nearby pond. Now you've got to make sure that the ice is thick enough—swimming when it's two degrees is a "chilling" experience. Snowmobiling has gotten to be really popular. More and more machines are seen buzzing through neighborhoods. Skiing is fabulous, even if you don't have any idea what you're doing.

Hockey is an up and coming sport as Joe Schaub, a member of our hockey team, would tell you.

Take stock of this situation: one head, one set of legs, and two legs without their matches (one is missing a body)!

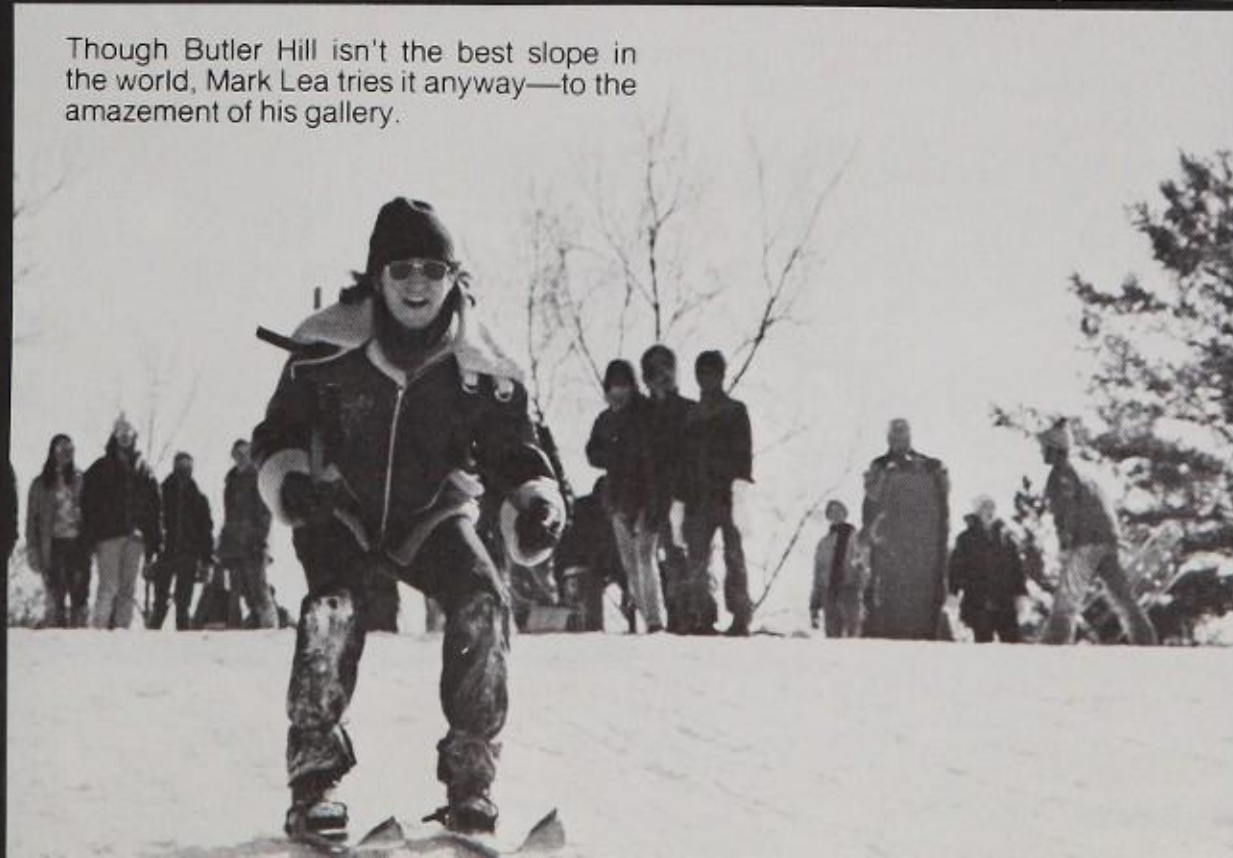

The only bad part about sledding is the walk back up the hill—unless, of course, you have some buddies to joke with.

Lean to the right! Ann Palmer and Susan Fansler can't seem to get their act together on a sledding day at Butler Hill.

Though Butler Hill isn't the best slope in the world, Mark Lea tries it anyway—to the amazement of his gallery.

In August, the State Fair draws people to Indy from all over the state.

Summer is a time when everybody gets into shape and stays that way. Barb Palmer does it with jogging.

All the people on the yearbook staff keep telling me that nobody reads this copy, so why bother to write it? Well, I think summer is fantastic, so I'm going to write about it anyway—you'd better read this.

Summer—what can't you do in the summer. Now you cynics out there are probably saying, "Well, you can't go snowmobiling in the summer!" Listen, just forget snow for awhile, OK? Think warm.

In summer you're free to do just about anything. There's water skiing, swimming, tennis, camping, or sailing. Summer is heat, suntans, jobs, vacations, the State Fair, relaxation and sleeping late.

The greatest thing about summer is NO SCHOOL—no books, no homework, no term papers. Yeah!

King's Island is a great place to go and get away from the boring routine.

SUN

The First Annual WNAP Raft Race was a big hit last summer.

A refreshing walk in the woods is always nice in the summer. Andy Richardson and Joan Kennedy enjoy the shade.

These guys seem to be really pushing for a win at the Raft Race.

The atmosphere here at NC goes from hot to cold just like at different areas of the earth. There are certain people with whom you are really close and then there are others . . .

There are many possible barriers between people. Language is a universal barrier. Many students attempt to break through this by taking a language course such as Hebrew, German, or Spanish. Yet there still exists definite gaps between the separate languages.

The International Club was formed to overcome this problem. The group consists of foreign exchange students as well as NC students. Individual language clubs also participate. Two of the club's main functions are the holiday party and the international weekend.

There will always be a variance of temperatures throughout the world and at NC. The secret is in trying to stay close and warm.

A mysterious exchange takes place after the International convo between Alejandro Cano and Sissy Neumeister.

Tutoring. This is a familiar word to about 90 students who are involved in either the National Honor Society or the new Student Council-sponsored tutoring programs.

Life is never dull for an NHS tutor. A typical help session involves activities like trying to explain "Everything!" or searching for the tutoree who never showed up. Long telephone conversations about how to form a verb in the imperfect and find square roots are also common occurrences.

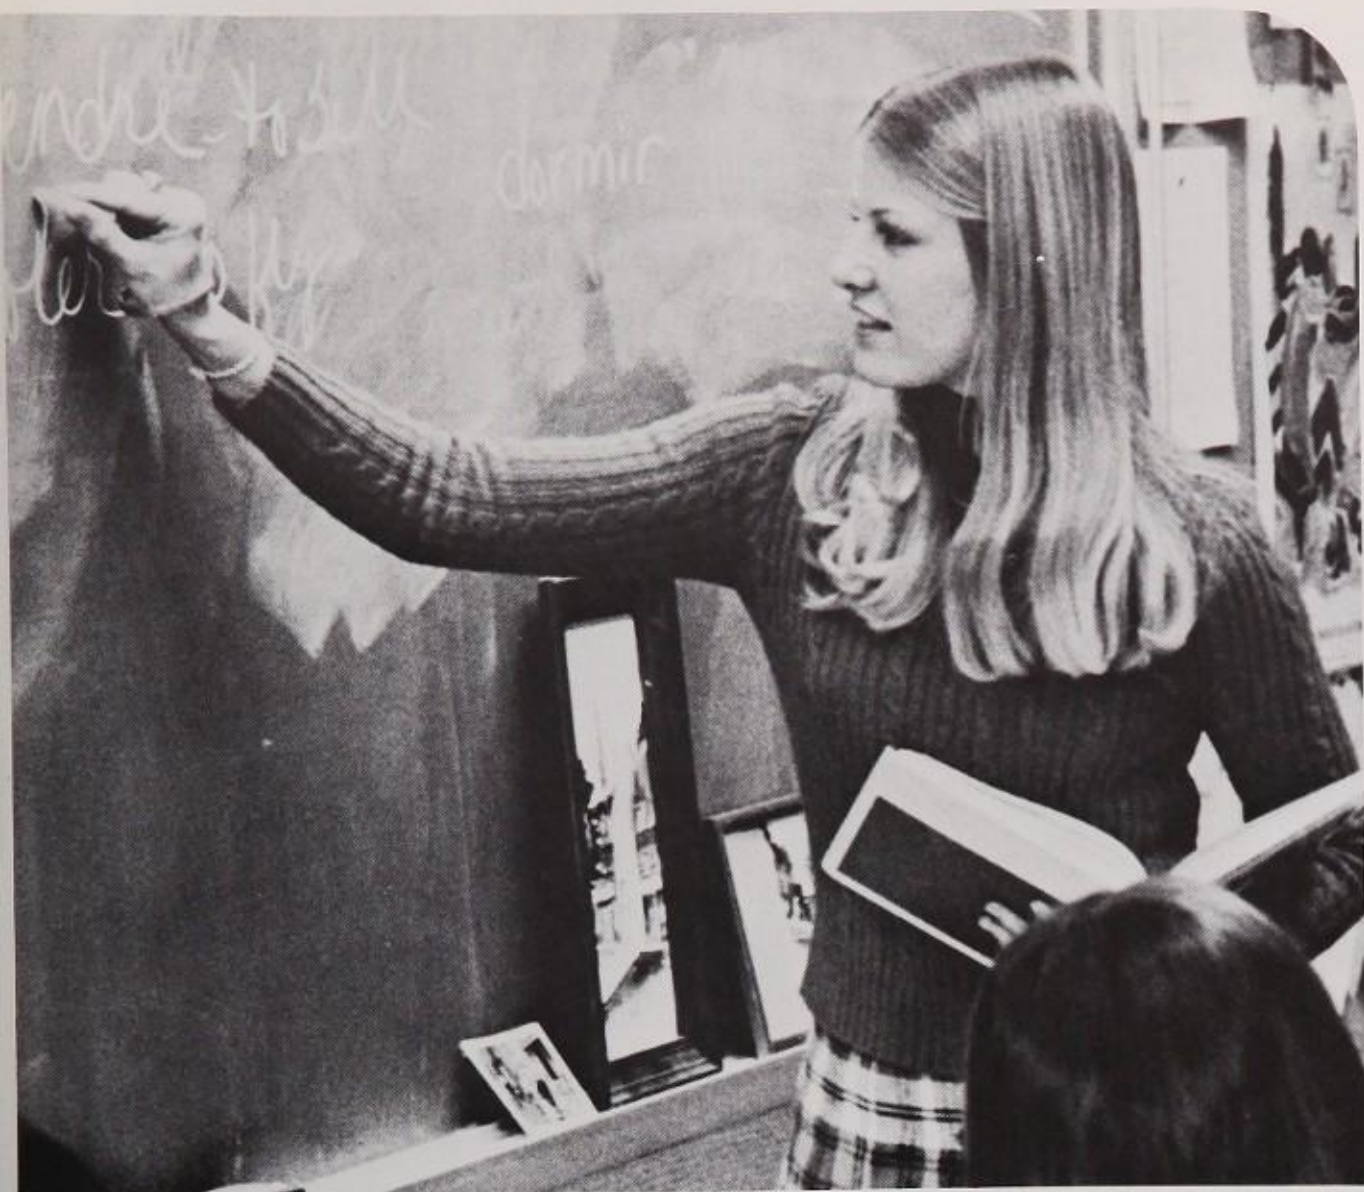

Other students shared their old memories of reading, writing and arithmetic with grade school pupils. They helped at Nora and Spring Mill grade schools, working in the offices, supervising intermurals and doing the traditional type of tutoring as volunteers.

Even cousins get help from NHS tutors. Marilyn Fogle is unravelling the intricacies of chemistry for Susan Fogle.

Learning how to use A.V. equipment is one of the tasks of cadet teachers Beth Wilson, Donna Kibbe and Maribeth Wells.

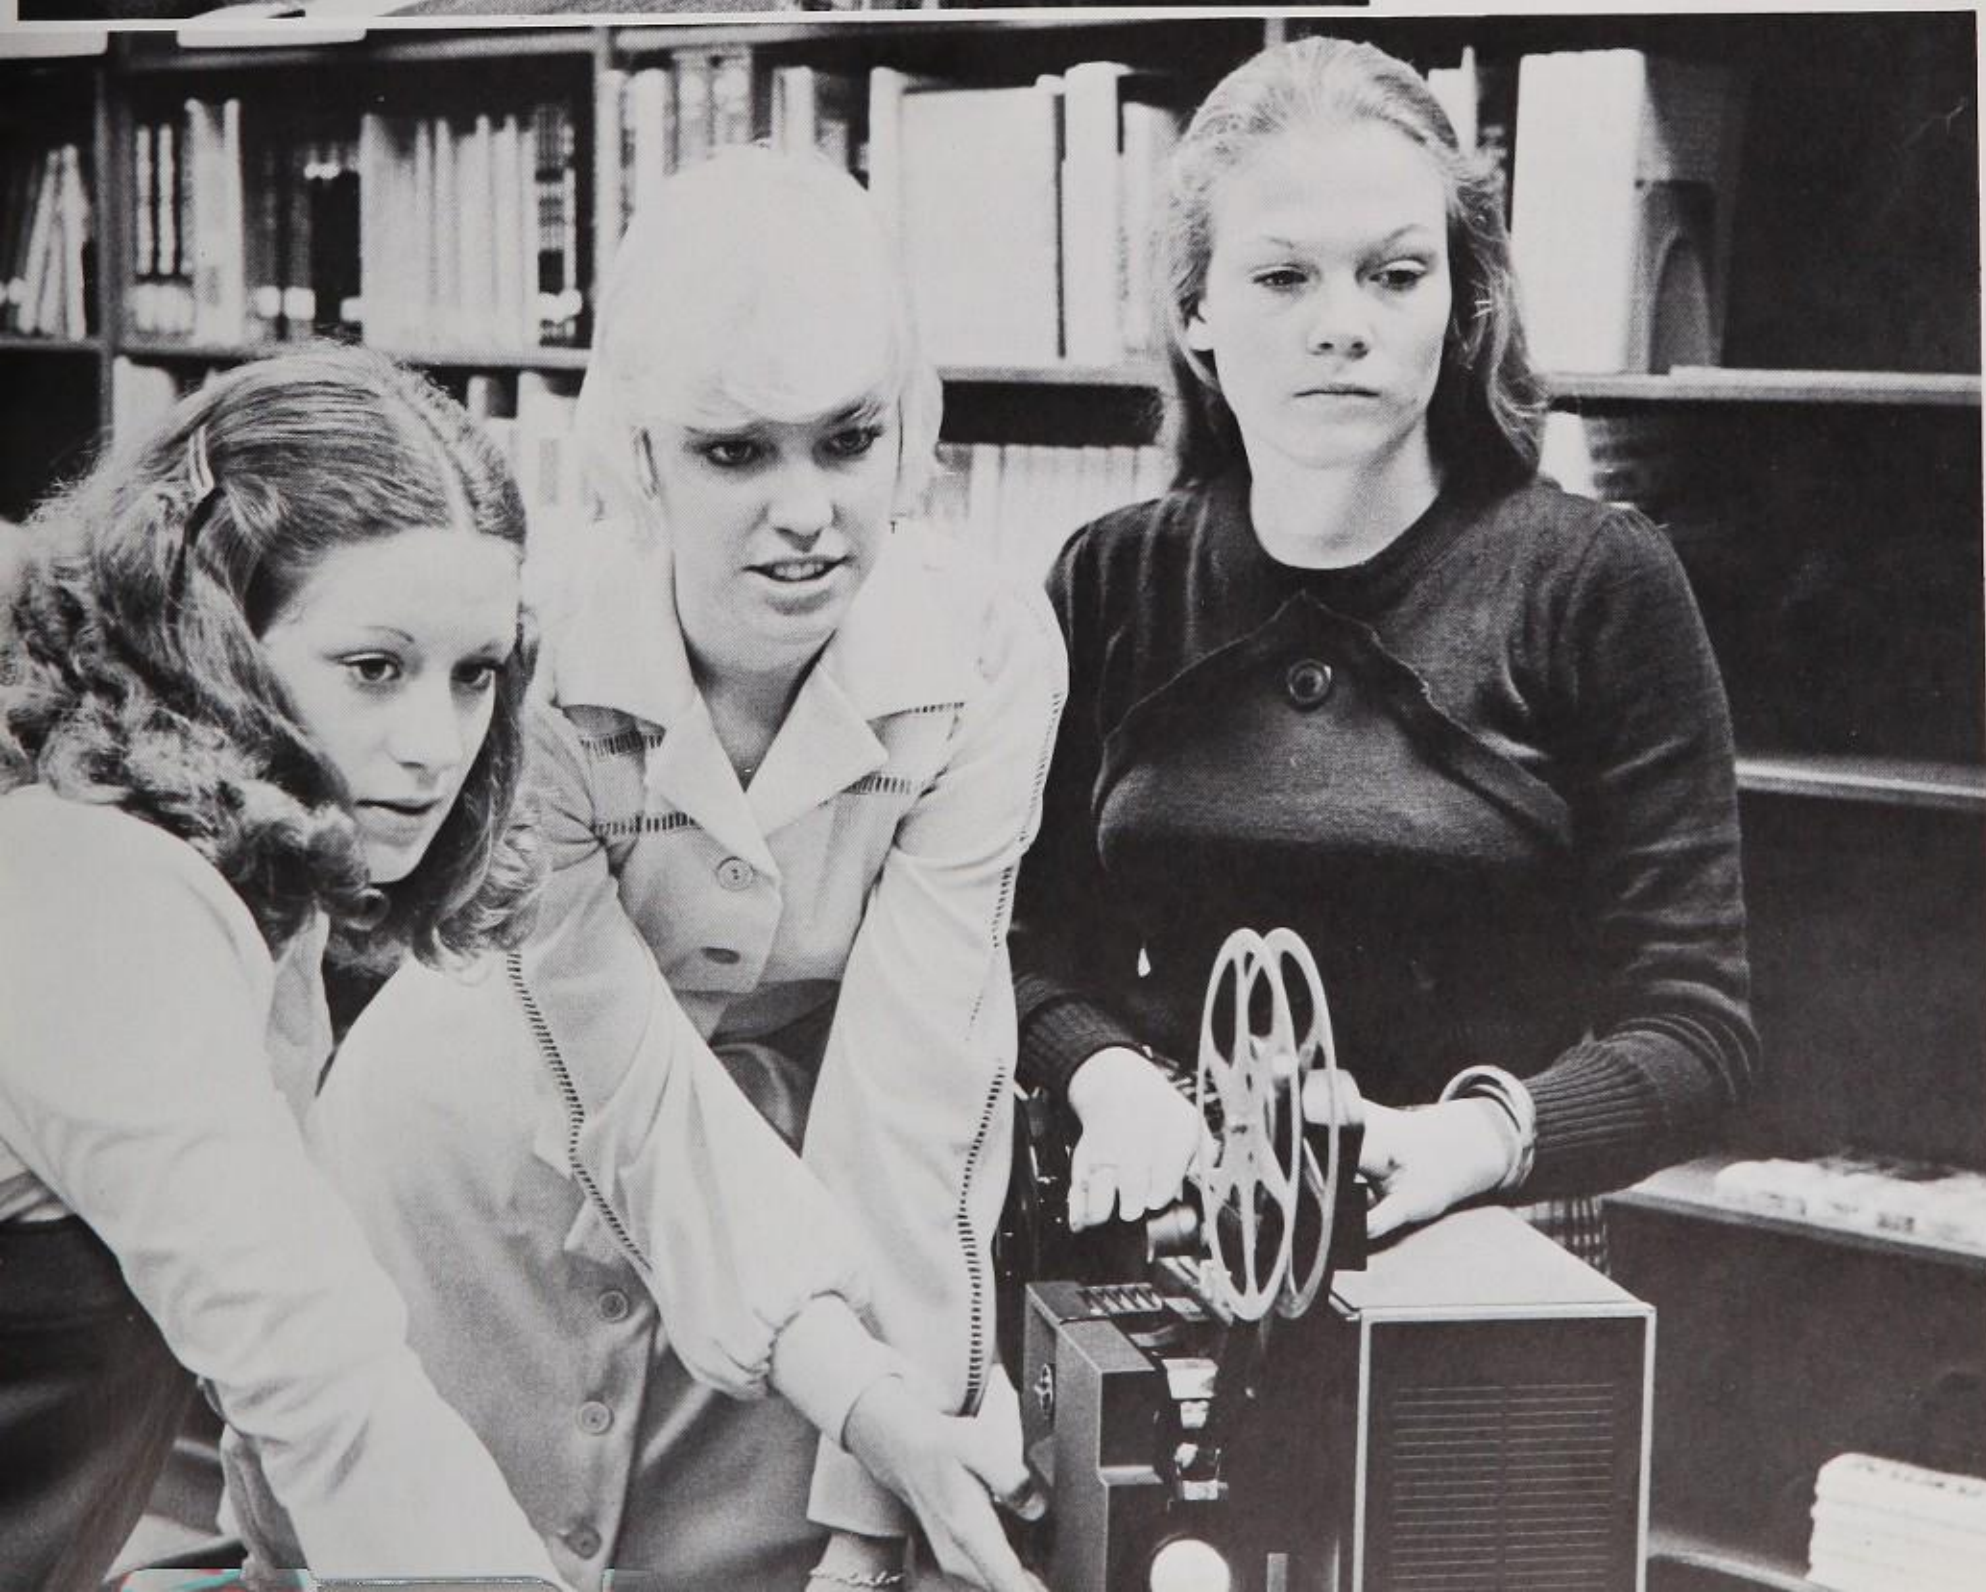

Knowhow

Teaching. The word doesn't have to mean that person who preaches at you or a cute substitute. To some seniors it means a class of their own.

Cadet teaching, a senior elective, takes place every second semester. The students are assigned to a teacher in the township, and they act as the teacher's aide for the semester. Once a week they meet at NC for a seminar session. The cadet teachers must complete a project, ranging from bulletin boards to helping a child catch up with the class. This project helps the would-be teachers towards their goal—experience.

"Experiences in Teaching" is also a strictly senior affair. In each of "their" classes, the participating seniors helped the teacher out in various ways.

Only a close friend would pantomime with the abandon Mrs. Keith shows in her nursery rhyme act on a retreat.

People are unique. This idea is the base of the Alternative Program. Personalized instruction, maximum use of community resources, and parental involvement are three main goals of this "fantastic" program.

During the semester, each student is expected to meet seven basic challenges. Volunteer Service is one of these, where students do anything from peer teaching to helping at old folks' homes. Creativity may involve creating poetry or pots. Practical skills means survival—from changing a tire to living off the land. Inquiry and Research means just that. Creating a new world government may be part of Futurism and Decision-Making, and Cognitive (academic) Skills are met in independent study and seminars. Courses range from marine biology to dance to backpacking. And last, but not least, is Adventure. This may vary from setting up a business to earn money for a trip, to scuba diving in the Keys, to a trip to Washington.

Family groups are also an integral part of the program. Each family is composed of a staff member and eight or nine students. This provides a setting for counseling, scheduling, and sharing ideas in an informal manner. Parents also meet in this format with teachers and students at least once a month, and are further included as resource people and community resources.

With visions of Florida and marine biology in their heads, the scuba diving class meets in the NC pool.

Preparing a salad at Bradford Woods becomes an unusual experience for Elaine Rappaport and Cindy Boyd.

In a casual class, Janet Oliver, Bruce Meir, Jim McDomough, Kevin—Clark and Gwen Baugh discuss a point.

On The Other Hand

As alternative education members prepare for a weekend retreat, their bus is an important part of their plans.

Games can still be fun, as Senior Susie Baker discovers playing with a Crossroads summer camp child.

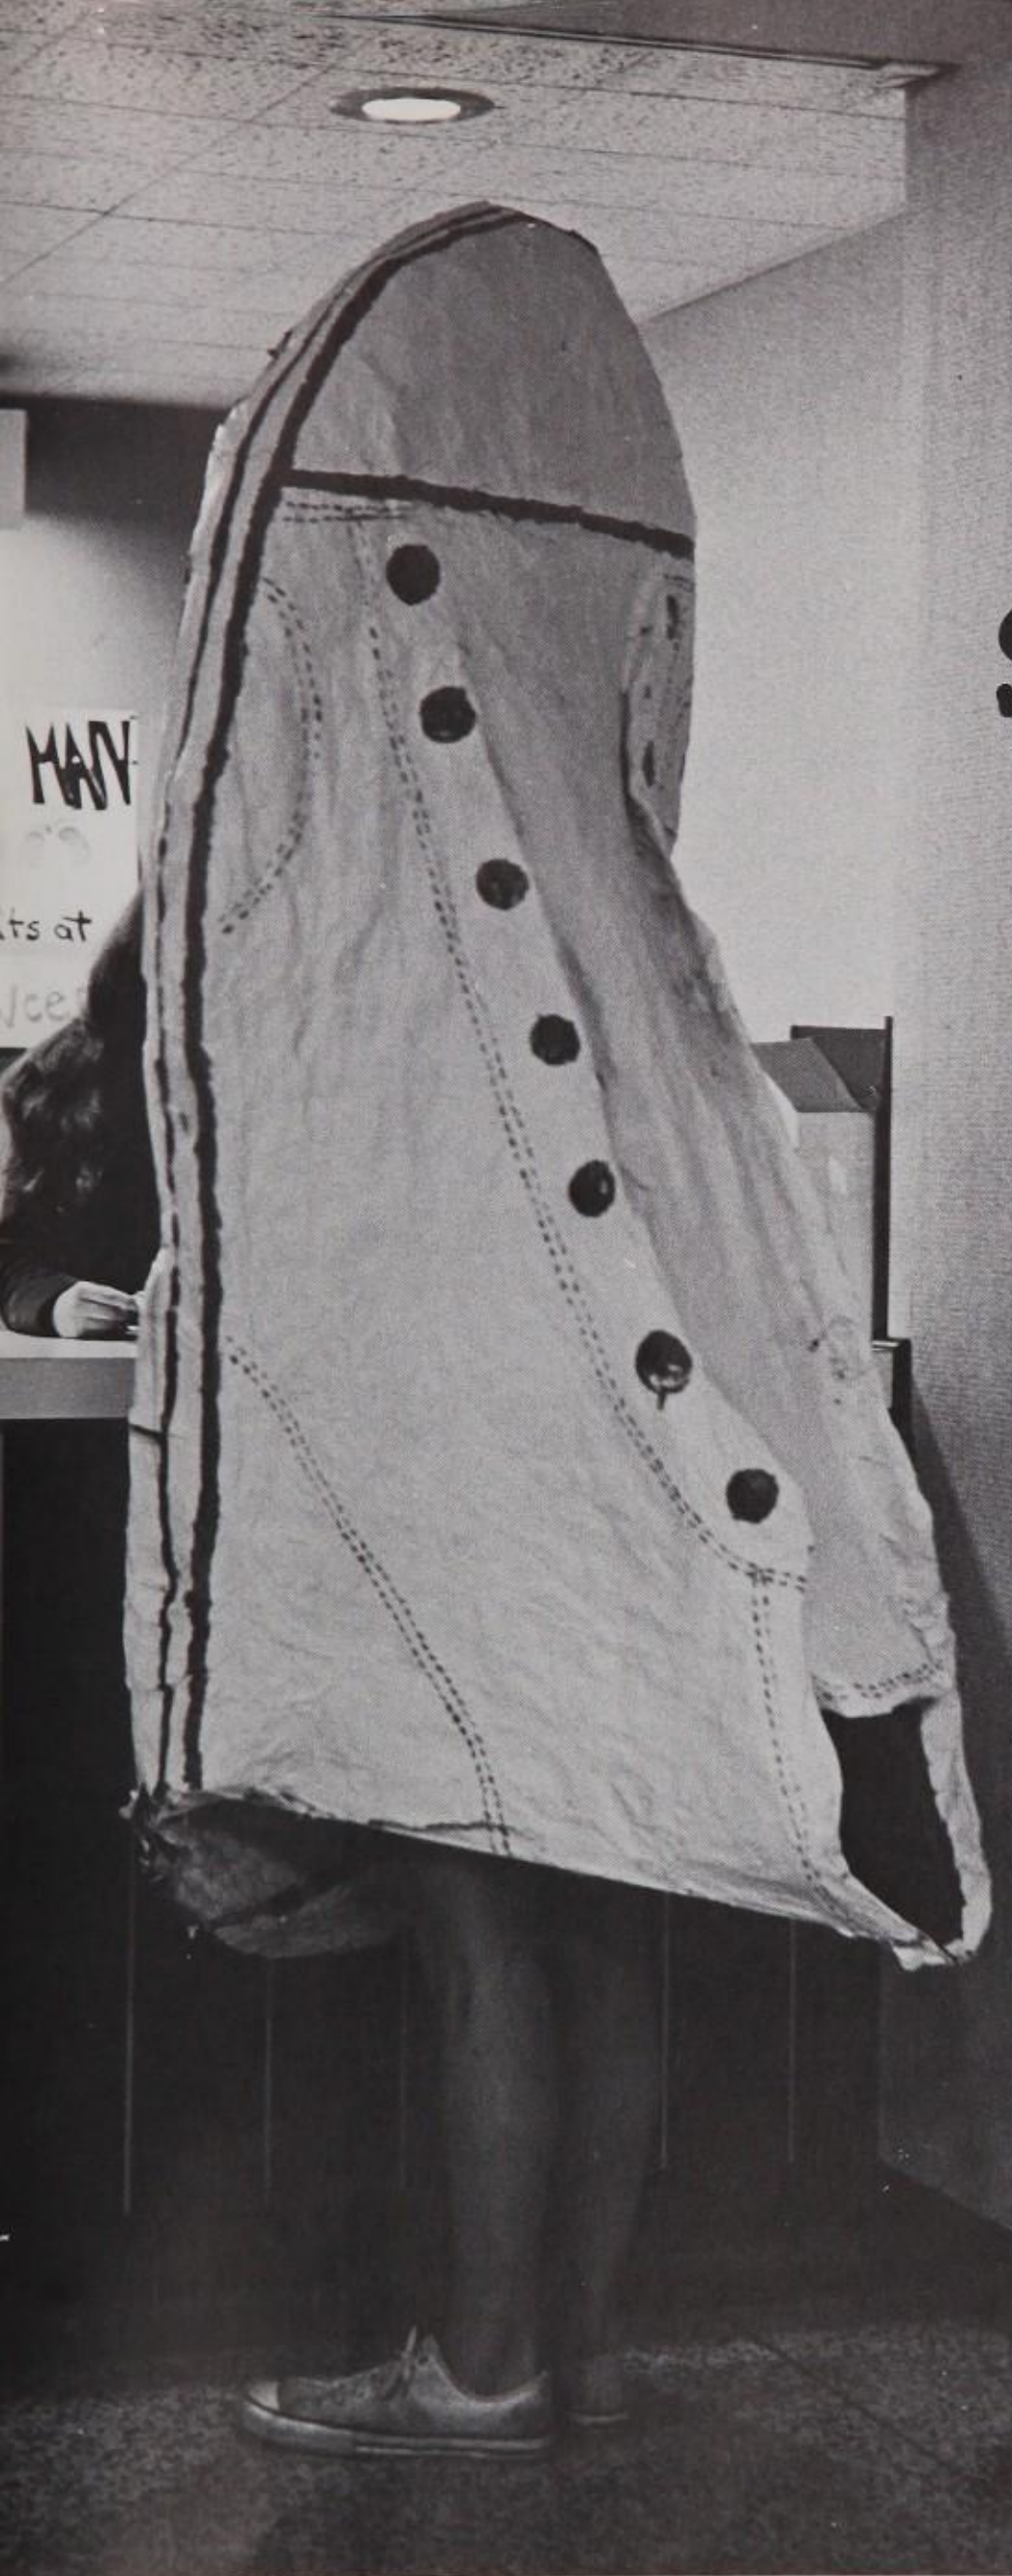

Eight hours of sleep, seven hours of school, five hours of work, four hours of studying, and three hours of eating? What do you do in your spare time?

Some students go and volunteer their time to other people. On occasion they help their parents for "brownie points," or a friend out of a bind just because he's a friend. Volunteers work at Crossroads, the Blind School and hospitals because they like helping other people, giving their friendship and making institutions a little happier. Other students spend energetic days earning money for the needy or ill. These money drives are popular whether they are Walkathons, Bikeathons, Swimathons-----Clapathons . . . or . . . Sleepathons . . .

Tennis shoes are worn on feet, but this gigantic specimen, worn by Senior John McQuiston, was used to advertise a Walkathon in the Student Center.

October days are great for bike rides, as Senior Cliff Broumand and companion discover on the Diabetes Bike-a-thon.

Spare Time?

Candy striping is a popular volunteer job. Seniors Carol Cislak and Karen Terry leave school for St. Vincent's.

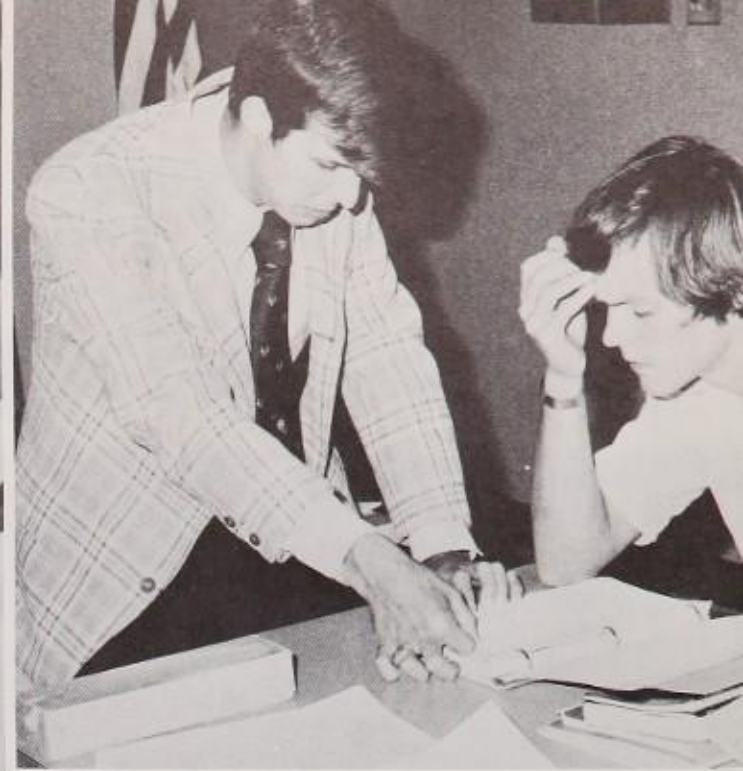

Togetherhness is shown by Lockets and Key Club members as they help with parking sticker distribution.

Lamb-like Cindy Refkin, senior, greets the small visitors to Santa's House at Christmas time.

President David Manning helps Treasurer Jim Clark organize and keep up with Key Club's finances.

Balloon-filling Key Clubbers Joe Dugdale, Kelly Queisser and David Manning are working at the "Wishing Well" project.

Some things come in threes, and at NC there are three service clubs. Key Club, Lockets and the Triangle Club all devote time and energy to helping others.

Key Club is best known by its annual Can Drive—whose goal is usually met with the aid of vigorous class rivalry. However, Key Club is much more active than just one big affair; between September and December they participated in 17 projects. A few were car-washes, floatmaking, the Walker Boys' Club Halloween party and a peanut sale.

Lockets is the female equivalent of Key Club. Their biggest event is the Swimathon, which netted $2,000 in 1974. This money was given to several charities, and some was used for the fees of a Lockets-sponsored Indian child. Other jobs included visiting convalescent homes, keeping a Memorial Book for the local American Cancer Society chapter and joining Key Club in Back-to-School Night guiding and Walk and Bike-a-Thons.

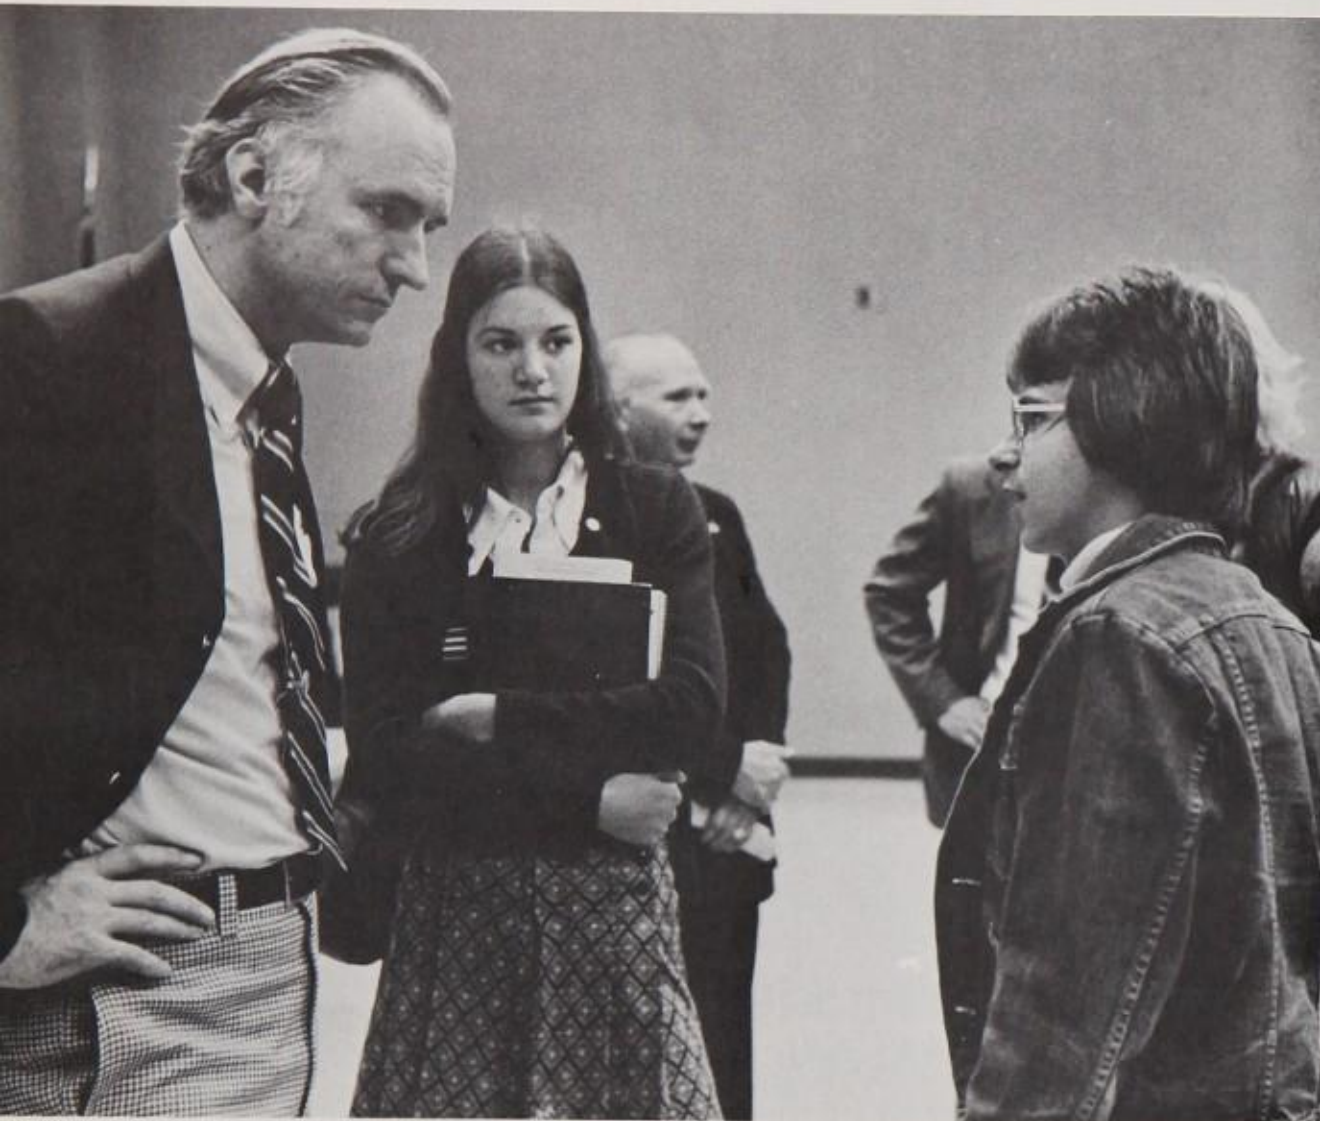

Threes and triangles are combined in the Triangle Club which links the parents, students and faculty. They put out a newsletter, donate money to intramurals, give art awards and help with dances. This year two new innovations were "Clonc's Coffees" and producing "Those Were the Daze."

"Directors" of the Class of '75 reunion, Monica Throgmartin and Kyle Henderson head the cast of "Those Were the Daze."

Senator Birch Bayh speaks to interested students of his future political hopes.

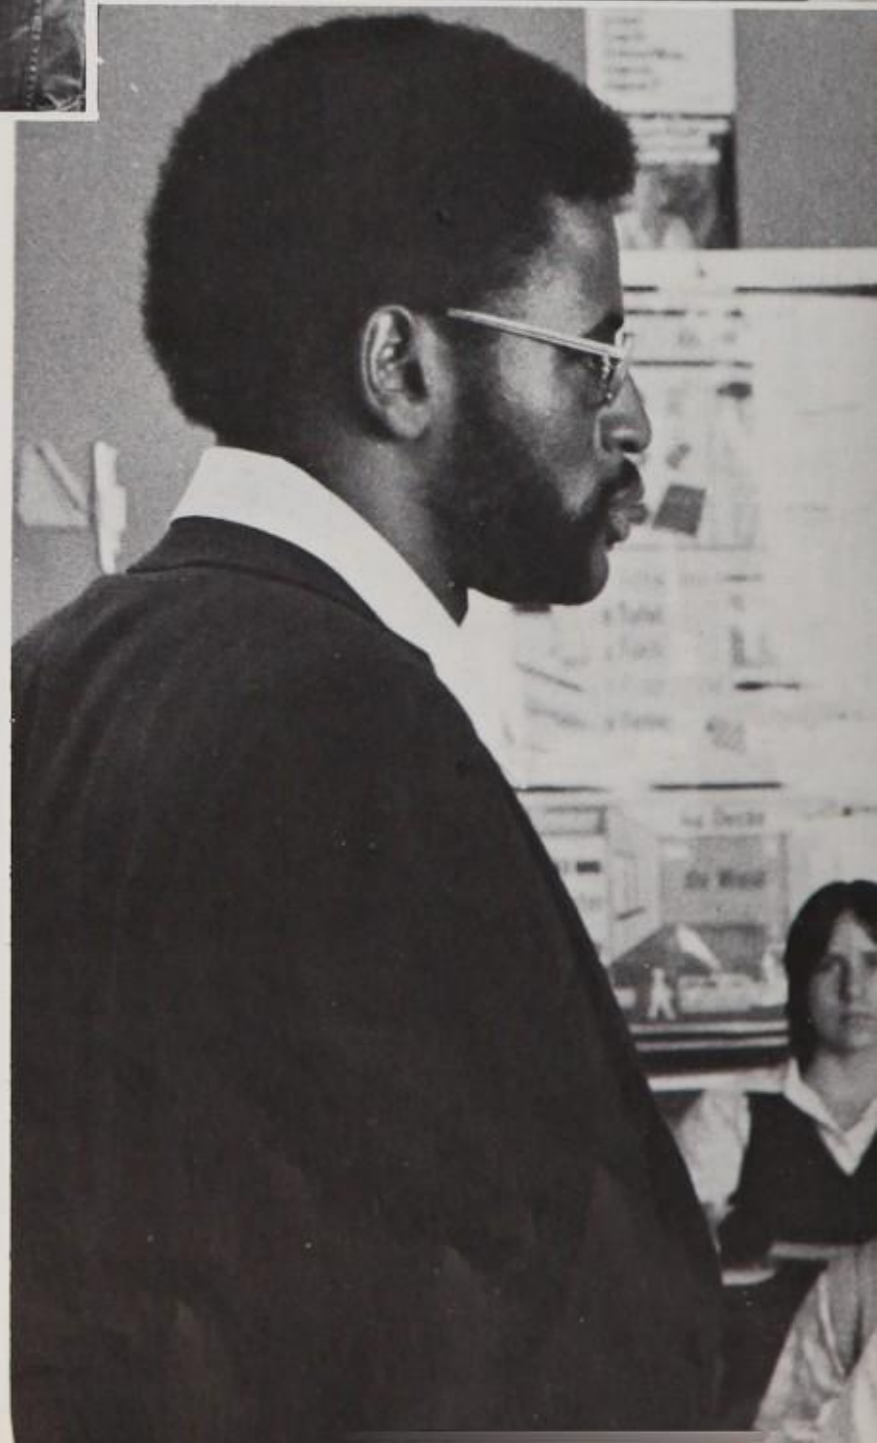

Congressman Bill Hudnut discusses a topic of his campaign in more detail with Kevin Marley and Jenny Wade.

She heard it from her sister who heard it from her boyfriend's cousin who heard it from his best friend who heard it from his father who shook hands with the mayor! The best way to learn something is first hand. You've just got to be there. That is what guest speakers and field trips are all about.

Everyone gets really excited when the teacher says there will be a field trip or a guest speaker. The first thought is that they'll get out of class for the day. Nevertheless the teacher manages to sneak some education in while all the students are off their guard. But kids tend to like first-hand learning better than book-learning anyway.

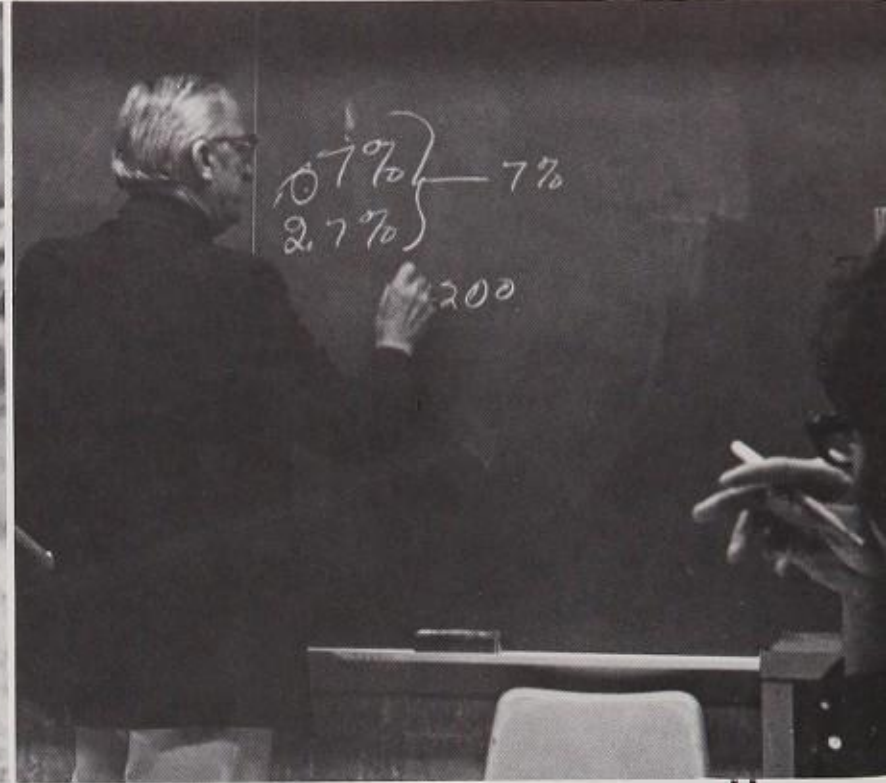

Mr. Raymond Burse, a Rhodes Scholar, offers advice to German students on taking advantage of scholarship programs.

Secretary-Treasurer of the state AFL-CIO, Max Wright defends the union's stand on wage increases during a senior economics class.

Tom Fencil helps out with the registration of voters at Wyandotte Elementary School.

History group reports are a part of living; Joni Chenoweth, Betsy Campbell, and Kathy Bardell know the feeling well.

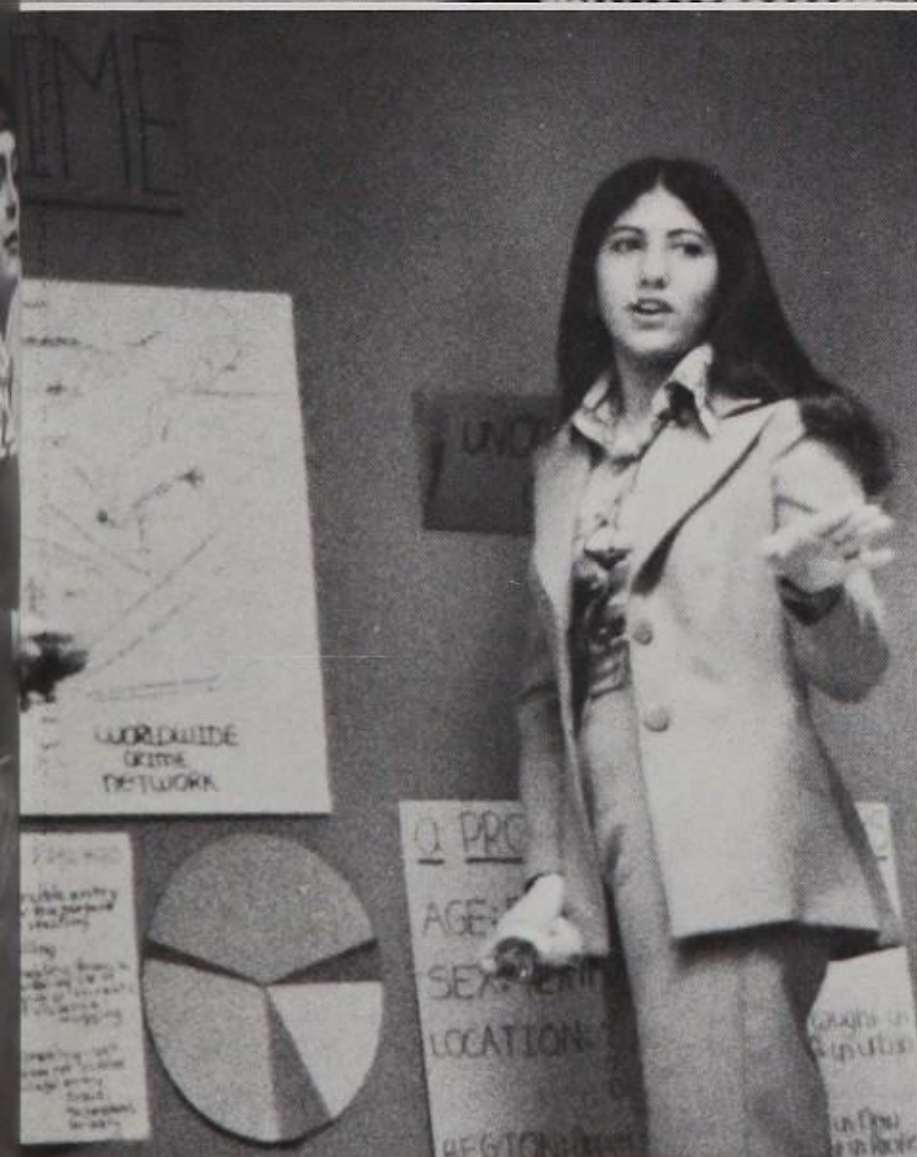

What's the Buzz?

Everything that happens today is history tomorrow. Daily local, national, and international happenings are referred to by students as current events. History class is the most logical place to discuss current events; but if the students are lucky enough, they might even get their math teacher off of the subject and on to current events.

One of the main reasons for studying history, so the teacher says, is for the students to be able to compare what happened two hundred years ago to what's happening today. The current events of the world affect the lives of students. In being part of the world, the student has a responsibility to know what is going on there.

Paula Hottinger lets her class in on what's happening in the nation.

Make It

Gambling with deadlines is a risky business for photographers John Tindall, Doug Blake and Mark Lea at tea time.

Mark Lea grabs for an important paper from his perch in Doug Blake's arms during a free moment.

A pin-up favorite of the darkroom, Mark Lea poses in his most popular disguise that of "Susie Cheerleader."

A chain reaction shows on the faces of Doug Blake and Mark Lea as Darby Dyar coaxes them from the elevator.

Next time you hear that innocuous little noise that means you are recorded on film, don't beat up the photographer. The poor guy has to cope with fires, paper shortages, hysterical editors, and weird assignments. He can only take so much!

The darkroom, C540, is the center of the chaos. An idea of the usual atmosphere is given by a sign reading, "Please shut the door or all the dark will leak out!"

Deadline weeks are the worst times to be a photographer, because he usually doesn't realize they are eminent until they've arrived. By then, with 975 prints to make, he is sixth in a line of six to use the darkroom.

It isn't ALL work to be a photographer. The darkroom is a superb place to turn a radio on and do some homework, or play a guitar . . .

And there's the annual release of imagination when the photographers' spread is due. The tension mounts, ideas explode, people rush around and the camera clicks.

There's something strange about this quartet of John Tindall and Mark Lea enjoying their hobby.

Typing up a storm, newspaper staff member Mike Kearns diligently finishes an article.

D-day often stands for Decision Day, June 6, 1944, when the Allied leaders decided to invade France. However, for the yearbook, Etchings in Thought, newspaper, News Bureau and graphic arts classes or staffs, D-day is the dreaded Deadline Day!

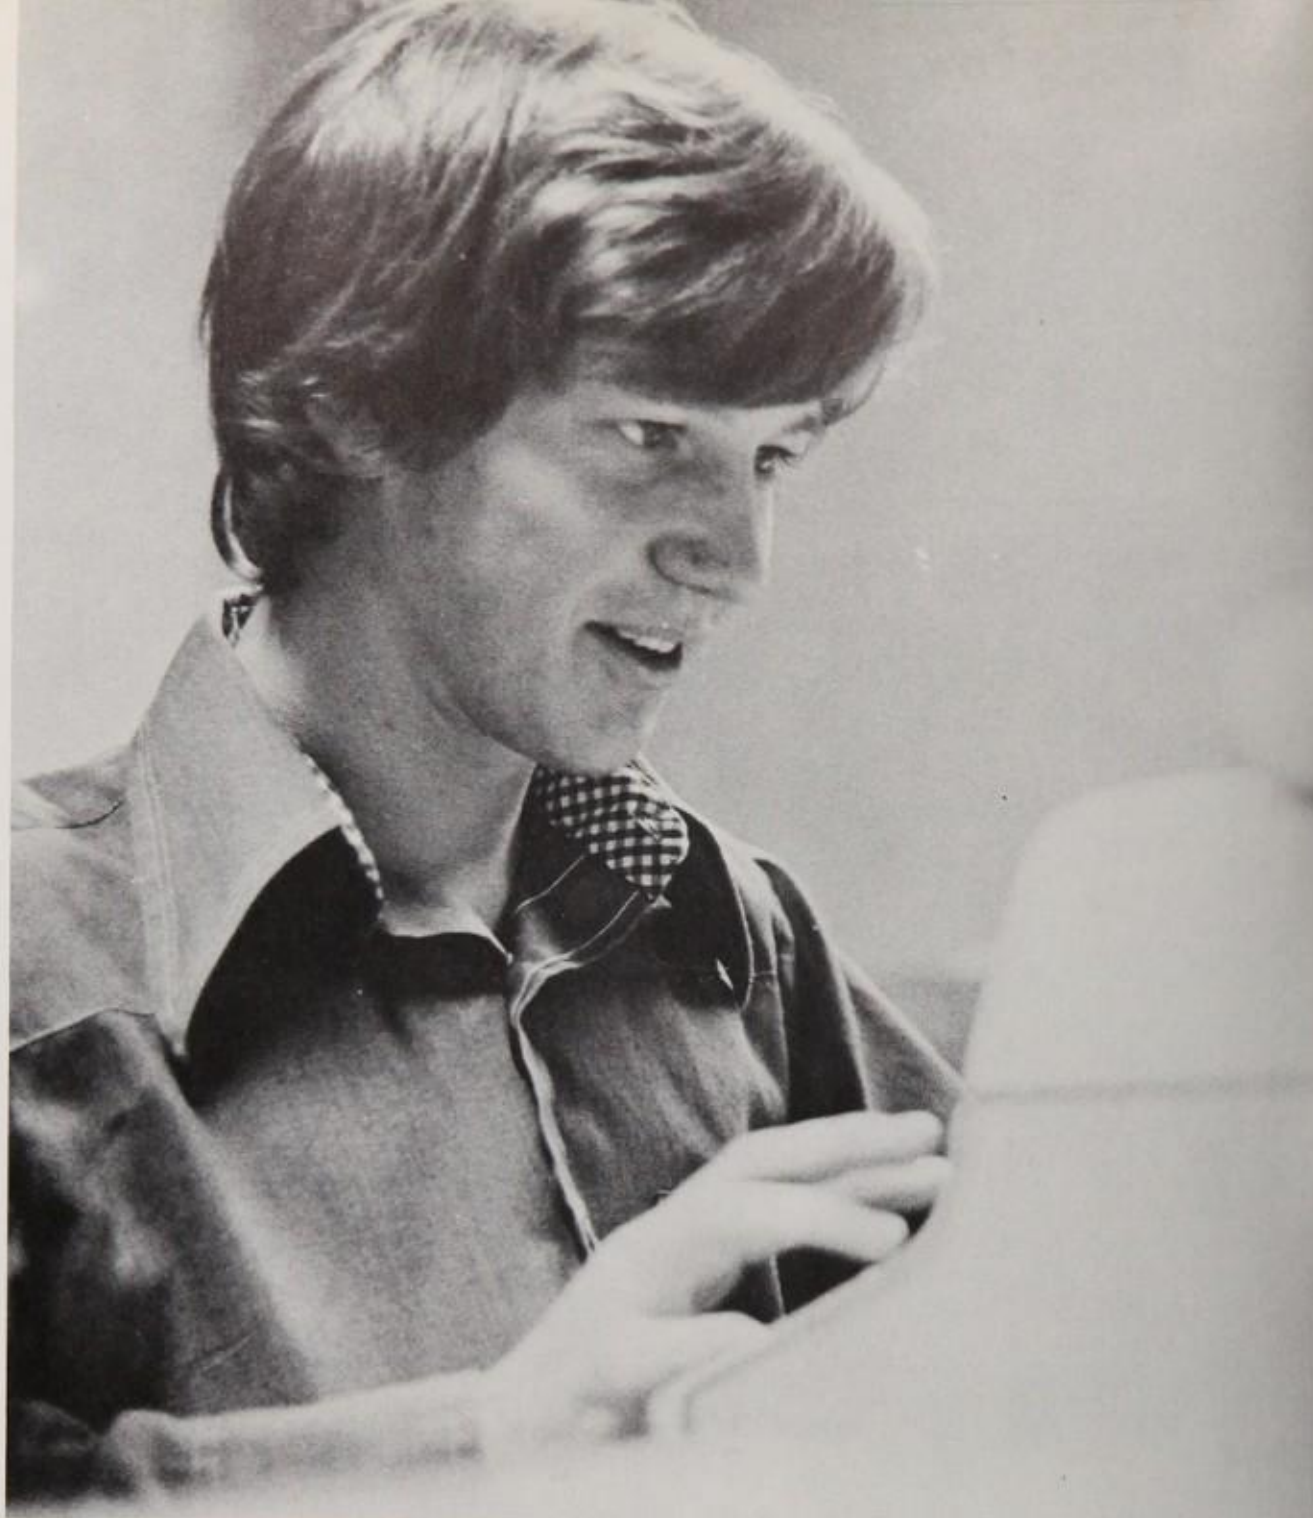

The yearbook is the result of 18 months of maddening, creative work. Deadlines are chaotic; editors sacrifice studies and sleep, and the entire staff has eating orgies. Bananas are popular.

Newspaper staff members have one week to meet deadlines. Obtaining photographs is their biggest problem. The News Bureau has an easier time writing for the local paper.

Known as the print shop, the graphic arts classes print the school paper, Student Handbook, Acknowledgement booklet and Etchings in Thought.

The Etchings in Thought staff have another deadline problem. They rarely have enough articles to compose the booklet!

Despite all their headaches and paints, the staffs survive D-day—and it changes into V(ictory)-day!

D-day!

Movements become almost mechanical as Becky Alford, Carolyn Mitchell and Melanie Shanner sort yearbook pictures.

Printing pieces of paper is one job of Charles Shoffner, Robert Harmon and Erwin Blech in the print shop.

These kids aren't just playing around. Since nearly all juniors have to read The Crucible, this class is making the best of it with a skit.

In the Name of Shakespeare

Talent! That's it . . . speaking English is a talent.

What in the name of Shakespeare do you mean?

Well, a person can speak English all of his life, and then some smart teacher comes along and tells him that he does it all wrong.

As far as the basics of English are concerned, talent is not necessarily involved. All that a student needs to do is understand grammar enough to write intelligently and have lots of time to read many books.

Yet when the student leaves the ordinary boundaries of the literature book and notebook paper, talent is a definite requirement. Term papers, skits and movies are some of the courses that this talent might pursue. Term papers allow the student to show his inner gift of throwing pages of words together. Skits and movies let the student display his acting skills and producing ability.

Movie critics, Bill Morgan, Joe Eber, Fred McFall, and Jeff Bolin, preview a movie that they made about St. Augustine.

Beth Goldberg shows Karen Larman a magazine article as the due date for their rough drafts draws near.

Notecards are essential to the organization of a term paper. Notes are being taken by Nancy Tishler at Nora Library.

The best way to learn is by experience which is exactly what Cindy Cohen is receiving by helping Dr. Scott with a patient.

Thump . . . thump . . . thump is the rhythm heard by Barbara Richards as she takes Beth Jacobs' blood pressure.

A really big complaint made by kids today is that school seems to have no purpose. It is sometimes hard to find a good reason for everything that is taught. There are two courses at the Career Center, however, that can see their goals in plain sight. These are the programs for Dental and Medical assistants.

A majority of the students that are in these courses are there because they are interested in pursuing a career in one of these health fields. The dental assistants learn the basics at the Career Center and then at various medical facilities throughout the city as do the medical assistants.

PERFORMING

EXPRESSION

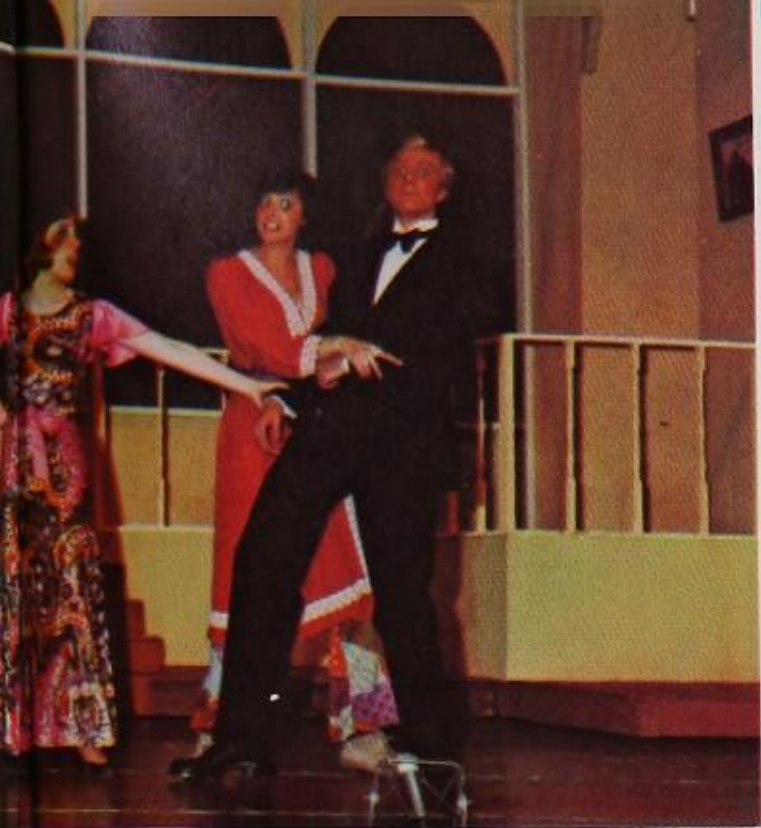

The art of persuasion is shown by Carol Shanks, Laura Milan, and Monica Throgmartin to Paul Laich in No No Nanette.

The show must go on—and it doesn't necessarily need to go on in NC! North Central groups are on stage all over. Self-expression stretches from our own auditorium to television audiences all over the state. Clowes Hall, Civic Theater, and even the Circle downtown have all played host to NC music and drama groups—out of school bounds.

Tradition seems to have some hold in the performances. Year in and year out, the season begins with flowers and courages and shoes dyed to match the dresses. And it usually ends with tears and kisses after the last show. But in any and all cases—there's always plenty of lights, cameras, and action!

As one of the two head drum majors, Senior Alan Ray leads the Marching Band in pre-game and halftime shows.

Hours of practice have given first and second violinists Jeff Forbes and Sue Funk excellent style and technique.

The baby elephant at the Indianapolis Zoo offers to shake hands with members of a NC choir, the Descants.

Go blow your horn! is what someone must have told Senior Dave Tetrick prior to this Marching Band performance.

Starting by the middle of August, the Panther Marching Band practices twice a week, as Bruce Woloshin could tell you.

Striking a formal position learned at a drum major camp last summer, Rich Friman and Alan Ray pose on the back lawn.

The Ants Go Marching

The band goes marching ten by ten, eleven by eleven, and even twelve by twelve as it insures lots of music and entertainment to spectators at football games. But it isn't the only group at NC. Pep band, which plays at basketball games; stage band, which always performs in Junior Spec; and the B and C bands which also perform on various occasions are all facets of being in the band.

But what's the Symphonic Wind Ensemble? Well, it's a group of about fifty-nine of NC's best musicians. Usually referred to as "A" band, Wind Ensemble plays concerts at several elementary schools, as well as those at junior high level. They are also a part of the North Central Winter Pops Concert held annually, as are all the bands.

Bands, bands, and more bands! Throughout all the year, from the winter concert to the mid-August band practices, the band goes marching.

Tuba players always carry lots of weight wherever they play. They also must always sit in the back.

High and evenly-kicked legs are the aim of the girls in the newly-formed pom-pom squad which performs with Marching Band.

A mid-August Marching Band practice has the brass section tuned up and in position for the next instructions.

Complex fingering on the clarinet is done while simultaneously reading music by John Quick and Cindy Raymond.

Showing the proper position and frame of mind for viola playing is Junior Debbie Ellis.

With reflections of his fellow orchestra members in his glasses, Alan Ray renders a tune from his bassoon.

Between 9:30 and 10:30 every school day, the sounds of strings can be heard. Here the orchestra poses on stage.

Cello player Kyle Henderson accompanies the rest of the orchestra in rehearsals for the Christmas program.

'Babe In Arms'

Orchestra '75 was an almost totally rookie team. After losing thirty-one members through graduation, it was working hard toward maturity. However, five members of the returning "varsity team" became members of all-state orchestra, so there was strength in many areas.

The orchestra again carried a busy schedule with the usual programs and concerts, but had a special honor in being invited to perform at Clowes Hall on March 2. The usual convos, the Children's Concert, the annual Evening Concert on January 14, the Christmas Concert and the State Contest filled up the year.

For a rookie team, the orchestra had a great year. And next year promises to be even better!

Concentration can be seen in the faces of all orchestra members, especially those of Jeff Forbes and Sue Funk.

An intense and enthusiastic conductor, Mr. Dennis is one of the people that make NC's orchestra the very best.

The Wide World of Entertainment is always in evidence around choirs. As it says in "The Entertainer," "we're here just to entertain!" and that's what Counterpoints and Descants are all about.

Counterpoints is one group that demands many hours of concentrated practice during and after school to maintain the high standard it seeks. As the top choir, it strives for perfection in tonal quality, rhythm, and blend. It performs for audiences of thousands as well as for small groups. But putting the hard work aside, a special feeling of love and caring can be found among Counterpoints members, a closeness like a big family which words can't describe. So musical perfection, close friendships, and harmony in both are represented in Counterpoints.

Bringing miles of smiles and singing to numerous groups around the city, the Descants performed at many locations: Monument Circle, Fort Benjamin Harrison, and the Riviera Club. Traditions continued in Descants, both in the light blue chiffon dresses and the friendship-prayer circle prior to each show. "Descants Love" helped unite the choir, and fun was had by all throughout parties, outings, and even a hayride with Music Men.

Apart from the many intensive after school rehearsals, Counterpoints members take time out for a party.

Enjoying a ride on the Zoo Train, Descants presidents Joan Kennedy and Carol Murphy "kick up their heels."

Filled with relief after a show, Jill Cameron, Cindy Bethel, and Janet Sebald enjoy companionship.

Bringing joy to others through singing is the aim of Girls' Ensemble. The group, attired in pink full-skirted dresses, performed for numerous organizations such as nursing homes, churches, Christmas-on-the-Circle, and Woodstock Country Club. A performance not to be forgotten was given at the Indiana National Bank when, following the finale of an excellent show, everyone exited into a small clothes closet.

The excesses of male comradeship including the unique (?) diversion of passing footballs during rehearsals were all parts of Music Men '75. Brotherhood and friendship came about through the year, as members strove for intensity, harmony and good dynamics. All in all, Music Men were a special group with a really special sound.

Ring-A-Ding Ding?

Members of Bell Choir may or may not be "ding-a-lings," but they certainly are the features that make up one of NC's most unique choirs. In the choir's fourteenth year, members did all their own arrangements and choreography, including selections from "Hello Dolly" and "South Pacific." Members also learned the unequalled skill of playing bells and dancing the "cha-cha" at the same time!

Two other choirs, Allegroes and Crescendos, had an exciting year. Shows throughout the community highlighted the year, with the biggest "rush" coming around Christmas time. Allegroes continued traditions of years past with their sleeveless dresses. They appeared in "Those Were The Daze" with "Flash, Bang, Wallop." Crescendos, with short-sleeved yellow dresses, used both piano and guitar in their shows, including such songs as "Morning Has Broken," "All You Have To Do Is Dream," and "Bye Bye."

Ring those chimes, Bell Choir members Kathy Summers, Denise Leonard, and Darcy Rosener.

Singing comes first, then choreography. Accents Nancy Easley, Libby Thompson, Clare Henkel, and Sally Knowles sing.

Kicklines, the Charleston, and other fancy dancelines highlighted the choreography of three more unusual choirs as they strove for new images and greater sound.

Accents were often announced as "The Sunshine Choir" because of the girls' sunny yellow dresses. They all knew the meaning of "the show must go on!" after one show went on a half hour late while members struggled to find the building. Their favorites included a Beatles medley and "Tavern of Living People."

If you ever hear what sounds like a horse stampede in the music wing, never fear, for it's only Debtone's learning a new tap routine. The girls brought back "the good old days" with a 1930's Goldiggers Medley and their own version of Glen Miller's "In the Mood." Under the direction of Dwight "Twinkle Toes" Edwards, the girls performed often in their unique short dresses.

The twenty-eight girls in Madrigals continued the tradition of the second oldest girls' performing choir. Many of their shows included "Fiddler on the Roof," "God Bless the Beasts and the Children," and "God Bless the Child."

They say practice makes perfect, so the beautiful human Christmas tree as well as an African song showed much practice by training choir members. Girls' Concert Choir, Girls' Chorale, Northernaires and A Cappella all trained students in the fine arts of breathing, support, and dancing.

Singing takes concentration—as these A Cappella-Northernaires members could tell you.

Weeping princes added hilarity to the children's play as fairies attempted to console them.

Courtroom scenes were a large part of Sing Ho For A Prince, which also featured comedy, singing, and dancing.

Patient therapy in David and Lisa included Phil Chenette, Ann Norton, John Tindall, and Cindy Bethel.

Song & Dance & Act

Princes, a princess, and a variety of good and bad fairies visited the auditorium for the children's play, Sing Ho For A Prince. The musical story of Sleeping Beauty attracted a younger generation audience through performances by Elaine Rappaport as the head fairy, Treakle, and Ivan Stillerman as a fat, dumb fairy named Thrustle-bump.

A more sensitive play, produced Feb. 19-21, was the dramatically challenging David and Lisa. Set in a school for children with emotional and family problems, the play showed how the characters, John Tindall as David and Ann Norton as Lisa, could support and help each other. Cleanne Reynolds and Bob Lee as David's parents led the supporting cast in this serious portrayal of a sensitive problem.

Also on stage, starting the second semester, was a new and unique program of dance. The voluntary program, which took place on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons, offered a variety of dance opportunities, ranging from jazz and tap to ballet. Students were invited to practice and learn in a group situation.

A serious and challenging drama, David and Lisa, starred Joseph Carvin and John Tindall.

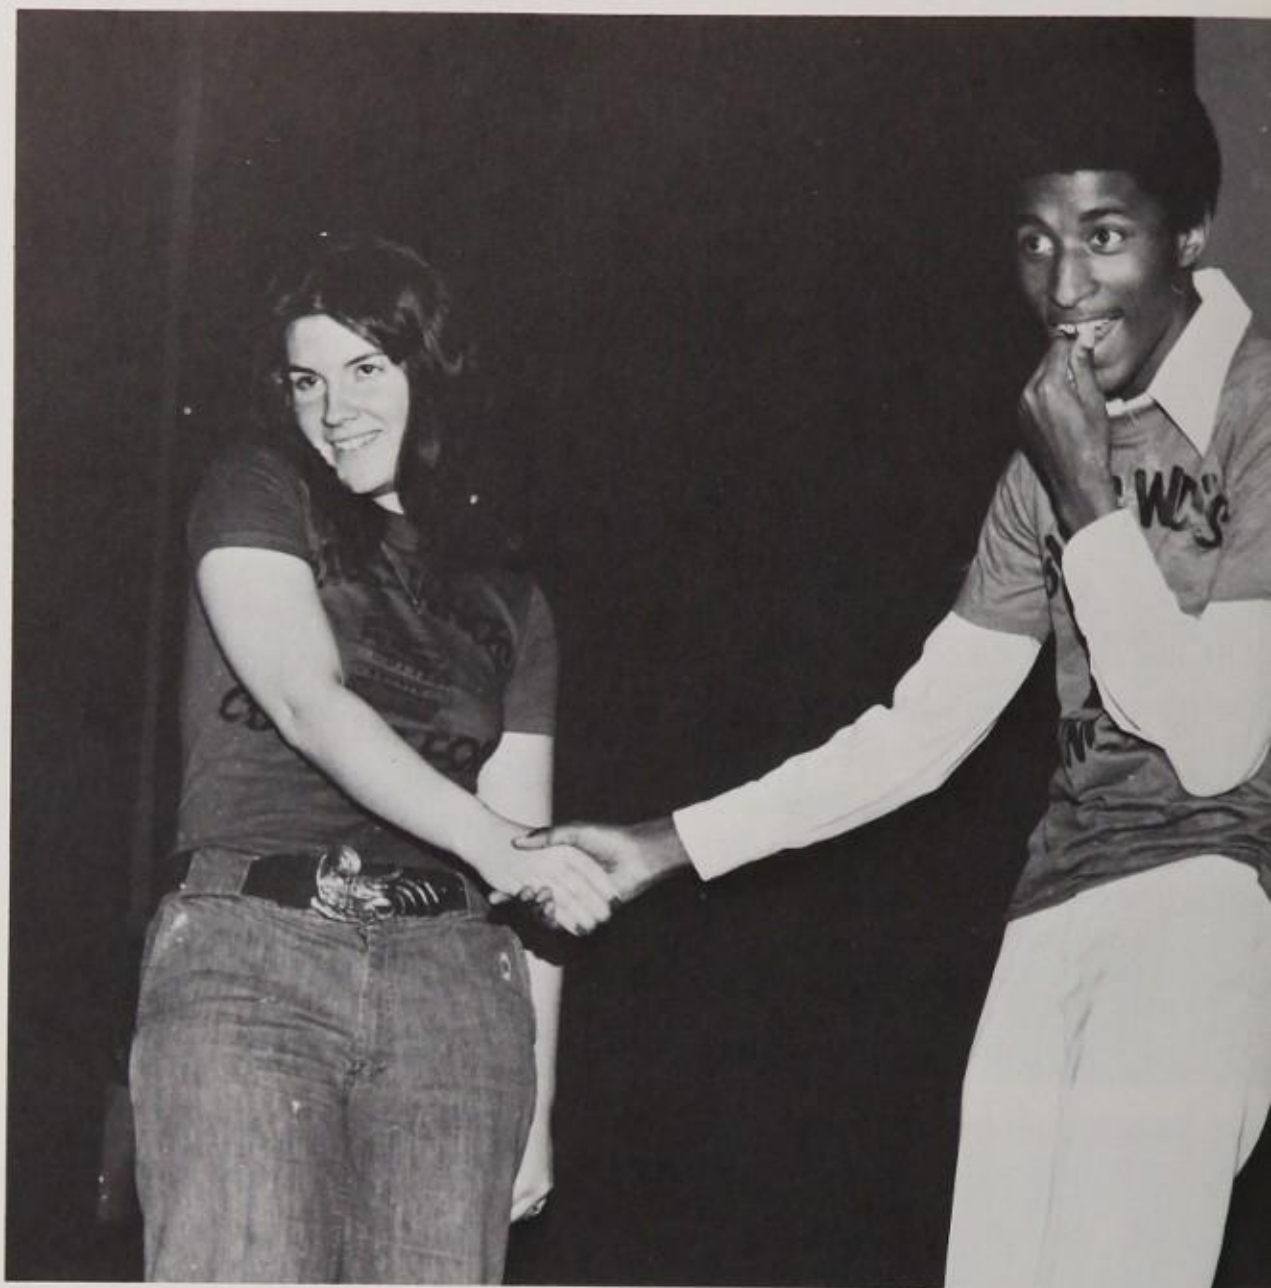

Dance class comes in many forms! Junior Vicki Neuman holds a traditional ballet position in the voluntary class.

Rock on, Libby Thompson! Dancing is also a great way to keep in shape while enjoying yourself.

Cowboys and cowgirls from "Best of the West" show the end of an exciting dance routine.

Junior Spectacular '76 became a new and unique show, thanks to the efforts of students from every class. Each of the four acts, chosen for originality and audience appeal, added a special touch to the show.

"Guess Who's Coming For Peanut Butter" featured a romance between two babies in a hospital ward. A cowboy saga, "Best of the West," was an old-time women's lib uprising. "Think About Your Troubles," the smallest act with only nine people, encouraged everyone to do just that. The world of James "Bomb" returned to the stage with "Diamonds Last A Long, Long Time."

Spec accomplished its major purpose, that of raising money for the Junior Class, but to participants it meant close friendships and lots of fun!

"Master of Ceremonies" Craig Dorste admonishes audiences to "Think About Your Troubles."

Love at last sight is displayed between Ann Norton and Walt Underwood at the end of the fall play, Bell, Book, and Candle.

"I want to be happy" warbles Peg Stamper as Nanette to her uncle, played and sung by Marc Much.

Tea for 2 / Me for U

"A ticket is a dollar
So grab her by the collar
And take her to the fa-all play!"

So said the British Chipmunks in one of the more startling and original morning announcements. The plug was, of course, for the fall play, Bell, Book, and Candle.

The bewitching qualities of love were the themes of the play, which starred Ann Norton as Gillian Halroyd. Other leads were Walt Underwood as Shep Henderson, Elaine Rappaport and Fred Kaseff as Gillian's aunt and warlock brother, and Joe Carvin as Stanley Redlitch.

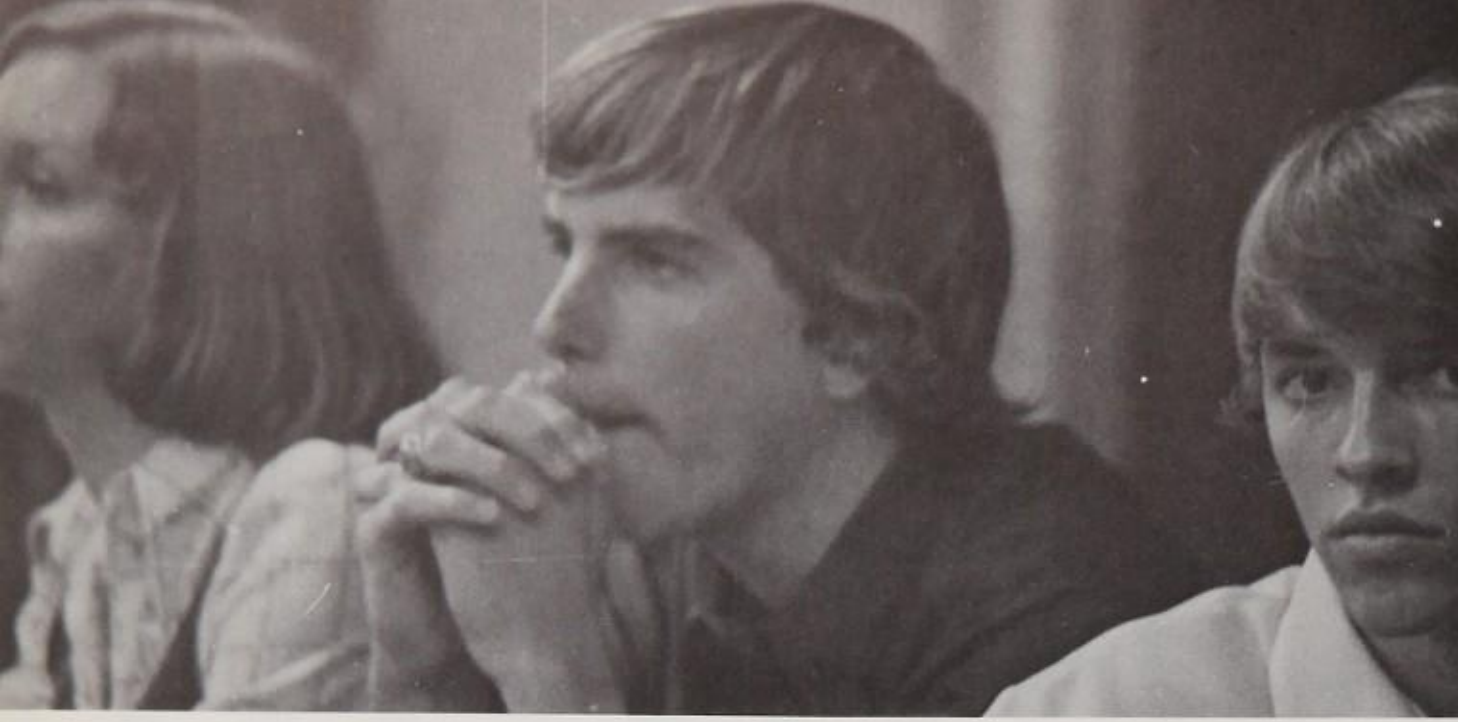

Another announcement: "Come shuffle to the beat of tap dancing and enjoy Tea for Two once again!"

The Roaring Twenties hit hard last spring when the Music Department proudly presented No No Nanette, a rollicking musical jam-packed full of rip-roaring music.

The musical bonanza featured Peg Stamper in the title role of Nanette. Marc Much, Susie Vea, Cathy Pisarski, and Paul Laich rounded out the cast, along with Monica Throgmartin, Carol Shanks, Laura Milan, and Kyle Henderson.

It is hoped that No No Nanette finally made everybody HAPPY!

"The sea is calling me" sings Paul Laich as he explains "The Call of the Sea" to the girls' chorus line.

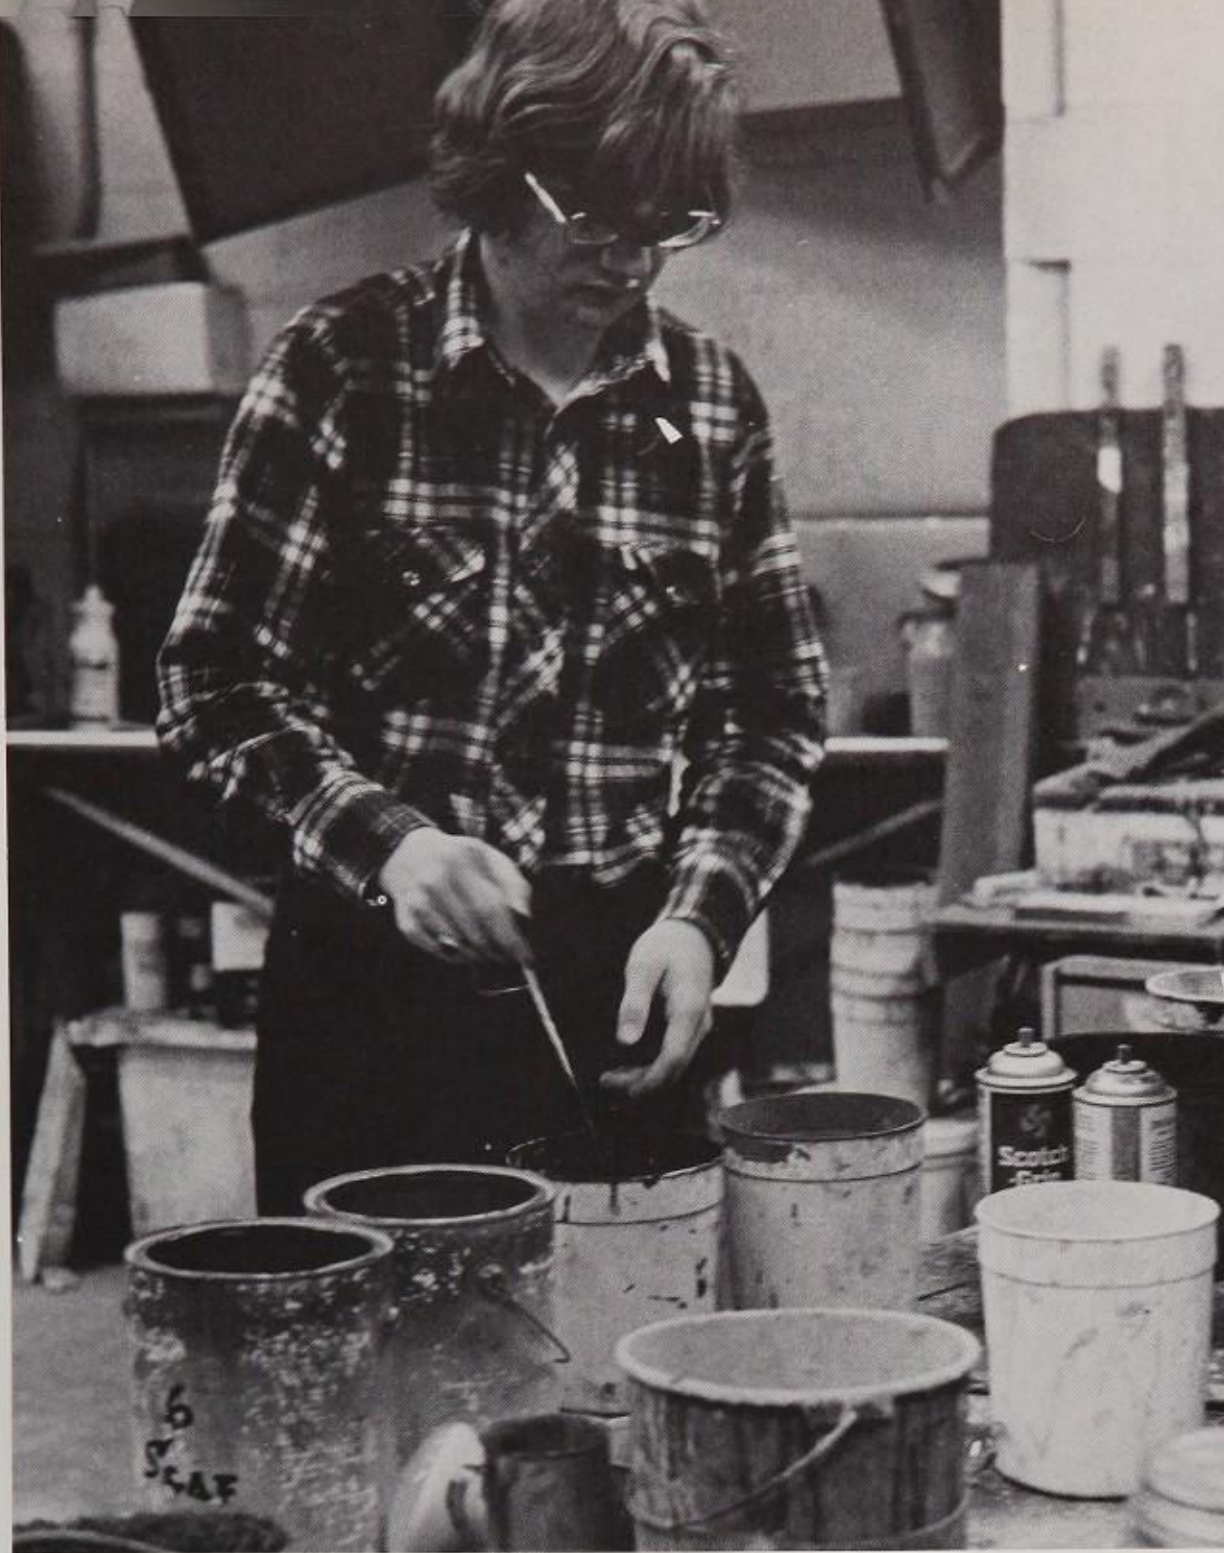

Concentration is spelled out on the faces of Peppy Mitchell, Mike Miles, and Tom Murihead as the three listen in at a stage meeting.

Reading and selecting scripts for Rep Theater's six plays gives members Fred Kaseff and Hal McGee a chance for practice.

"Punching out" is a familiar motion for members of the Stage Crew. Dave Adler accumulates hours toward membership in Thespians.

Have you ever tried to fill an entire room with popcorn? Or put on a puppet show? Maybe dropped balloons on fellow actors? Or even considered trying to run backstage operations on an NC theater production? If you have, then you're undoubtedly a member of one or all of Stage Crew, Reperatory Theater, or Thespians.

Creativity was the name of the game as Stage Crew, with almost 150 members, ran all the shows, designed lighting, painted scenery, and carefully constructed sets.

Genius "flowed" in Reperatory Theater as The Clown, written by Rep member Betsy Manifold, was presented along with five other children's and adults' plays. Rep members also handled Costuming and Make-up.

Parties and invitations to other Thespian troops to attend NC productions were some new projects of Thespian Troop 1851. Headed by Ivan Stillerman, they also ran their annual initiation.

All in all, the stage was a busy place. Who knows which NC talent will become a legend in his own time?

Here Steve Van Frank, member of Stage Crew, mixes colors for painting scenery.

Stage VP Peppy Mitchell and Mr. Lord discuss the fall play, Bell, Book, and Candle.

At break of day, wearing hair curlers or shaving cream, missing an eyelash or a button here or there, toting pillows, throat spray, and teddy bears, members of the NFL team stumble into the bus which will take them to their contest. Victory will be won with words.

Speech and debate members put all their efforts into travelling to "away" meets and mainly just have a great time getting to know all sorts of people. Variety is exemplified in the speech aspect as there are many divisions from which to choose. From the easier poetry to the more challenging extemporaneous speaking, students may choose their own type of battle.

Political reform, in the form of campaign financing, is the debate topic for this year. Debating helps develop quick mental thinking and teaches how to get out of some mystifying situations.

As in football teams, NFL members also have their fun. Halloween parties in the fall, roller skating, picnics and many more activities constitute the busy year of a NFL member. Mr. Fruits, the team's coach, predicts a successful for his NFL team. Good Luck Team!

Masterpiece

Our planet, the stars, and the entire universe were somehow intricately created by some imaginative being. The task was great, but the job was well done. The NC art students were creators in much the same way. They used their own experiences, imagination, and feelings to CREATE.

Students choose their own field in which to express themselves. Art is a general class covering many subjects, though focusing on drawing and painting. Weaving deals with textiles and looms to make rugs and needlepoint. Many techniques working with metals are learned in jewelry. Sculpture and ceramics classes are concerned with expression in three-dimensional figures.

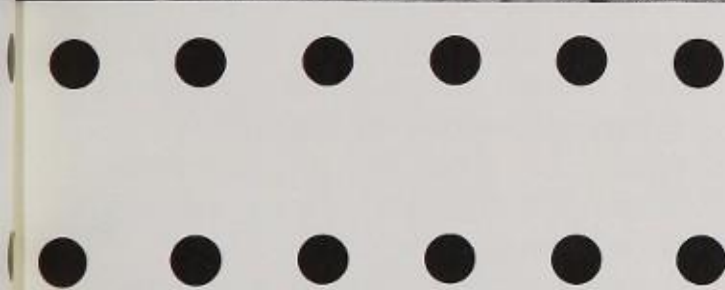

Everyone has a chance to display his or her masterpiece in the Fine Arts Festival in the spring.

Look for people clip-clopping down halls in a new clothing style—ceramic shoes. These assignments add variety to art.

As the finishing touches go on the picture, Leonard Law smiles. Completing a work of art always makes students happy.

Skills are definitely present at NC. Mrs. Hughes demonstrates a perfect example of the potter's wheel technique.

With more experience, students devote their time to using the potter's wheel. Even a simple cup takes patient hands.

Small wonder why NC people don't often see too many others outside of school. The NC boundaries are spread out—and so, students don't always have the chance to get past the acquaintance stage of the game.

The community offerings do help though. Performances are at Clowes. Visit the Art Museum. Spend some money at Glendale or Nora or Broad Ripple or Castleton or Lafayette Square. Play some tennis. Have a picnic at Eagle Creek.

Just do SOMETHING! And who knows—maybe a familiar face or two will be found along the way.

Recognition and community service are important parts of N.C.'s JROTC program. Cadets have the opportunity to advance through enlisted and officer ranks as far as their abilities will take them. Normally, they go up the enlisted grades the first year or two and the officer ranks during the junior and senior years.

As part of their citizenship aspects of JROTC, cadets are encouraged to become involved in community action projects. This year cadets were active in supporting the efforts of an Army Reserve Headquarters in paying for several blood cleansing machines for a local hospital.

New cadets are on their way up, as they are promoted to Private First Class by Capt. Chuck Owens.

Some of us jokingly (?) had our doubts as to whether NC would or would not have a yearbook this year—but we've made it!

TGATBS! Ugly! Oh my heart! HF of the month. And bananas.—All of which means much to the dor drocers. The terrific enthusiasm of Miss Marion Breeden and Colonel Charles Savedge got the book off to a roaring start. Deadlines brought tempers and panic, but all faced problems with much cooperation. Unending thanks.

While hot chocolate helped, most nerves were calmed by our advisor, Rod Cord and Mr. Dick Kennard of Newsfoto. Our thanks and friendship to them. We also would like to thank Jim Root who designed the cover. Final thanks go to our foreign correspondents and to families who gave so much at d-line times. Fantastic!

TGATBS.

THANKS GUYS!

YES

Wipe out! As Mary Miller well knows, nobody can ski without an occasional tumble in the snow.

While waiting to give her half time performance, Donna Kibbe gives an appreciated cheer for the team.

Good ole Emily Dickinson is the subject of an English project by Betsy Beck and Sally Harvey.

The music wing produces some WEIRD characters! Kay Warren uses the iron as a key chain and Bruce Woloshin "carts" his junk.

NC's not just chairs, desks, blackboards, and grades—not just academics. To many, NC can become more: discussion, debate, performance, and real people—learning for the sake of growing. School becomes more than just "school."

It's not only a question of Government 1, Algebra 3, and English 6. School becomes that special crowd, a small class, and maybe even that pang of school spirit you feel at the very last basketball game of the year. It's crying on graduation night and thinking that you just might miss NC a bit more than you might have thought.

The walls of NC don't confine all of the activities going on within. School isn't really so binding because academic knowledge isn't all that you've learned these twelve years. Twelve years for this? And the answer—YES!

Indians on the horizon? No, it's a gym class working on some target practice.

12 YEARS FOR THIS!

4000 PIECES

PUZZLE

Second semester means starting all over again with the new reps for President Paul Wang.

"Can I have a cherry on top too?" asks Liz Munger at the Locketts' Ice Cream Social.

Caught in the act with crackers in hand are Joe Zurschmiede, Chris Sego and Jenny Lichtenauer.

Starring in "Bell, Book and Candle" is Ann Norton supported by Joe Carvin.

When I first walked within the walls of NC, I thought, well, here comes number 423619 ready for processing. That big building that looked so much like a factory now seems so different. All those physical boundaries—A through H halls, numbered classrooms, rowed desks—aren't really significant.

Just because this is a big school doesn't mean that nobody gets any attention. With lots of people, it just becomes easier to have a variety of classes. The more the merrier they always say.

Who cares about school boundaries? Four thousand people just mean four thousand more possibilities for—?

WE'RE OFF!

On your mark; get set; GO! Senior Libby Thompson gives the signal for the trike race to begin—and they're off!

Well, we're almost through! We started out as a bunch of strangers from all corners of town, who got thrown into some big school called North Central.

At the very first, the massive differences seemed to hold us back within ourselves. Starting with backgrounds, religion, intelligence, and personalities, and then moving on down even to dress styles, a million differences suggested possible conflicts.

But by the end of the year (or years), physical differences didn't seem to matter much anymore, even though they still were very much real.

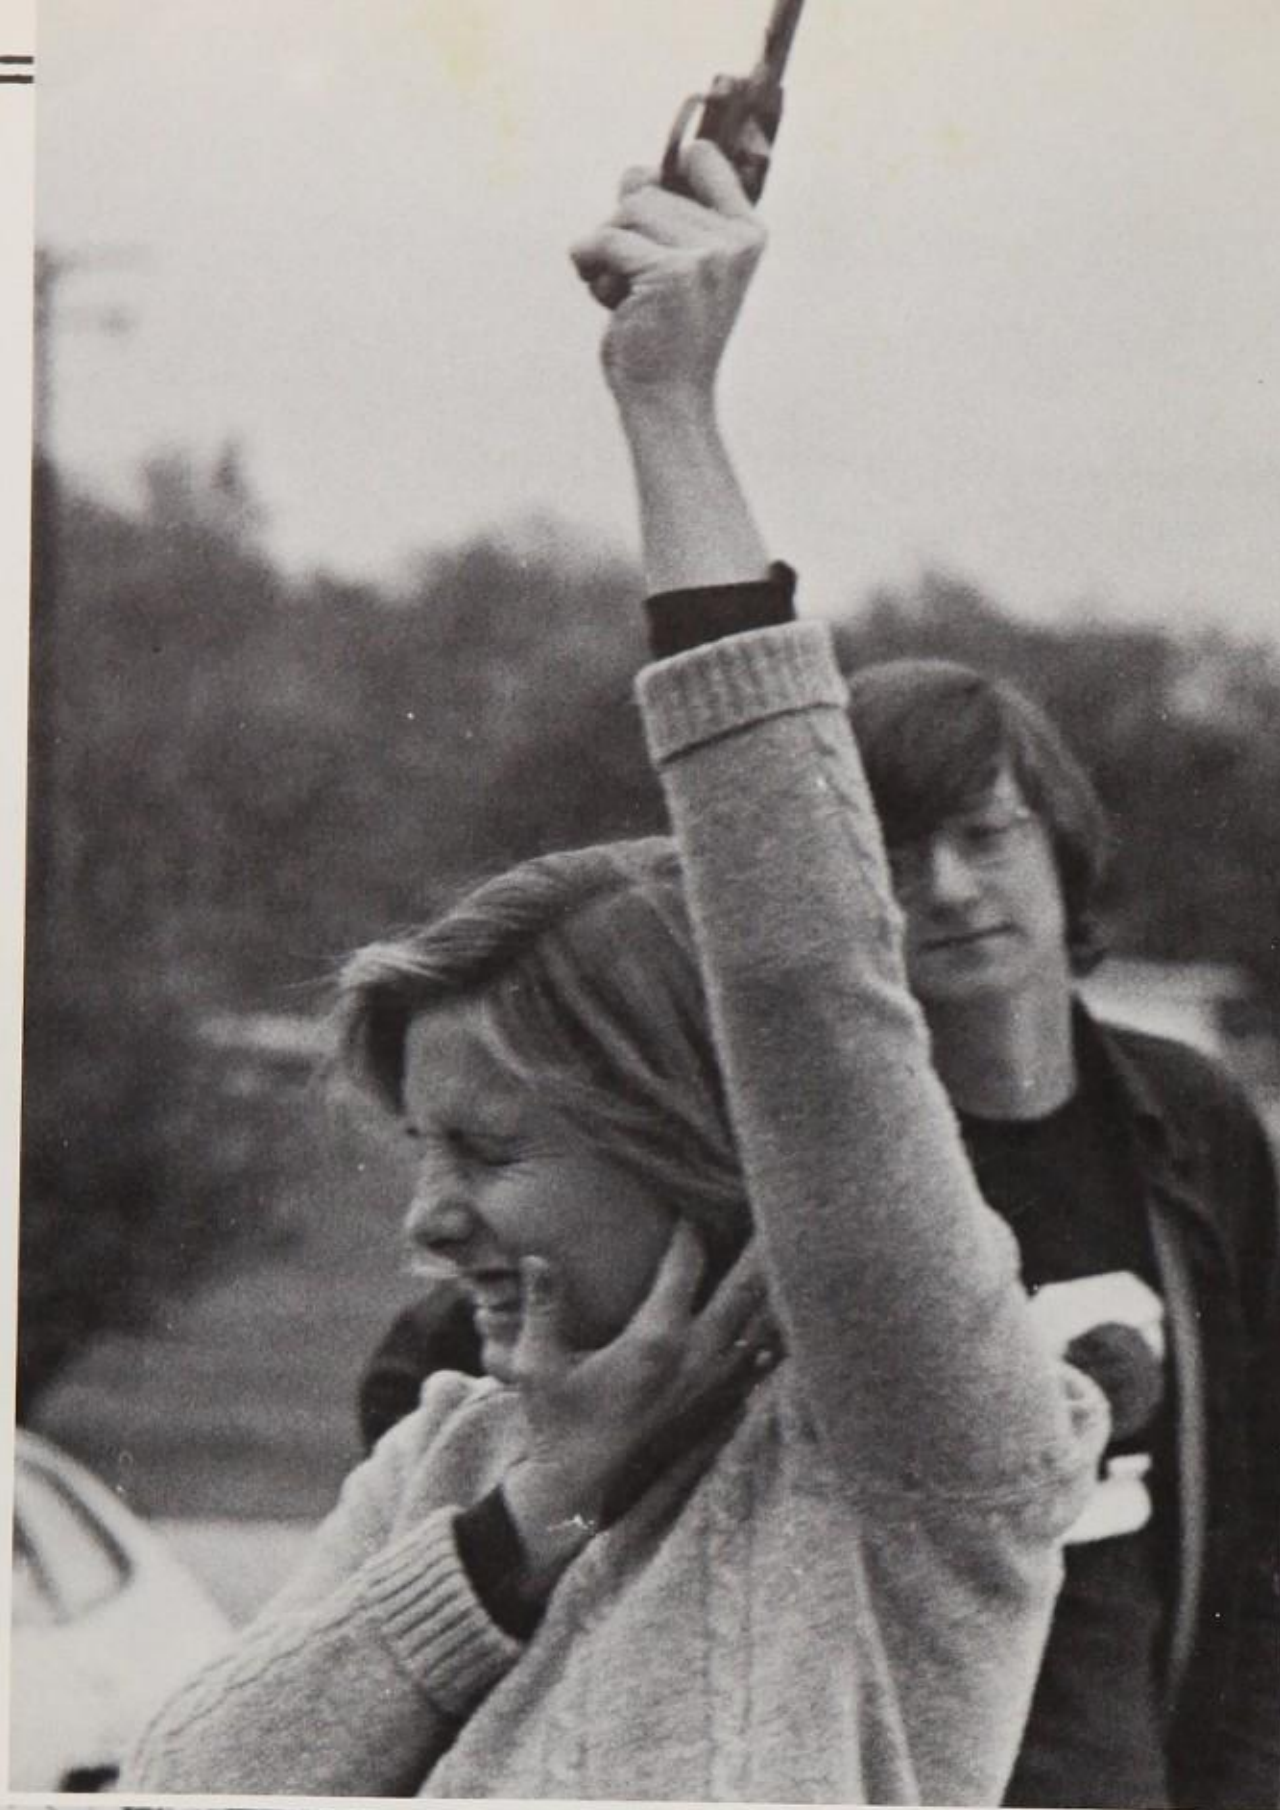

All the friends we made of some of those strange, new faces; all the classes, afternoons, and weekends we spent together; and just all the good times we had—these are the things we'll remember.

The obstacles we started out with have been smashed, broken, shattered. Other things just plainly overwhelmed them.

We started out bounded, but now we're breaking away. Those boundaries were boundless after all. We have overcome!

So, look out world, 'cause here we come.

No—Mike Pickett's not doing push-ups; instead he's up for some sledding.
